Beautiful Foreign Birds.

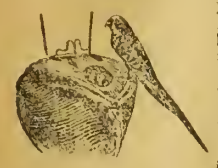
Over 1,000 birds from clean, well-kept aviaries, from 2/6 pair; six pairs, 12/-; price list post free.—Miss Rosey, Rosemary House, Eastbourne.



I wager £50 that I have sold more wired husks for breeding Budgerigars than any other person living. Now, has any man, however "wholesale" he may be, got enough British pluck to accept; because, if not, he must take a back seat; 18 years ago I introduced husks to the fan cying public; many rivals have sprung up and disappeared during that time, but my "Improved Secure" husks remain unbeaten, and up to date competition and comparison always increases their popularity. Kindly send postcard for press opinions and pamphlet entitled "Budgerigar Breeding," post free, it will interest you, and don't purchase husks until you have read it. Remember this: Eighteen years' practical breeding experience beats two years of paper puff. I have bred thousands of Budgerigars, but I don't keep a shop. My speciality is "breeding husks" and I keep a large stock the year round. Once used always used; one quality, the best; the common 2/- variety I never use or sell. In husk wiring I lead, and follow who can. Selected "Improved Secure" husks are 4/6 doz.; smaller quantities 5d. each. Few joiner-made Cockatiel nest boxes 1/6 each.—Harper, Husk Importer, Dudley Road, Wolverhampton.

LEITH O.S.

An interesting event took place in the Liberal Club, Hope-street, on February 15th, the occasion being the holding of a table show and judging competitions, the first, we believe, of its kind in the East of Scotland. The society provided six classes, which received an entry of about 50. Mr. J. F. Dewar kindly judged, after which all the members present tried their hand as judges. One could not help but think that each was judging a section at the Palace Jubilee Show, and that their future judging career depended on the decisions they gave. And what with the scratching of Scotch Fancy cage bottoms, we think some of their fingers must have been a bit sore after their efforts. The winners were: P. West, 63 points; W. Finnis, 53; and J. Baxter, 48. Each received a share of the entry fees, which was largely increased by the generosity of one of our members. The function helped greatly to bring the members out in force. The society has now a membership of 48, and as this is its jubilee year, the members invite all fanciers to join them.

SCOT. FCY.: 1, 2, Henry. NOR.: 1, 3, Alcorn; 2, 4, Procter. BORD. FCY.: 1, 6, Todd; 2, 3, 5, Brown; 4, West. BRIT.: 1, 4, Brown; 2, Finnie; 3, Allan; 5, Sayers; 6, Baxter. MULES: 1, Finnie; 2, 3, Barclay; 4, Sayers; 5, Brown. LIZ.: 1, 2, Ross.—GEO. BROWN, Hon. Sec.

YORKSHIRE COUNTY B.B. & M.C.

Meeting held in the Market Tavern, Bradford, on Feb. 20, the President (Mr. A. Cowgill) in the chair. Messrs. H. Hill and F. Armstrong (Halifax) were elected to honorary membership. Mr. P. Jowett kindly promised a large oil painting for champion section, and two small paintings for novice section. The prize-winners: Champion section: D. Duncan (Harrogate) 1, T. H. Inman (Bradford) 2, T. Boyle (York) 3, P. Mason 4 (the painting kindly given by Mr. Jowett). CAGE BIRDS prizes for amateurs: T. H. Inman 1, B. H. Wilson (Bramley) 2, J. Isherwood (Wakefield), 3. Novice section: W. R. Myers wins pair of paintings given for novices. These prizes will be given at the great amalgamated gathering to be held March 6th, in Market Tavern Bradford. A dinner is being provided for the convenience of outside fanciers, and we specially invite members and intending members wishing to be present to send on their names. Dinner on tables at 4 p.m., 1s. 6d. per head. My committee respectfully invite all fanciers who have been exhibiting in British Bird or Hybrid sections, and who are not members, to send in their names at once. Annual subscription, 2s. 6d per annum.—W. R. MYERS, hon. secretary.

ROUND THE STALLS AT THE "JUBILEE" PALACE SHOW.

Some Attractive Displays.

Owing to the pressure of that matter which had to be held over by reason of the many pages of necessity devoted to the recent "Jubilee" Crystal Palace Show, we were, to our regret, last week compelled to defer publication of the following account of the many attractive stalls which were to be seen at the "Great Glass House."

Messrs. Russell's stall attracted much attention, and was well filled with splendid examples of the photographer's art, among which were many excellent views of the Great Show itself, including the Judge's Lunch, various judges at work, and also certain of the birds, one of them the famous "White Canary." In picture postcard form these sold well. Fanciers can obtain copies on application to "the Studio," Crystal Palace, London, price 3d. each.

An old friend, Mr. Marx, known to fanciers of all kinds as "the Rubber Stamp King," took up his usual position, and seemed to be doing a thriving business. He is the smartest and cheapest man in his line that we know.

"Pannassina," a medicinal preparation for cage birds of all kinds, sold by Mr. W. J. Hammond (19, Anstey-road, Coldharbour-lane, London, S.E.) has acquired a high reputation as a preventative and cure of asthma, wheezing, colds, loss of voice, diarrhœa, and as a winter and moulting tonic. The stall was visited by shoals of fanciers eager to see "what it was like," and a great quantity of "Pannassina" was purchased by discerning birdymen, who seemed to be of the opinion it was just the thing they had been wanting.

Mr. J. W. Ramsden had on view a selection of his famous peppers, the pnre Tasteless, and the finest Natal (hot), together with examples of the medals, and teapots and other attractive plated ware he offers for competition among birds moulted on "R. P." Mr. Ramsden said that his peppers for the 1909 season promised to be the best he had shipped during the whole of his career, which should be good news for the vast number of bird-keepers who pin their faith to his noted "feeds." He anticipates doing a record business, and advises fanciers to place their orders early, as the supply may quite likely prove somewhat short.

A most ingenious combination show cage and travelling case shown by the inventor, that well-known exhibitor of Foreign birds, Mr. O. Millsum, of Regent-street, Swindon, attracted one's attention and admiration. It is a neat and eminently practical idea, and well carried into effect, the cage and case (or "outer shell," as it really is) being very light, although exceedingly strong. Mr. Millsum's arrangement should be a boon to anyone who wishes to exhibit one bird, or British or Foreign birds whose styles of cages do not readily lend themselves to hampers. To such we can recommend this invention.

There was quite a rush for the stall of Messrs. Fox Bros. (of 26, Lndgate-hill, London, E.C.), everybody seeming to be anxious to look at and sample the latest thing in Egg Foods. Judging by the comments we heard made by some of our oldest fanciers and breeders, the verdict was entirely favourable; and these "old hands" can be depended upon to recognise a good thing when they see it. Certainly the analysis as to the feeding value of the food, and the guarantees given by its inventors, speak for themselves. We heard, too, many remarks passed concerning the ease with which it can be prepared for use, far different to the old "egg and bread" method. Messrs. Fox Bros.' representative told us that they had done a tremendous business. Their "Egg and Biscuit Food" is evidently here to stay. It should be seen by all fanciers.

Facing the entrance, just inside the show, Messrs. James Carter and Co., of 237, High Holborn, London, W.C., had a splendid stall of high-class seeds. Carter's seeds (whether for birds, or for the garden or the farm) enjoy an enviable reputation for uniformity of quality and value. The name "Carter" has come to be known as standing for the highest grade of goods it is possible to obtain, and the firm have long enjoyed the distinction of being "the King's seedsmen." We were much impressed with the mixtures for Canaries, Finches, etc., on view at their stall, as well as with the various samples of canary, summer rape, hemp, maw, teazle, sunflower, etc., all being splendid quality, full-kernelled seeds, cleaned to perfection. This firm's Parrot mixture, too, is a most judicious and excellent blend. Readers should ask for Carter's seeds at their corn merchant's, and give them a trial.

Near the sales office was to be found the extensive stall of Mr. C. Roehl (400, Edgware-road, London, W.). It was simply packed from end to end with a splendid selection of every imaginable appliance connected with the keeping and breeding of Roller Canaries, as well as for bird-rooms and aviaries generally. All the latest things adopted by the famous breeders of Germany could be seen here, Mr. Roehl being a large importer of both goods and birds. His strain of Rollers is a noted one, and has produced many big winners. One of his birds at this show was claimed for £5, and before the show closed double that amount was offered for it, and refused by the original purchaser. Besides appliances, Mr. Roehl had many Roller Canaries on his stall for sale, while a Queck's Bird Organ (for which he is sole agent) attracted everyone's attention as it "led the chorus," so to speak, of the birds. Mr Roehl's fine illustrated catalogue is well worthy of perusal. He expressed himself as highly satisfied with the business he had done at the show.

The stall of that well-known cage-maker, Mr. R. A. Newley (24, Stockwell-green, London, S.W.), can truthfully be described as one of the sights of the show. It occupied considerable floor-space, and we question whether a better or more tastefully arranged display of cages has ever been seen at any exhibition. It was worthy of the record "Jubilee" Show, and drew the admiration of everyone. The cages themselves were simply perfection, and quite staggered some of the provincial fanciers, who admitted to us that they had never before seen any like them. Mr. Newley is an artist in cage-making. What is more, he has original and practical ideas. What is more, he has original and practical ideas, which are embodied in his cages, while for finish and workmanship they cannot be excelled. We were not surprised when Mr. Newley told us that he had hooked enough orders at the show to keep him busy for many months to come, for the prices are as low as the quality is high. His cages have secured 34 gold, silver and bronze medals for excellence of workmanship and design. Mr. Newley has made a special study of breeding cages, all of which he sends out completely fitted with nest-pans, etc., ready for immediate use. His special "Mule-breeding Cage" is a good example, and embodies many splendid points. It is 36 in. long by 16 in. high by 10½ in. wide, fitted with punched bar removable fronts, two sliding divisions for dividing cage into three compartments. Divisions are partly wired for feeding and pairing; by reversing the divisions they form a blank slide. Removable perches, three egg troughs, three water vessels, two seed boxes, two nest pans, linings and wire hangers. Distempered green inside and varnished black outside. The price is only 12s. 6d. for the whole. Mr. Newley has single breeders as low as 3s. 9d. (Yorks.), up to 6s. 6d., and double breeders from 8s. 6d. to 15s. 6d., all these being high-class goods. We recommend readers to obtain a copy of Mr. Newley's price list, which gives details of many cages and a host of appliances.

Messrs. Hyde and Co. are a firm of wide fame as makers of seed-mixtures and foods for all kinds of pet birds, and they had a fine selection of their goods tastefully displayed on their stall, at which we noted a steady stream of callers and buyers. Hyde's Æsthetic Seeds for song birds, their Shell Gravel, and their Parrot Food are sold at almost every seed-shop throughout the country, and their merits have secured for them a very wide circle of users. The goods of this firm are distinguished by the high quality offered at a most reasonable price, all the different seeds used in their composition being specially selected and cleaned.

Messrs. Trower and Co. (442, Caledonian-road, London, N.) had an exceptionally well-stocked stand facing the entrance to the show, and experienced a very busy time of it indeed, Mr. Trower informing us that the firm's sales and bookings constituted, like the show itself, an easy record. There seemed always a crowd of fanciers inspecting the goods on view whenever we were by—especially on the Saturday. Mr. Trower prides himself on catering for the exact wants of the fancier, and, truly, he had a splendid lot of specialities, seeds, soft foods, and appliances on view. The display of seeds was remarkable both for the grand quality and the great variety of kinds shown. From canary seed down to monkey nuts (for the "talkers") everything is stocked. Then there were the soft foods—the noted "Cesto" for delicate insectivorous birds, and "Softilo" for Thrushes, etc.—to say nothing of bird medicines and a multitude of useful appliances. Last, but not least, the prices were extremely moderate. Messrs. Trower and Co. will send a price list to any applicant mentioning CAGE BIRDS; they have agents in most towns, too.

Quite one of the most artistically conceived stalls was the erection of Messrs. Sissons Bros. and Co., Ltd., of Hull. Their exhibit in connection with Hall's Sanitary Washable Distemper for use on aviaries, bird-rooms, and bird cages attracted great attention. A very smart young assistant was in charge courteously explaining the particular merits of the "outside quality" of distemper, which it appears was to be specially insisted on. This distemper ensures perfect cleanliness and sanitary conditions, and one coating only will effectually destroy all insect life and septic fever germs. Full particulars, with sample tin and shade sheet will be sent free on application to Sissons Bros., Ltd., Hull, mentioning CAGE BIRDS as the source of information.

LONDON AND PROVINCIAL O.S.

A pair show was held at "The Raglan," Aldersgate-street, on February 18th. The entry was up to 49 pairs, and included some of the best breeding pairs in London. Messrs. J. Hodder's Plainhead Norwich, Lazarus' Crests, and Picard's Yorkshires in the champion section, and Messrs. Bellinger's Norwich, and Couzens' Yorkshires in the novice section were a treat to see. Muling and Hybrid pairs were shown in the pink of condition by Messrs. Mortlock and Hawes. An interesting feature of the show was the meeting in friendly rivalry of Messrs. Dobson and Ramsden in the A.O.V. class. "Dobby" put down a couple of pairs of wonderful Cinnamons, while J. W. R. relied upon a sweet pair of Cinnamon ticked Border Fancies to do battle for him. Mr. T. Heath judged.

NOR. P.H. (7): 1, Hodder, worth a long journey to see; 2, Mrs. J. E. Graves; 3, Richardson. YORKS.: 1, Picard, lovely wedgey yellow cock and buff hen, matched to perfection; 2, 3, Tringham, wanted a tubbing. CREST (5): 1, Lazarus, wonderful pair of birds; 2, Horton, another grand pair; 3, Dobson. A.O.V. (8): 1, Dobson, Cinn.; 2, Ramsden, beautiful pair of Cinn. ticked Borders; 3, Dobson, Cinn. Mr. F. J. Green's Lancashires, entered in this class, were not present, their owner wiring to say he was prevented from coming up. MULING PAIRS: Mr. G. Mortlock took all the honours in this class, and deserved them, although very creditable exhibits were staged by Messrs. Richardson, R. J. Pretty, and others. NOVICE NOR. (7): 1, 2, 3, Bellinger, with the produce of these pairs Mr. B. is practically certain of elevation to champion section in the near future. NOVICE YORKS. (4): 1, 2, Couzens, washed and staged in approved "old hand" style, or perhaps No. 3, 4, Gilbert, would have stood higher. A.O.V.: 1, Hawes, lovely Goldfinch cock, Bullie hen, congratulated by all; 2, Anson, nice Crests. The president, G. Crabb, Esq., read out the names of medal winners, which were as follows:—1, silver (for best in Classes 1 and 2), J. Hodder; 2, bronze (second best), Mr. Picard; 3, silver (best in Classes 3, 4, and 5), Lazarus; 4, bronze (second best), Mortlock; 5, silver (best in Classes 6, 7 and 8), G. H. Couzens; 6, bronze (second best), H. J. Hawes. Mr. T. Heath remarked upon the exhibits which came under his notice, congratulating the winners, and pointing out to the lazy ones the utter futility of sending birds to shows unwashed, emphasising the fact that with a wash some of the cardless birds would have changed places with the winners. The society are arranging a programme of events for the ensuing year, which will, it is hoped, be the means of drawing the members "out of their shells," and of infusing more life into the mouthly meetings.—H. E. TRINGHAM, Hon. Sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Adjourned annual general meeting, January 24th. In the unavoidable absence of Mr. A. C. Burn, through illness, Mr. A. W. Curtis was voted to the chair. Messrs. J. A. Chard, R. T. Ames, C. Brinkworth, H. Hill, and H. R. Lowe were elected members. Mr. C. Prior asked that his name might be withdrawn for nomination as judge of annual show, as his business would prevent him officiating. Messrs. R. L. Crisp and A. C. Burn were re-elected delegates to the London Federation. An annual outing was decided upon, the destination to be Great Missenden, taking place on May 29th, with Mr. P. Adamthwaite as guide. The list of attendances for 1908, showing 580 attendances at 20 meetings (average 29 per meeting), was read, Mr. W. Knight gaining the distinction of being present on each occasion. Due notice having been given by Mr. G. C. Burn that an office of vice-chairman be created, Mr. A. W. Curtis was nominated for the said office. This was unanimously carried. It was warmly supported by Mr. C. Prior, who, in the course of his very telling speech, volunteered to step into Mr. Curtis's previous position, as leader of the opposition, which drew from the members the liveliest satisfaction. Proposed amendments of rules were then taken. Proposed by Mr. A. S. Wheller, delete the words after "shall" in Rule 5, and insert "decide if another vote shall be taken." Upon a vote, the same was lost. Proposed by J. Pooley, add to Show Rule 11, at end, "and no member upon winning a trophy outright be allowed to take a diploma." This was lost. Proposed by the secretary, add to Show Rule 1, at end, "All prize-money and special prizes won by a disqualified exhibitor, shall revert to the association, excepting those won through disqualified birds, when the same shall revert to the exhibitor next in order of merit." This was carried. Proposed by the secretary, a new rule after No. 13: "In competing for points prizes in judging competitions, there must be at least three members competing in each section. To work out the same under the "Curtis" system, the points shall count as follows: 1st, 6; 2nd, 5; 3rd, 4; vhc, 3; hc, 2; c, 1. Carried. The secretary reported progress in connection with the fixture list. A vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting.—V. WYNN, hon. secretary.

CITY OF GLASGOW O.A.

The Annual Smoker.

The annual smoker was held on February 19th, in the Bank Restaurant, Queen Street. President Jardine occupied the chair, supported by Messrs. Mollwain, president of the Derby Association; vice-president T. Renwick, Glasgow Southern O.A.; ex-president T. Thomson; McLay, vice-president; R. A. Brown, Glasgow and Western O.S.; Cliff. Bell, secretary M.O.A.; secretary McDonald, Mr. Stenhouse (Dunoon), D. Black, secretary Glasgow Derby; A. Roulstone, G. Aitkenhead, Mr. Craig, J. Park, etc. President Jardine, in his opening remarks, said he was glad to welcome such a large turn-out of fanciers and friends. It was specially gratifying, seeing it was a clear proof, if any were required, that the association had not in any way lost any of its popularity or importance. At the same time, he was not unmiudful of the fact that the success of the association was largely due to the support rendered by kindred societies and others, and he was glad to have this opportunity of extending to them the thanks of the association for their support, and, so far as it lay in his power as a fancier, no effort would be spared to make the association second to none in the kingdom, and worthy of the support of every true fancier and breeder in Glasgow, and elsewhere. The chairman gave the toasts of the members of the Royal Family. Mr. R. A. Brown replied in a few appropriate remarks. The musical programme was then entered into, and with such a large number of artistes (professionals and amateurs) at the chairman's disposal, it was one of the principal events of the evening. The chief singers were Messrs. Black (gold medallist Emslie), Messrs. Donaldson, Paton, Pryde, Casey, Mitchell, Burgess, McInnes, Begg, A. Muir. Mr. R. A. Brown gave a reading, and Mr. Clark some concertina selections, all of which were much appreciated. Mr. Mellwain proposed "The City of Glasgow Ornithological Association, and Kindred Clubs," in a few well-chosen remarks which was duly acknowledged by Secretary McDonald. At this stage the chairman remarked that they were nearing the close of what had proved one of the most successful and enjoyable smokers in the history of the association, and he was pleased to know that everybody had spent such a profitable and pleasant evening. He hoped all fanciers would have a successful breeding season, with many "champions" amongst them. Mr. R. G. Joliffe (C.B.), proposed a vote of thanks to the chairman for the able manner in which President Jardine had discharged his duties as chairman, etc., which was received with applause. Mr. Secretary McDonald proposed a vote of thanks to the artistes, after which "Auld Lang Syne" was sung by the company at the close.—SCOTCH FANCY.

No. 286.

A NOVEL BREEDING CAGE PARTITION.

Sent by A. W. Farmer, 5, Waverley Road, South Woodford.

Now that the breeding season will soon be here, and many fanciers are thinking of making their own cages, a hint on partitions may not be out of place. The following is a simple method of making an effective sliding partition. Take the piece of wood that the partition is to run on, and with a coarse saw cut a groove ¼in. deep in the upper edge. Then drive into the bottom of the partition three staples—the sort used for putting up electric bell wire are best. Leave about ¼in. of each staple projecting, and the slide will be found to work quite easily, besides which, the small space left underneath does not form a harbour for red-mite.—A. W. FARMER.

No. 287.

AN ANTI-RED-MITE PERCH HOLDER.

Sent by C. W. Barnes, 33, Vale Road, Hermitage Road, Finsbury Park, N.

Herewith I enclose a sketch and description of a simple and good anti-mite perch holder for box cages. I find it a splendid help in keeping down the red mite, as it is next to impossible for the pest to lurk at the perch ends—a favourite hiding-place. It is easily made from a piece of cage wire, with the aid of a pair of small pliers. Commence by making a small eye at "A," then continue the wire in a slight curve to "B," bending in here, and continuing on to "C," forming a triangle to hold the perch. Then take the wire up the other side, soldering the end to "A." The curve at B (Fig. 1) acts as a spring to hold the perch secure, and at the same time the latter can be easily taken out for washing. Fig. II. shows the perch and holder in use in a box cage; the dotted line represents the sides of cage. The holder can be fixed, or made movable, by a broad, flat-headed (inside surface) screw or nail, and bend out a little from the sides as shown in Fig. II., thus keeping the perch ends a little away from the sides of cage. I use this holder in all my breeding and box cages, and find it a good red-mite preventative, with the additional advantage of being very convenient.—C. W. BARNES.

"Cage Birds" Breeding Cage Labels are a

The balance-sheet of the Scottish British Bird and Mule Club, for 1908, shows a balance on the right side of £1 5s., which, though less than that of the previous season, must be deemed very satisfactory seeing how liberally the club has this year supported the shows with gold and silver medals, etc. We note that a Trophy Shield, value £7 7s., has been subscribed for. ## OBITUARY

Mr. W. FOOTILL (Hull).

I am sorry to inform you of the sudden death of Mr. W. Footill at the age of 62, writes Mr. E. R. Ridley, hon. secretary of the Hull C.B.S. The deceased was at business on February 11th, his death taking place on the 18th. Mr. Footill was an enthusiastic Crest breeder, and was until recently a member of the Hull C.B.S. The interment took place at the Hull general cemetery on February 21st. The Society was represented by Messrs. G. W. Oliver (chairman), J. Calam (delegate C.B.U.), G. Harland (committee man), and E. R. Ridley (secretary).

It was with deep regret, writes Mr. W. S. Negus, hon. sec., Cardiff and Dis. C.B.S., we learned that sorrow had visited the home of our worthy chairman, Mr. F. D. Jones, occasioned by the loss of his mother; and at the last meeting a vote of condolence was passed on his behalf, extending their heartfelt sympathy to him and family on this sad occasion. I feel quite sure that in doing this I am also conveying the same tender sympathy from all who have made Mr. Jones' acquaintance.

The balance-sheet of the Gateshead and Dis. C.B.S. for the past year shows a cash balance on the right side of £6 11s. 2d., which, considering the heavy expenditure of the year, must be considered very satisfactory indeed. The society's assets are valued at £5 12s. This result is highly creditable to the late secretary, Mr. T. Taylor, and the other officials, and should be an encouragement for the new secretary, Mr. G. Buck.

The Tong and Dis. C.B.S. have arranged to hold their first annual supper and presentation of medals and specials on March 9th, at the Holme Lane Hotel, tickets, 9d. each, writes Mr. J. Smith, the hon. secretary. Mr. T. Ogden will preside. Mr. H. H. Towers will present the prizes to those gaining most points for 1908. Artistes are engaged, and we are hoping to have a right jolly evening. Both ladies and gentlemen are welcome, and I should be very pleased to receive names as soon as possible.

My yellow marked Scotch Fancy cock, which you are doing me the honour of illustrating this week was, writes Mr. J. Little (Byker, Newcastle-on-Tyne), bred in 1906. and the same seasou took first prize and gold medal at Newcastle Show, for best Scotch Fancy, under Mr. Patterson (Chirnside), and the same year was second at Gateshead. In 1907 he took second at Leeds and second at Berwick. In 1908 he secured first prize at Wallsend, under Mr. Dewar (Edinburgh), and first at Gateshead under Mr. Bennet (Kelso).

Welsh C.B.C. Annual Meeting.

The annual general meeting of the Welsh C.B.C. will be held in the course of a short time. Mr. Melhuish has promised to give an address at the close of the business. The balance-sheets will be audited and placed before the members, also other important items. If any member has any motion to bring forward, I shall be pleased if he will send same on to me at once, as no other motion will be allowed at the meeting (see rule 10). On account of the new rule passed last year, it is necessary to nominate candidates for each office, but before doing so it is hoped no member will propose another for office without first getting his consent, also promising to give his best interest to the club. On account of pressure of business I shall not seek re-election as secretary this year. It will therefore be necessary to nominate for this office. I wish to thank the members and the Press for the assistance rendered to me during my term of office, which has been four years. Will those who have not paid their subscriptions for 1908 do so at once to enable me to complete the balance-sheet?—D. H. TEDSTONE, hon. secretary.

As many societies are writing him, we are asked to state that Mr. G. E. Weston cannot, owing to business, undertake judging engagements at any shows other than those held on a Friday or a Saturday. Will secretaries kindly note?

Danysz Virus, Limited, have issued an interesting pamphlet on the use of rat virus in India. It consists of a note on the subject by Dr. Danysz, together with a reprint of an article on experiments by Captain Saigel, I.M.S., Burma. A paper by Dr. Danysz, entitled, "Some Reflections Regarding the Free Use of Bacteriological Cultures for the Destruction of Rats and Mice," has also been reprinted, and copies of both pamphlets are obtainable on application to Danysz Virus, Ltd., 52, Leadenhall Street, London, E.C.

That enterprising fanciers' specialist, Mr. Jeffrey Walsh, of Pheasant Aviaries, Penny Street, Blackburn, has just issued an exceptionally attractive price-list, which all readers would do well to obtain and peruse. It is very fully illustrated, with all the latest things in cages—whether for breeding, stock, or show purposes—and bird-room appliances, and the prices are the very lowest consistent with first-rate goods. All kinds of foods and seeds —including many special mixtures for British and foreign birds—are included. Readers should send a postcard to the above address, and ask for a copy, mentioning CAGE BIRDS when applying.

A very large number of foreign orders have been executed during the past few weeks by that world-renowned fanciers' specialist, Mr. W. Rudd, of Norwich, these including bird-room requisites of various kinds to Ceylon (a very large lot of cages, etc., and some British birds), India, Canada (3 lots), Spain, Switzerland, Jamaica, and Burma, with birds to New Zealand (Crests, Norwich Plainheads, and Lancashires), the United States and Canada (several lots Yorks., Norwich, and Crests), Jamaica (2 lots), Gibraltar, Natal, India (Plainheads, Lancs., and Crests), Bermuda, Brazil, Natal (2 lots), another lot to New Zealand (Scotch and Dutch Frills), and other consignments to the Continent.

Milk in powder form has long been proved to be a most valuable, nutritious, and easily-digestible food, and its great value to the fancier for use with his birds—either when breeding, rearing, hand-feeding, moulting, or as a change of diet—is now widely recognised. "Woodland Bird Milk," sold by the Creamery Co., Garstang, Lancs., is a splendid food of this description, which has been severely tested, and its merits borne high witness to, by fanciers of note (breeders of exhibition birds), who state that they produced larger, stronger, and more vigorous birds after using it right through the season. It is moderate in price, cheap in use, and easily prepared. Readers should send for a sample tin and test "Woodland Bird Milk" for themselves.

"Bird Notes" for February maintains its high standard as the official organ of the Foreign Bird Club. It contains several most interesting and valuable articles, notably those by Mr. P. F. M. Galloway on "The Nightjar in Captivity" (and a picture of his pet Nightjar makes an excellent frontispiece), "The Contagious Diseases of Birds," by Mr. Henry Gray, M.R.C.V.S., and Captain G. A. Perreau's on "Hanging Parrakeets." Mr. W. B. Marmont contributes some notes on the "Breeding of Alexandrine Parrakects," and Mr. O. Millsum some on "White-spotted Laughing Thrushes." With the latter there is a full-page reproduction of a picture by Mr. W. Goodchild. This issue completes another volume, and with it are prescnted full and complete indices to the whole of the articles, illustrations, and notes that have appeared during the previous twelvemonth.

In your issue of January 30th, writes Mr. H. S. Tibbs (Toronto, Canada), I noticed some extracts from a letter from Mr. J. Bertie (Mapperley), to you. As these (his comments on my letter to him) are not exactly complimentary to our fanciers here, permit me to say that as I only wrote to him to introduce a Toronto customer, I fail to see why Mr. Bertie should go out of his way to cast slurs at the Toronto bird men. Mr. Bertie judged at the Toronto Exhibition in 1901, and awarded me the bronze medal and diploma for best collection. He also judged at the Toronto's Annual Show, New Year's Day, 1902, at St. Laurence Hall, the first I showed at, and gave me a ticket on every bird I entered. Again, at O'Neill's Hall, January 1st, 1903, every entry I made seemed to catch Mr. Bertie's eye. Still, I can assure him I am not a bit "conceited" about it. I have engineered six other annual shows for the Toronto Society since that, and made them all pay; still, I am not "struck on myself" for that.

Is it Possible?

The Debenham Sparrow Club accomplished even greater destruction than ever last year. It is reported, "21,018 Sparrows were killed and 15,975 eggs destroyed."

Pass the Salt.

The "Western Gazette" states that Mr. A. G. Orchard, whilst near Bestwall Wood, Wareham, observed a Titlark, and following it discovered in its nest two Cuckoo's eggs, on which a Cuckoo was sitting.

Will Fanciers Please Note?

Mr. H. Norman (our well-known artist-in-chief), is anxious to get the skins of good Gold and Silver Lizards, Norwich and Yorkshire Greens, a Hawfinch, and any of the Hybrids, to add to his collection. Perhaps fanciers who have the misfortune to lose show specimens of these varieties will remember this, and send the bodies on to Mr. Norman, address, The Eyrie, Salisbury Road. Carshalton, Surrey.

PRIZE MONEY PAID.

Tiviside, F. A. (Cardigan).

The Real Culprits.

The greatest enemies of British birds, said Mr. A. Trevor-Battye, at the recent annual meeting of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, were not the schoolboy and the bird-catcher. They were the amateur collectors and the men who supplied them.

A Hint.

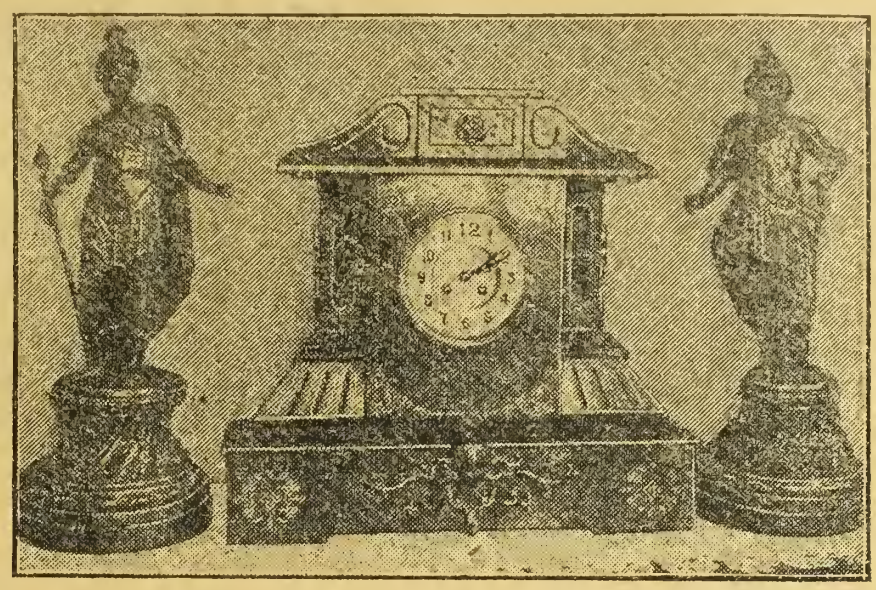
It seems to me, writes "A Reader," that fanciers delay purchasing birds to replenish their stocks until too late. My experience is that you want to have your stock birds thoroughly accustomed to you before the breeding season commences, if you are going to do much with them. I think you should give your readers a hint not to delay purchasing any birds they may want, but to buy at once.



ONE OF YORKSHIRE'S SPLENDID PRIZES.

The handsome Marble Clock and Bronze Figures presented to the Open Norwich Plainhead Club (Yorks.) by Mrs. C. M. Sunderland, and won by Messrs. J. Haigh and Son, of Buttershaw, Bradford.

We Doubt It.

A brood of Swallows, with their parents, were seen a short time ago near Romney, states a writer in the "Road," who goes on to say that they made their home in some old buildings, and were to all appearances quite happy. But alas! the recent wintry weather proved too much for them. Some of them hastily took their departure, the others being found frozen to death.

Scottish Norwich Plainhead Club.

The annual general meeting of the Scottish N.P.C. will be held in Rooms, 142, High Street, Edinburgh, on March 13th, at 5.30 p.m. prompt, when the following notices of motion will be discussed:—(1) Mr. W. Aitchison, "That persons joining the club shall not be entitled to a vote until they have been members for eighteen months and their second annual subscription is paid." (2) "That with a view of having an equitable representation on the committee, Scotland shall be divided into three districts, east, west, and north. North to include all members resident north of the Forth; west, all those resident south of the Forth and west and south of a line to be fixed between Glasgow and Edinburgh; and east, all those resident east and south of that line, the six persons having the highest number of votes in each district to form the committee. The secretary and treasurer to be appointed over and above that number." (3) Mr. A. McFarlane, "That the committee consist of two members from each society that offers classification to entitle them to the club's patronage." (4) That the club adopt two patterns of show cage the one at present in use, and the bow fronted cage, formerly used. One or other to be used when competing for club specials.—J. BROWN, secretary.

Two Noted Winners.

It came as a most agreeable surprise to me to see my winning Yellow Green Border Fancy cock depicted in your valuable CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, and, perhaps, more so as I am now also the owner of the evenly marked buff cock depicted therein, having purchased it from Mr. Wardleworth a few weeks ago. I bred the Green cock in the season of 1907, but did not exhibit it until the Manchester and Northern Counties Show, held in October last, securing first with it in a grand class under Mr. Ferguson. It was also second at the Dulwich O.S. Show and the late Crystal Palace Show, competition being very keen. I hope the bird will continue to improve, and so make itself still more worthy of the great honour done to it, by you, in selecting it along with the evenly-marked buff cock as one of the premier birds of the late show season. The evenly-marked buff was bred by Mr. F. Wardleworth last year, and has been shown about five times, securing the second place at Manchester, Dulwich and Peckham, Welsh National, etc. It is a very smart bird indeed, and with a good moult will, I hope, win many prizes for me in the next show season. I am sure great credit it due to Mr. H. Norman for the natural and life-like way the birds are drawn. Please thank him on my behalf for the great part he has taken in the production of such a beautiful plate.—THOS. L. HANCOCKS (Crewe).

CANARY QUERIES.

A Worn-out Roller.

Mrs. A. Sinkins.—Am afraid your Roller will never again be of much use for singing. In all probability he is quite worn out, as many of these birds are in the course of a few years after the first flush of youth is passed. Now you have moved him to a warm room you had better let him remain there, but see the heat is equable night and day, and that he is quite free from draughts. Feed on a staple mixture of two parts Canary to one part summer rape, and give separately a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and maw twice a week; twice a week give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of sherry and one drop of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it each time; and three times a week a scrap of green-food or sweet fruit. Give all these extras alternately on different days. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of syrup of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days linseed tea in the drinker instead of plain water, and add to this five drops of tincture of lobelia ætheris. If he is not sufficiently recovered by that time, omit medicines for a week, and give plain water, and then begin again and repeat the fortnight's treatment.

A Clear Case.

M. J. Dinn.—As the bird is palpably pestered with red mites in spite of all your efforts to eradicate them, the cause of the bad plumage is quite obvious. The mites must at any cost be cleared out before you can quite remove the effect of their presence, and as you attend to the cage so well, it is probable you either overlook the real harbour, or that it is not really in the cage itself. It may very possibly be that they are safely ensconced around the hook or nail upon which the cage hangs, or in a crevice in the wall, or behind a bit of loose paper on the wall hard by the cage. Examine all these points carefully, and then deal with them and the cage itself thoroughly, all at the same time. If the cage has any fancy ornaments, remove them and then thoroughly saturate every part inside and out with common paraffin, place outdoors in the sun to dry, and repeat the dose once or twice with an interval of one day between each dressing. Then, when dry, newly distemper the inside, replace any ornaments, and re-varnish outside with hard spirit varnish. Put in new perches, and when all is dry the bird may be returned from the temporary cage to which, of course, it was removed at the commencement. The situation where the cage has hung must meantime be treated in the way circumstances allow, but do not rest with half measures. Add a grain or two of permanganate of potash to his bath for a time. In additiou to his staple diet, give half a teaspoonful of rape seed twice a week, and the same quantity of crushed sponge cake three times a week, and once each week for the next month dust it slightly with a mixture of two parts chlorate of potash to one part flowers of sulphur. Continue to give the Chemical Food as you are now doing for a month.

A Masculine Habit.

"Baldy-Green."—No, the bird is not too young to be in full song now; as a matter of fact, practically all last season's cocks which were old enough to moult off and get fine, say, by the end of November, should now be in full song, or rapidly coming forward daily. The habit of flapping as it flits from perch to perch is common to both sexes when in high condition, and the fact that your bird acts thus, and yet only chirps occasionally is, I fear, rather ominous of its being a hen. Try giving a half teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with three drops of sherry mixed in it, and a few grains of gold of pleasure seed sprinkled over it every second day for a fortnight, and give a small leaf of dandelion on each of the alternate days when you can get it quite free from frost. See no red-mites trouble the bird, and smear the bald spot with a little sulphur ointment, or carbolised vaseline, once or twice a week, being careful not to soil the surrounding plumage. If the bird rubs its head in getting it through the wire holes, these should be remedied, when the feathers may grow again in a short time. They should certainly be reproduced next moult. The bald spot will be no detriment to the bird breeding successfully this year.

Breeding Songsters.

Newtown.—As you are already provided with cock birds, you could not do better than get Roller hens of a good singing strain to mate with them, and then get a good singing Roller cock to teach the young idea how to shoot—or tilt, rather. If you do not do the latter the young cocks will probably not be a bit better songsters than a pure Norwich cock. So long as you get your Roller hens from a strain of good singing birds, it does not matter a bit whether they are Seifert's or Trute's, or anybody else's, as unless you really knew the origin of the birds these terms are not worth much now. In a case of this kind you do not need to make any difference at all in the management of the birds, though a Roller cock kept specially for singing, particularly imported birds, does better with a larger proportion of summer rape in its diet than our fancy bred varieties require.

Curious Behaviour of Hen.

R.B.—My impression is that there is nothing whatever wrong with this hen, and that the unseemly feminine behaviour was not really an effect to cough up a bone, but a desire to emulate the "wusser half," as the immortal Josh would say, and treat you to song. Perhaps by the time this appears she will have got prominent enough to treat you to a tiny little twitter, and ultimately become more or less a singing hen. You may, if you like, give her a pinch of Epsom salts in her water for a couple of days, and twenty drops of Chemical Food for a few days afterwards. But as I cannot approve of resorting to any sort of medicines unnecessarily, I would only advise you to do this in case the bird has developed more pronounced symptoms of illness.

Size and Type of Cage.

W. Davis.—There can be no question whatever about the kind of cage to keep birds in in a cold room. A box cage is far and away the best. As regards the size, although you say you want to keep the birds in them all the year round, you do not say whether you mean keeping them singly or mated for breeding. In any case, providing you have plenty of space, the larger the cage the better for the bird. For single breeding cages, the size should not be less than 20 inches long, 11 inches wide, and 16 inches deep. Double breeders, twice this length, and the same width and height, with a partition in the centre. Cages for single birds should, if possible, be as near as space permits the same size as the single breeder.

Aviary and Seeds.

"Durnovarian."—(1) If, as you say, the outdoor room is only about 4 degrees colder than the one now occupied, you might safely remove the birds during any spell of nice mild weather. If the change was made in the early part of a bright mild day, the change would be scarcely felt by the bird. At the same time, if there is no urgent need for the removal you would be well advised to defer it a few weeks, say, until you are beginning to feed up for breeding about the second or third week in March. (2) As regards the seeds, the Canary is quite sweet, which is the only good point it possesses. It is very small, thin, and badly ripened—altogether very poor in quality. The rape is much better and is a very fair quality. The hemp is of very varied quality; a certain proportion of it being very good, but there is a good deal of light seed and unripened grain. The maw is also of fair average quality.

The Budding Hope.

J.M.—(1) It is quite possible for some of the young birds bred by your Rollers to learn to sing in first-class style by having proper tuition under an accomplished songster; proper management in toning down their vocal powers by covering the cage or keeping them in closed song boxes as may seem advisable when they are commencing to sing and appear to be getting too high notes; and the assistance of a bird-organ in case the schoolmaster should go off duty at a critical time. If he does not fail, the extra tuition of the organ will be all the better for the young. If your birds happen to come of a good singing strain, a good proportion of the cocks should make fine singers; but in any case you must not expect to turn out cent for cent of males possessing those sweet low notes which you admire. (2) No; I do not like so great a proportion of rape as three to one of Canary, even for Rollers. If your birds have really been accustomed to such a mixture, I should say reduce it to half-and-half, and again, after a time, alter the proportions to two of Canary to one of rape, and adhere to that as a staple.

Asthma and Inflammation.

Silk.—The Lancashire seems to have passed long ago into a state of chronic asthma, and I rather fear you will not be able to make any really permanent improvement in his condition. Keep him in some part of the kitchen where there is the least possible amount of variation in heat. This will be probably well away from the fire, and must not be anywhere over a burning lamp or gas jet during the evening. At the same time see it is perfectly free from draughts. Give half-a-teaspoonful of the mixed seeds four times a week, and twice a week a small teaspoonful of egg-food or crushed sponge cake, with two drops each of sherry and cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it. If possible, give a mealworm every day for a month or so. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three consecutive days, and afterwards twenty drops of whiskey, ten of oxymel of squills, six of tincture of tolu, and two of oil of eucalyptus, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight, then miss a week, and give again for another fortnight. If it is not considerably better by that time, write again, mentioning this reply, and I will advise further. If it should have the desired effect, however, continue it in fortnightly courses, with a week between each course, for next two or three months. As regards inflammation, when a bad case really occurs, keep the bird in a small cage in a comfortable place, put on a diet of bread and milk sop, with a drop or two of olive oil, give linseed tea with half-a-teaspoonful of brandy in each two tablespoonfuls to drink instead of water, and leave the rest to nature. Continual interference to administer medicine by the beak and other measures are, as a rule, worse than useless. As soon as the bird shows signs of beginning to move about again, add maw seed, and a few grains of inga, to diet, and a pinch of Epsom salts to drinker. The latter must be continued about two days in every three for a little time, or obstinate constipation may follow.

Two Yorkshires.

Paradox.—(1) The hen does not in my opinion seem to be a wheezy subject. It is not an uncommon thing for a bird to make a "crickle" as you call it when anyone goes near them or touches the cage. Your diet also is wrong. Treat as follows for a few weeks, when I think you will find matters greatly improve. Staple food, as now, plain Canary only. Egg food, a small teaspoonful, twice a week only, and without the cod liver oil. Twice a week also give half a teaspoonful of rape, and a pinch of inga the same number of times. Give all these extras alternately. Instead of the egg food you may with advantage give a small piece of sponge cake slightly moistened with sherry. Give a little green food or a bit of sweet fruit three times a week. In the drinking water give six drops each of syrup of rhubarb and dandelion juice every alternate day for a week, and in the following week give thirty drops of port wine and two of tincture of steel every second day. (2) If really a cock, it ought to have been singing by now. Feed same as advised above, except that in this case you substitute a pinch of hemp for the inga and add a pinch of gold of pleasure seed to the egg food or sponge cake the latter moistened with sherry would be best. Give the same medicine as advised for the hen for a fortnight, by which time you should be able to see it coming into song. The sample of Canary is a nice, bright, clean and sweet seed of good quality. The rape has the appearance of being dusty or infested with mite in the bulk, but if this is not so, it is of very fair quality.

A Wrong Step.

"Ernie."—There appears to be a sheet missing from your letter. But your first sheet is sufficient to show that you have done wrong by mating the birds so early. Unless they are in a warm room or kitchen where the temperature is fairly equal, you will in all probability meet with failure instead of success. Even now, if the birds show no signs of beginning to nest, you would do well to separate them, and treat them as fully described in the reply to "Novice," in this issue, on taking risks. This reply to "Novice" will, I think, fully meet your case.

A Tall Order.

Albert.—My dear sir, a whole issue of CAGE BIRDS is barely sufficient to contain all the information you ask for, so here's a brief resume. As you appear to have no knowledge whatever of the Roller's various notes, it is quite impossible to convey all the technicalities in this reply, so that you could form a reliable opinion of the quality of the bird's song you are having on approval. In these circumstances you should either get an experienced Roller breeder and trainer to hear the birds sing and explain the good and bad points to you, or deal only with a reliable person who has a reputation to maintain, and be guided by his choice. The Seifert is not a larger bird than the general run of Rollers. As a matter of fact, the term applies nowadays to the style of the bird's song rather than the bird itself. A bird organ is a very useful adjunct in case the tutors should go off song at a critical time. They can be obtained from most of the large Canary dealers who advertise in our columns. Send for a catalogue from any you choose until you find them listed. The price is about three or four guineas, I believe. "Profitable Canary Breeding" (obtainable from the manager of CAGE BIRDS at 7d.), deals solely with Rollers. A member of the B.R.C.C. doubtless has the advantage of competing for special prizes in contest singing, congenial membership, and so forth. In short, the privilege of helping to support the cult of the Roller Fancy. Full directions as to feeding are given in the handbook referred to above.

Is it Red Mite?

G.E.T.—You had better satisfy yourself whether red mites are really the cause of the trouble. Bareness on the head does not necessarily mean that the birds are affected in this way, and as you have just cleaned and lime-washed the cages, I should hardly expect mite to be much trouble just now. Crumple bits of white paper and fasten them securely in the wires at the end of perches on which the birds roost. Let them stay in a day or two, then remove and carefully straighten out the crease, and if mites are really troublesome you will doubtless find a number running about the paper. In that case, give the birds a bath each day for a few days in which a few quassia chips have been soaked, then remove them temporarily to other cages, well clean, and scrape out all cracks and joints of the infested one, and thoroughly saturate them with paraffin. Allow to stand in sunny position out-of-doors for a couple of days, and repeat the dose of paraffin. Allow to stand another day, and then lime-wash or distemper freshly. The former is hardly a suitable dressing for small cages. Before replacing the cages in position, see the wall hooks or nails are perfectly freed from any trace of the pest. Feed and treat as frequently advised in this column, but give half a teaspoonful of soft food three times a week for the next month, and, if you have them, mealworms occasionally, and in the drinking water give twenty drops of Chemical Food every second day for a month. The birds may be quite fit to breed with this season, if not too old, as it is just likely this bareness may be due to age.

Bad Plumage.

"Rags."—The bird is probably quite a physical wreck, and although you say nothing about its age, I imagine it is no longer youthful. Try following treatment for a month, or it may perhaps require much longer treatment to make any satisfactory improvement. Indeed, you must not be surprised if no improvement takes place until the bird has moulted again. As a staple diet, give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape, and in addition give separately twice a week half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, gold of pleasure, and linseed. On two other days give a pinch of maw seed, and three times a week half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, sprinkled with a few grains of maw, and on two occasions each week give this a slight dusting with a mixture of two parts of flowers of sulphur to one part of chlorate of potash. Give all the extras named on different days, and alternately, so that a different one is given each day, and limit the diet solely to these items. Give a spray of green food three or four times a week, when obtainable, untouched by frost. In the drinking water give twenty drops of chemical food four times a week. Give a regular supply of clean gritty sand, and tepid baths, slightly tinged with permanganate of potash, as often as it will bathe, but see it does not get chilled afterwards.

A Birdy Diet.

W. M.—You can only deal satisfactorily with a bird blessed with such a huge appetite, and which indulges it so religiously at the expense of any graceful proportions, by limiting its supply of food and compelling it to take some exercise. Put it in as large a cage as possible, or if you can let it fly loose in a room, so much the better; allow it for a time not more than two small teaspoonfuls of Canary seed on any one day, and every third day give only one spoonful. On two other days each week instead of its usual two teaspoonfuls give only half the quantity, and about half-a-teaspoonful of rape in addition. Give an unlimited supply of green food whenever it is obtainable quite free from frost or condensed fog. For the first week give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence two days in every three, and every second day in the following week, and on the alternate days in the second week four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid in the water. At the end of the fortnight stop the medicines for a week, and then begin again and give them for another fortnight as before; continue doing so until the bird is sufficiently reduced. You will probably have to continue the limitation diet right up to the breeding season. It is rarely worth while mating a bird of this kind, as they rapidly become blocked up with fat again when mated, and they rarely fill eggs satisfactorily.

Started Moulting.

Altenheim.—Am afraid the place where you first kept the birds was subject to some serious variations of temperature, and it appears doubtful whether the transference to a warm corner of the kitchen was any better. You must see this corner does not get overheated during the day and proportionately cold at night. If it does, then you had better find another position well away from the fire, where the warmth, even if less, will be as equable as possible. Continue staple diet you are now giving, but reduce the rape and hemp to twice each per week, and give half-a-teaspoonful of hemp each time instead of a few grains. Every second day give half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of port wine and two of chemical food mixed in it, and a few grains of inga sprinkled over it. Give all these extras alternately, one each day. In the drinking water give twenty drops of chemical food every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days four drops of tincture of steel. Give the lettuce three times a week if you have it, and no apple or carrot.

Taking the Risk.

"Novice."—No, I do not advise you to take the risk of mating the birds just yet, as I see no immediate danger of the hen laying unmated. This is the only time when you should take such risks when the hen is so very forward that she will be practically certain to lay whether mated or not. If you could hang the cages one over the other for a short time, it would be much better than having them side by side. Give the hen only the plain diet, with a scrap of green food daily, and a pinch of Epsom salts for a couple of days would be useful. Keep your eye on the hen, and if you see her begin to pull at her breast feathers, holding a beakful as she jumps from perch to perch, and pretending to place them on the end of the perch, then you should take the risk and turn in the cock, but not otherwise. If these symptoms do not arise, continue your present treatment for a week longer; the next week give the cock a little egg-food three times, and the hen once, and that at the end; the week after give the cock a little egg every second day, and the hen a little twice in the week, and a few grains of hemp once. Then during the third week in March, if the weather is favourable, put them together, and they will get to work at once, and you probably be better off at the end of the season than you would by mating them straight away.

Crests with Cough, etc.

Breton.—It is impossible to say without seeing a case whether there was any connection between the running from the beak and the subsequent development of an abscess near the eye from which the bird died last year. There might have been some such connection, and I would advise you in the event of any similar case occurring to have a post-mortem on the body to ascertain the real nature of the abscess, as well as the cause of death. In the case of the two birds now suffering, treat No. 1, if a valuable one, by bathing the beak daily for a minute or two with a solution of glyco-thymoline, made as directed on the bottle which you get from the chemists. Also wash out the beak with the solution by dipping a small camel-hair brush in it, passing it into the beak from the side and working it around the mouth, and try to get the solution to work its way from inside the mouth out at the nostrils. Keep cage, and especially the perches, scrupulously clean. Continue this until all symptoms have passed away. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whisky, ten of glycerine, and two of oil of eucalyptus, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight. No. 2. Feed on same staple diet as No. 1, and give half-a-teaspoonful of rape every second day; three times a week half-a-teaspoonful of hemp; twice a week the same quantity of egg food or crushed sponge cake, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it each time; and on two other days each week give a small piece of bread sopped in milk and sprinkled with soft sugar. Continue until the bird is in fairly plump condition, then feed same as No. 1. Also give same medicine in water as to No. 1 for a fortnight, but add on alternate days twenty drops of chemical food.

Brevities.

A Suitable Pair (F.C., Ashford).—So far as age goes, the cock and hen will make a very suitable pair for breeding. Of course, it is essential that both birds, and especially the hen which is the oldest, should be in the best of health and vigour. The cock should be in full song, and the hen full of vigour and activity, and free from any wheeziness. Given this, the pair should succeed very well.

Chicken Meal (Coatbridge).—The sample of meal you send may possibly make a good mixture for egg instead of the usual bread or biscuit for feeding your birds, but whether it would be as good for rearing young depends mainly upon how the old birds appreciate it. Only practical experiments can really decide whether, or in what degree, it is a good substitute. By the bye, you do not say to what varieties of birds you refer.

A Broken Leg (A. Robertson).—I have no doubt but that the bird's leg will recover quite all its former strength and powers. At present the injury is of rather too recent date to expect its effects to have disappeared. You may give twenty drops of chemical food in his water three or four times a week for a month or so to help brace him up; and keep him in a cage by himself where he can get plenty of exercise without any undue excitement or violent exertion. Do not mate before the second or third week in April, and by that time I think he will be able to breed quite successfully.

Click Beak (J. W. M.).—See that draughts and severe fluctuations of temperature are quite avoided; feed as frequently advised here; and give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, six of syrup of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, in each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week. If the cause is removed as suggested, this should be quite sufficient to put him right again. If it does not, write again, and say how you have been feeding prior to this; also refer to this reply.

Egg Substitute (No Name).—No, I certainly would not advise the food in question in preference to the usual for rearing young birds. The assertion that it is superior, would carry more weight were it not an interested one, don't you think? I have only seen one brand which I think is very likely quite as good as the usual egg-food, and it is not the brand you name. Sorry I cannot mention particular brands here. But in this case you must see there is a difference in an article being "quite as good" and "far and away better."

Class Distinctions.—(R.A.W.)—So far as the birds themselves are concerned, there are no class distinction in the marriage market. If your Belgian cock is in proper breeding condition it will mate with any variety of Canary that is also in breeding condition, and this quite irrespective of breed or variety, or even markings. If it had a free choice it might perhaps show a preference for some particular hen, but such whimsical subjects are, comparatively speaking, very rare. Therefore, the reply given last week will quite answer your difficulty, I think. If not, write again.

Crests not Lively (T. Saxon).—It is quite likely the birds have been previously accustomed to a warmer temperature than you are keeping them in now. Keep in just a comfortable degree, not overheated, and see they are quite free from chills and draughts. Give an extra half-teaspoonful of scalded rape once a week, and about the same quantity twice a week of egg-food, with a few grains of inga sprinkled on. Instead of green food, give a bit of banana two or three times a week. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts for one day only, and afterwards two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel in the water for a few days until quite well.

Nest Pans (C. N. M.).—You do not say what nest pan you use, but if you find them really too deep, the best course for you is to gradually replace them, as new ones become necessary, with a more shallow type. All earthenware pans are not too deep. You are probably using a large-sized pan, intended for such breeds as Crests and Lancashires. The plan of putting a layer of pine sawdust in the bottom of the pan underneath the felt lining is a good one, as you can preserve the shape of the pan, and if the linings are fastened in securely, the sawdust will be in no way objectionable. Should any particular hen appear to object to the sawdust, substitute bran, or put an extra bit or two of felt in the bottom of the pan to raise it before putting the complete lining in.

Rats in Aviary (R. A. P. C.).—After firmly setting your upright and framework in position, make floor as follows: Take off a few inches of soil, level the ground and beat down solid (let the floor extend, if possible, a foot at least beyond the limits of aviary on all sides); now have ready a few barrow loads of broken glass, no substitute; broken bottles and any sort of waste glass smashed up into small pieces are just what you want; spread a thin layer of cement on floor, and at once spread glass on top of cement to a depth of an inch or so, making sure there is a complete bed of glass all over. Let the cement get dry, and spread a layer of concrete, two inches thick, on top of the layer of glass. The concrete will form the floor of the aviary, and you can cover it with a layer of sea sand or other gravel for the birds. Rats are capable of doing wonders, but they won't burrow through that floor. If much troubled with them, why not try "Danysz Virus," advertised in our columns.

Aviary Accommodation (A Starter).—Your aviary would have been much better facing south-east instead of due east. In this latter position, unless there is some protection from the wind, the east winds of March and April would be rather bad for any breeding birds, unless you could arrange to have a blind or shutter to close over the front at such times. Otherwise the place should do very nicely for breeding Canaries. With the birds flying loose, which is the plan you seem to refer to, there is accommodation for eight hens and four cocks as a breeding stock. The full capacity is from 45 to 50 birds, so the above stock allows for young remaining in the aviary when they leave the nests. A lilac bush, as you suggest, will do to go inside; the only objection is that it may soon get unsightly with droppings, or be reduced by the birds to a few twigs.

Recipe for Paint (J. Hill).—I do not know what colours are chiefly used in mixing the paints, distempers, or enamels used for birds' cages, because, in my opinion, it is always just as cheap, and very often considerably cheaper, to employ a local painter to mix you the required quantity of any desired shade, or otherwise to buy the ready-made distemper or enamels. Therefore, I never enquired into these trade secrets. As regards the colour, I rather favour a light blue-grey for green, or variegated birds; whilst an autumn green throws up the colour of clears nicely, and a grey-green, or light sage-green is very good for Cinnamons or Lizards. The particular shades of each colour are best selected from a shade card which can always be obtained from good makers, and, doubtless, also seen at the retailers.

What is the Record? (T.W.P.).—Sorry to disappoint you, but your bird's age of 19 years is not a record, by any means. I have distinct recollections of records up to 25 years old, and I do not think this is the highest I have heard of. Some years ago I had one die which was certainly over twenty years old, but by how much it exceeded the score was doubtful, as its first owner's memory was the only available evidence, and although that would have made the bird nearly 25 years old, I preferred to stop short, as memory is a notorious deceiver sometimes.

Are They Too Young? (H. Green).—They will not be any too young to breed successfully this year, but the fact that they are also closely related, as well as the cocks being so young, may not be altogether favourable for the stamina of the young. If you could manage it, I should certainly advise you to replace the hens, or one cock and one hen, for birds of the same strain, but which are unrelated to yours, and are over a year old, so that you could make up two unrelated pairs with one of each pair over a year old. This is very advisable when breeding with very young birds. If you cannot carry out this suggestion, you must be prepared to risk the young losing vigour, and to reduce this risk as much as possible do not mate up the birds until quite the middle of April, and only allow them to have two nests this year.

What Breed? (G. Mellows, Malta).—The brief description of the bird does not fit any pure-bred variety. You give no idea as to size and shape. If you have had the bird any length of time, do you know whether its wings and tail were formerly darker in colour than now, or ever approached a black hue? If the reply to the latter point is in the affirmative, and the bird is of a slightly chubby build, stouter than a Border, but not quite so stout as a Norwich Plainhead, it might prove a very useful specimen to help to resuscitate the decaying London Fancy by mating it with as good a hen as you could procure of that variety, and then mating the young back again to London Fancies. Failing this, a German hen would probably make the best mate for him, the object being to breed songsters only. Of course this is assuming the bird is really a kind of domesticated Canary, and not some wild species caged and sold as wild Canaries, as I know some of these Malta birds to have been.

Overgrown Beak (Miss N.).—It is not often the lower portion of the beak becomes elongated. You should catch the bird, and, holding it with the beak in a good light in order to first see how far the blood circulates towards the tip, carefully snip off the overgrowth with a small pair of sharp nail scissors. In a good light you will easily see a fine pink streak running round the mandible near the margin showing how far the "quick" portion extends. Cut just clear of this mark, and no pain or bleeding whatever will be caused. If you should misjudge the distance and any signs of bleeding appear, put a drop of Friars' Balsam or tincture of myrrh on the spot. Give it a piece of cuttlefish to nibble at occasionally to prevent a recurrence of trouble.

Effects of Removal (H. W. B.).—It is removing the birds from kitchen to cold room at an improper season that has caused the trouble. Your feeding is also wrong. Give a staple of Canary only, and, in addition, half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days until the moulting is stopped, half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of sherry and one of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with gold of pleasure seed. Give the hemp twice a week only, and withhold all green food until diarrhœa is quite cured. A bit of banana may be given as a substitute. In drinking water give all the birds a dose of Epsom salts for one day, and after this four drops of tincture of steel every second day for a fortnight, and on alternate days twenty drops of chemical food. See they are in no draught, nor in a damp place. Give the hen whose droppings are green the Epsom salts for two days instead of one, and then a small piece of bread and milk dusted with chalk powder, otherwise treat same as above.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. Weston.

Winter Green Food.

Working Man.—You are quite mistaken. It is very easy to provide birds with safe green food in winter, and without any outlay at the greengrocer's. I agree that it is not always easy to get green food out of doors in the winter, but it may be provided by the fancier himself, in his own house, at very trifling cost. All that is needed is a shallow box (a chocolate or sweet box from the confectioner's answers well) which should be lined with light soil, or even bird-sand will do. Damp this well, then sow it thickly with summer (German) rape seed. Kept in a warm room, and always moist, the rape soon sprouts, and the seedlings can be cut off with the scissors when an inch or so long, and given to the birds, who appreciate same highly. By having one or two boxes, a constant supply can be ensured. Canary seed can also be used in the same way, for sake of variety, and the seedlings are equally well relished.

Fresh-caught Linnets.

G. E., Llanelly.—I expect the cause of the birds dying lies in the fact that you give them nothing but hard (dry) seed to eat from the time you catch them. I have often dealt with this matter. Fresh caught Linnets should have soaked seed of some kind. For their stock food mix one pint each of best canary, and sound ripe teazle, with half a pint each of genuine summer rape, linseed, and charlock seeds. Charlock is sometimes dark bluish red, almost black in colour; sometimes exactly like summer rape; and it tastes very hot when chewed—hence its name of "mustard" seed. In addition to the stock mixture, in a separate dish I give an unlimited supply of maw seed and niger, also lightly cracked hemp seed. These I gradually discontinue, arranging to drop them altogether after the birds have been in my possession twelve to fourteen days. As green food (or "soft-seed" food), I provide summer rape and sunflower seed soaked in cold water until just commencing to germinate (dabbing it dry in a towel before giving it to the birds), and seeding shepherd's-purse, plantain, and chickweed and flowering groundsel tops, when obtainable. If I think my birds were caught during a wet spell, I soak the stock mixture for them at first (you should try the effect of doing this). I very seldom lose a bird on the above treatment.

A Trio.

Ginger.—1. An excellent food for Blackbirds, Thrushes, and the like is given in the reply to "Cee Gee" this week. When fresh-caught, mix some cut mealworms with the food. Give "blackbeetles" and a snail now and again. 2. Small Softbills (such as Wrens, Tits, etc.) feed on the following stock food:—Powdered Osborne biscuit, three parts; best ants' eggs, two parts; dried flies and powdered silkworm pupæ, one part each; meat meal, half part, by measure. Take the quantity required of this, and mix it just crumbly moist with grated raw carrot, or finely chopped lettuce, watercress, or chickweed (use young leaves only), or cold boiled potato, varying it frequently. It is necessary, of course, to give, in addition, all the live insect food (flies, spiders, wood-lice, earwigs, small beetles, smooth caterpillars, green fly, ants' eggs, etc.) one can possibly obtain as in season. To the above stock mixture I frequently add, after damping, a teaspoonful or two of preserved egg-flake, or part of a hard-boiled fresh egg, finely minced, and, more occasionally, a little finely scraped raw lean mutton or beef. Good cream cheese is a splendid food, too; give a little, finely chopped, and mixed, of course, with the above biscuit food, or just laid on top of it. Ripe fruit should also enter into the menu; banana, very ripe pear and apple, strawberries, grapes, elderberries, blackberries, raspberries, garden currants, etc., are all more or less appreciated by such birds as the Garden Warbler, Blackcap, etc. 3. Mealworm breeding is a very slow process indeed. I keep my own in tins partly filled with alternate layers of sacking and bran. A warm place is essential.

Woodlark's Abnormal Condition.

Lu-lu.—It is rather an unusual period of the year for a Woodlark to suffer from "sexual derangement." There is not the slightest doubt, however, that birds do suffer from some such malady. I have lost more than one fine cock Mule and Hybrid through it. Keep the bird in a cool atmosphere, and use plenty of vegetable ingredient in the stock food—grated carrot, finely chopped cress, etc. Try a lengthy course of fluid magnesia; normal dose, one small teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water. Intervals on plain water should be allowed, and, of course, the dose of magnesia varied if the laxative effect is too pronounced. One does not want to make the action of the bowels unduly loose.

Feeding Linnet & Goldie Mules.

Onoto.—Your Linnet and Goldfinch Mules will thrive excellently on exactly the same seed mixture. I should not use packet mixtures as a regular thing, but give them as a change, now and again. The feeding of all the Canary crosses is carried out on very similar lines. All require a little "richer" seed diet than that usually given a Canary. A good seed mixture at this season of the year is:—Canary three parts, teazle two parts, hemp one part, charlock and summer rape half-part each, maw and linseed quarter-part each. In the hot weather reduce the hemp and linseed. Stop them altogether, as a regular thing, during the height of summer, and begin again with them when the moult is nicely advanced. Any of the special Finch or wild-seed mixtures advertised in our columns will make a good and acceptable change, given twice or so a week. A little sunflower seed twice or thrice a week would also be more to be appreciated; crack it if necessary. Any of the usual green foods may be given—flowering groundsel (not coarse leaves), chickweed, shepherd's-purse, dandelion, lettuce, watercress, etc. The second and third may be given practically ad libitum. All Mules are very fond of shepherd's-purse and chickweed.

Six at Once.

Cee Gee.—Three questions at once are supposed to be our limit. (1) It is an extremely awkward size—7ft. by 7ft. by 3ft. 6in. would be a great improvement. If any large birds, then 12 would be the limit of its holding capacity; (2) Have never tried to keep together such a mixture; they might perhaps agree all right; (3) You would need to give the usual seeds in addition to soft food. For the soft bills this menu would serve well: Stock mixture, which any good seller of bird-foods will mix for you (store it in tins); finely ground Game (or Pheasant or Partridge) meal, six parts; ground silkworm pupæ, meat meal, good ants' eggs and dried flies, one part each, by measure. Get the Game (or other) meal without grit. If you have any difficulty in doing so, finely crushed puppy cakes (or puppy meal) makes an excellent substitute; or the "broken" biscuit obtainable from the grocer. If the latter be used, add an extra part of meat meal and silkworm pupæ. Damp quantity required for daily use with a little water, or grated raw carrot, or cold boiled potato, or finely chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season. Vary them frequently, and add a teaspoonful of preserved egg flake, or half a hard-boiled egg, finely minced up, twice or so a week. Give some mealworms daily, and any other insects you can lay hands on, also ripe fruit and berries frequently, and according to season; (4) I prefer the Woodlark indoors; Skylark outdoors; (5) The cock Pekin Nightingale has a loud, melodious song; (6) This query must be sent to the Foreign bird department (vide rules).

Keeping a Yellowhammer.

Dorando, London.—Your bird should commence to "sing" when we get a little genial Spring weather; it depends, however, upon how steady he is. The only "stock mixture" you will need is plain Canary seed. Few Yellowhammers, or any other of the Buntings, will eat any quantity of other seeds, though now and again small oats, wild seed mixture, rape, cracked hemp, coarse oatmeal, maw, and one or two other seeds will be picked over and a few eaten, but not sufficient to warrant their inclusion in a "stock mixture." To make a little variety in the diet, it is best to give a feed of soaked ants' eggs frequently, and live insect food (mealworms, flies, scoured gentles, small beetles, and grubs generally) according to season. Fresh (live) ants' eggs are relished exceedingly. "Shop" ants' eggs (get the best quality only) are well liked if soaked in a little new milk, drained on a cloth, and then given the birds; this helps to bring them into song and condition. Many Finches, too, appreciate them when prepared in this way. It is well to mix a sprinkling of a good insectivorous food among the ants' eggs, gradually increasing the quantity, as in this way Buntings (other species, too) can be got to eat it readily; and it is very good for them. Green food these birds are not keen on, but you can always offer them a sprig of whatever you may happen to have in the place. Corn Buntings will usually eat a little "seeding green-food" (grasses, shepherd's-purse, etc.), and Reed Buntings, too.

Brevities.

Skylarks Ailing (E. Fear).—Have never had any trouble personally with the food. The castings you send seem to have sawdust in them; can they pick this up with their food? I do not recommend meat, but either meat-meal, or the finest ground crissel. Perhaps you are getting coarse crissel, which is altogether unsuitable.

Linnet's Claw (J. H.).—Your feeding is fairly good; I have given several long answers dealing with this subject within the last three weeks. You must keep the bird quiet for a week or two, in a quiet corner of the room, and let him have two very thin perches (about quarter-inch), well rounded at top, placed close together, with food and water easily accessible. He should then soon get his feet all right.

Goldfinch in Trouble (Wardle).—Get a tiny feather and cleanse the nostrils well twice daily with warm water coloured the depth of port wine by the addition of a little Condy's Fluid. You can drop a little of the solution into the throat now and again; it will not harm the bird. A week's treatment should see the end of the trouble. Glyco-thymoline would be better than Condy's (used as per directions on bottle), but it is more expensive. Keep bird out of draughts.

A Last Year's Blackbird (Novice Reader).—If a last year's cock Blackbird has moulted all his nestling (body) plumage, he should be all black. The only exception is the flights, or wing feathers, which (not being shed) remain rusty-coloured until the second moult. The bill should be yellow, but may not be quite clear, i.e., free from dark marking.

The "Nope" (Dickey Dent).—Yes, friend Dickey, I know a British bird which is sometimes called the "Nope." Its proper name is Bullfinch. It would be Bullfinches without a doubt which the catcher had caught.

Great Tits (Oxeye).—A pair of Great Tits would breed in a very large outdoor aviary, no doubt, if provided with suitable nesting sites. You don't say what size and kind yours is. You would have to supply plenty of live food—choice of gentles, mealworms, live ants' eggs, "cured" flies, and any available small grubs, etc. They rear their young entirely on live food when in a state of nature.

In an Aviary (W. H. Spoobert).—(1) Neither cork, bark, ivy, nor sunflower plants will hurt birds in aviaries; (2) Yes, you could turn out Canaries. I should put the cock and three hens, for possibly the cock Chaffinch might fall in love with one of the latter, and breed you some rare Hybrids. If outdoor (cold-room) bred, you could turn them out when we get a mild spell in March.

Death of Birds (Disease).—It reads like malnutrition. Certainly your menu sounds painfully thin, and no doubt the birds found it so. Millet seed is no good for Chaffinches, Bramblefinches, and Bullfinches. I have frequently told in this column how to feed these species. Why not follow my advice? Let them have sound teazle, sunflower, Canary, charlock, summer rape, and linseed daily, with hemp, maw, wild seed mixture, etc., occasionally.

Robins in a Cage (N.R.).—It is rather improbable that Robins would breed in a cage 40 by 16 by 11 inches; still, strange things happen, and to try them will be interesting. They build in all sorts of places—holes, shrubs, sheds, tins, etc.—out-of-doors, and use as material dried twigs, moss, coarse wool, bits of straw, leaves, and similar things, lining with hair (cow and horse) and feathers. You would have to continue giving a high-grade insectivorous mixture, in addition to as much live-food as possible. (Note reply to "Oxeye.")

Deaths of Birds (R. Hepper, jun.).—You give absolutely no particulars which would help me to arrive at the cause of the deaths. It is necessary I should know under what conditions birds are kept, how they are fed, their age, and the symptoms exhibited. You state none of these things. You seem to have been very unlucky, and if you have been recently buying, it might be well to send a body to our Mr. North (vide post-mortem rules) for examination.

Goldfinch Bare of Feathers (Tohar M'huire).—Chemical food is sold by all high-class chemists. Your Goldfinch is possibly suffering from red-mite badly. You would do well to consult the article on "Diseases and How to Cure Them" in "Cage Birds Annual." Sulphur ointment would be the best thing to anoint the bare places with. Use it twice daily, gently, and only a little at a time.

Thrush and Blackbird (Rather Anxious).—As I stated last week, cock and hen Song Thrush are alike in plumage, and the sex can only be told for certain by the absence or otherwise of song. Both Thrush and Blackbird ought to be singing by this, if in good condition and steady. If your Blackbird is in colour a faded, greyish-black, shaded with brown, then it is a hen. Some hens (especially old ones) get quite a yellowish beak; but never so rich a colour as an adult cock.

An Aviary (Dorando).—Your aviary would hold anything from a dozen to twenty cock birds. It is impossible to recommend a selection which "will not fight," as individuals vary so. For instance, I have known a Yellowhammer to be frightfully quarrelsome and vicious with other birds; yet many are just the opposite. I have had the same experience with Bullfinches and other species. Again, very many birds will be "real gentlemen" during autumn and winter, but with the approach of spring develop into intolerable bullies, knowing no mercy for their weaker or more peaceful brethren. Try a selection of Finches and Buntings—one cock of each species.

Greenbacks (Hardhill) (1) Merely changeable weather will sometimes serve to send birds kept in cages into moult. The usual moult will take place towards the end of the summer, no doubt, and be unaffected by the "cross moult," providing the bird recovers without experiencing trouble; (2) Well, Greenbacks certainly improve in size with a house-moult, and, of course, their blaze undergoes improvement at the same time. But one needs to get a big blaze to commence with.

Mules (A. B.).—Mules have certainly been bred from cock Canary paired to hen Bullfinch; this is the orthodox way of mating. I have heard of several cases where good eggs have resulted when the sexes have been reversed (note a letter in this week's issue), but have seen no young. The value of Goldfinch Mule depends on whether it is a cock; you neither state this nor whether yellow or buff. You can't value birds without seeing them, however. A good 6-pointed might be worth anything from two pounds upwards.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Red-cheeked Bulbuls.

M. T.—(1) I presume you mean the Red-eared, also called Red-whispered. Its classical name is Otocompsa jocosa. It is found in India, China, Siam, and the Malay Peninsula. Diet: Seeds, ripe fruit, live insects, and a little of some good soft food mixture (see our advertisement columns). (2) Red-vented (Pycnonotus hæmorrhus). Malabar Green Bulbul or Harewa (Chloropsis malabaricus). Also another near species, the Gold-fronted Green Bulbul (C. aurifrons), are similar as to plumage, with the exception that the latter has a deep blue throat, while that of the former is black. The last two species are very gorgeously clad, and are good songsters and mimics; they do not eat seed, but subsist on soft food, ripe fruit, and live insects. All the Bulbuls should have access to ripe fruit ad lib., this being their principal diet in a state of nature.

White Java with Bald Head.

No Name.—The male is responsible largely for the continuation of the mischief. Cage it separately till it has recovered its plumage, put it on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food, well colour the drinking water with same, supply a piece of ripe apple daily till green-food is more plentiful; continue daily bath, and also keep a piece of clean cuttlefish continually in the cage. For one day give a little Magnesia water, 2 parts water to 1 part of Dinneford's Magnesia; remove the drinking water overnight, and the first thing in the morning before it has any other water, supply the Magnesia water as above, and leave it there for one morning, at least. After an interval of three days repeat the dose, and continue to supply Chemical Food in the water in between. It would assist to lightly anoint the head with clean vaseline, but you must not make it greasy, so that it will run in among the plumage; only use a very little just to moisten the skin. Your diet is very satisfactory, but a little ripe apple or other fruit is a good substitute for green-food during the winter, and very wholesome for all Finch-like birds.

Naming a Bird.

Constant Reader.—(1) It is a rose-breasted or Roseate Cockatoo, an inhabitant of Australia. (2) Get following mixture: Canary seed, oats, hemp, wheat, dari, maize and sunflower seeds, about equal quantities of each, well mix and always keep a supply in cage. For some time lightly sprinkle the seeds with water, and dust with flowers of sulphur. Also a little boiled maize. Prepare as per replies to "H.H." and "B.H." in this issue; and you will also find the proper seed mixture in these replies. Any kind of ripe fruit may be given, also nuts and plain biscuits. Spray what plumage it has, also the bare parts with a weak solution of quassia chips, but the bird must be carefully kept out of draught till dry. Do not give tea, coffee or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Grit and cuttlefish should always be in its cage.

Saffron and Zebra Finches, etc.

R. Shears.—Yes, Saffron, Zebras, and Java Sparrows may be kept in an outdoor aviary all the year round. If they are not overcrowded they will agree well enough, and probably breed; at least the Zebras will, and the others probably. You might add a pair of Cutthroats as well. I am assuming that a portion of one end of aviary is reserved as a shelter shed, which must be sufficiently lighted for the birds to see their way about. You must also fix up at least double the number of nest boxes and husks that you have pairs of birds. Supply canary, white and spray millet, oats and paddy rice (rice in the husk), with green food (grass in flower, and any non-poisonous garden or hedgerow weeds); at this time of year a little ripe apple or other ripe fruit they will take, is a good substitute for green food. You must also supply grit, cuttlefish and water for drinking and bathing. When they have young to feed a little of some good, soft food mixture (see advertisement columns) must be regularly given. Note: Birds, unless from some outdoor aviary, must not be put out of doors before April.

Birds for Outdoor Aviary.

"Lover of Birds."—It would have been easier had I known your county but the following should prove both free and profitable breeders, once they settle down to nesting, and I recommend them in numbers as under: 1 pair Green Budgerigars, 2 pairs yellow Budgerigars, 1 pair Black-cheeked Lovebirds, and 1 pair Red Rosellas. Do not buy cheap birds for breeding purposes; procure only the best, and get your Budgerigars from different sources. Do not buy all from one breeder. Red Rosellas may take a year to settle down before breeding, but the others should do so this season. The Budgerigars, if you can get them from outdoor aviaries, can be put out at once; so can the Rosellas. But I should not put the Black-cheeked Lovebirds out before mid-April unless the season prove a forward one. Green Budgerigars 6/6 to 7/6, yellow, 8/6 to 10/6, Black-cheeks 50/- to 60/-, Rosellas 35/-, all per pair. Your aviary should answer admirably, if well furnished with branches and nesting receptacles. Encourage grass, wheat, weeds, etc., to grow in the open flight. It's no use planting trees for Parrakeets of any kind.

Grey in Poor Plumage.

A. T. Warrington.—Let me emphasise my previous reply. Mix the flowers of sulphur as already directed; continue the Chemical Food, give the fluid Magnesia, as directed, as may be required to keep the bowels moving freely, not loose; supply the seed mixture among the maize, or better keep a small tin of it in the cage, and ultimately the bird will take to it and eat it freely. When this occurs gradually wean it from the maize. I must also repeat my warning: Do not give slops, fats (bread and butter), table scraps, or any kind of animal food. A little plain biscuit slightly damped in the Chemical Food water is permissible, as is also a crust of dry toast slightly moistened in the same. Continue to spray bird with the tepid water. Will be a little time before much improvement is made, as probably it does not preen itself. Please report progress—say, three weeks hence, unless some fresh development calls for it earlier.

Breeding Budgerigars in a Cage.

C. T. H.—(1) Yes, providing you can keep the inside of cage dry and free from damp. The top of cage must overhang so as to keep rain from driving inside, and yet not sufficient to keep out the sun. Keep the cage in a warm and sheltered position, where it will escape wet as much as possible (damp is your greatest foe), and get plenty of sun. (2) I do not know your county but if you are not extreme north and the birds come straight from an outdoor aviary, you could put them out at once, though I should advise deferring same till first week in April. (3) It is not necessary to separate the sexes. (4) Foreign birds will not breed to order like Canaries, but Budgerigars, once they start, are very prolific and breed them pretty well all the year round. They may begin to nest almost at once, and again they may do nothing till the end of the summer. (5) Husks (as advertised in our columns) for Budgerigars, are the best. Buy only the best and largest birds you can obtain. Two pairs will be ample and get each pair from a different breeder. "Budgerigars," price 6d., from "C. B." office, would be very helpful.

Blue-fronted Amazon.

"Hempsum."—I should fill its seed tin with the regulation seed mixture and the next day blow away husks from remains and refil the tin. Mix a little boiled maize with the seed mixture; it will probably take it that way. Try the above method for a few days; it can hardly starve, as it will get a little hemp and sunflower. Try it with plain Canary seed in a tin by itself. I find all Parrots very fond of the cores of apples; let it have what it will eat of this. Try it, too, with shelled walnuts, cobs, etc. You must give sufficient of what it will eat to prevent its wasting, but decidedly you must stint it somewhat on these seeds, or I fear it will become a feather plucker. It would certainly do it no harm to keep it without sunflower seed for one day, but this should not be necessary if you treat as above. What is the condition of the bird? Is it in good feather? Is it fat? Is it lively and energetic or is it dosey and moping?

Amazon with Diarrhœa.

G. W.—It is little short of cruelty not to give a Parrot water, and providing it does not over drink, the water can remain in its cage continually; nevertheless, a Parrot that has been without water for some time should have it given gradually at first, or it may take too much. If the bird will let you handle it, give 4 drops of Tincture of Opium direct to the mouth, daily for three days, and then three more doses on alternate days; also for one day give 5 drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the mouth. If you cannot do this, then you must give the opium in a little syrup, and a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water (one ounce) in lieu of the castor oil. Give a little boiled maize (one tablespoonful) daily; boil till soft, drain off all water, and then soak into it about one-third teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food. Also well colour drinking water with the Chemical Food for a month at least. The sample is a fair one. Get the following as your seed mixture: Equal parts Canary, hemp, oats, wheat, maize, and sunflower seeds, well mix, and keep a supply continually in cage. Ripe fruit, nuts (shelled walnuts are best), and plain biscuits should be supplied at intervals. A little boiled potato (unseasoned) may also be given. A clean piece of cuttlefish should always be hanging in the cage. Grit should be scattered over sand tray. Do not give anything soaked in tea, coffee, or milk, neither table scraps nor animal food of any kind. Confine yourself to above diet, and the bird should soon recover condition. Shall be interested to hear how it progresses.

Parrot with Growth on Beak.

H.B.S.—I should examine the interior of the bird's mouth, and if there are any white spots therein, with either a feather or camel-hair brush, wipe them over with honey and borax (from your chemist); at least, it will do no harm if you do that daily for a fortnight under the circumstances. If the warty growth is hard, touch it with tincture of iodine. In your case I do not consider the growth, so far as I can gather, is likely to prove dangerous, but such should be got rid of as quickly as possible; they are weakening, and I should put it on a course of Parrish's chemical food (see other replies) for a month or longer. Twice a week give it half a tablespoonful of equal parts of Dinneford's magnesia in water, and do not supply anything else to drink till the whole has been consumed. Note warning in other replies re slops and table scraps, etc., it applies to all Parrots.

Teaching a Parrot to Talk.

L. L. L., Tottington.—Your bird has made a good beginning, and if healthy and in good feather, the price you have paid is a fair one. Keep the bird where it will hear plenty of conversation; also teach it by constant repetition any short phrases or words you wish it to utter; but the teachableness of all Parrots is very variable, and more often than not they pick up stray words from conversation and ignore for a considerable time what you have been at much pains to teach them. If the bird is tame, pet and fondle it, make a fuss of it generally, talk to it, and on such occasions wind up with offering it a bit of fruit or something it appears to regard as a tit-bit. However, do not be tempted to give it any table scraps or slops, or bits of everything. The formula you say you are following from this column gives you an ample range for all purposes.

Breeding Gouldian Finches.

Bruce.—I have sent you the pamphlet on Gouldian Finches. If you get a box made 2 ft. 6 in. long, 16 inches deep, by 2 ft. high, there will be a good prospect of your successfully breeding the Gouldians. Put a nest box in each corner, screening same with a good sized heather spray and leave them to themselves and during the year there is a strong probability of their successfully rearing you a brood of young Gouldians. A plain well-made box cage is more handsome than a fancy wire one, and not an eyesore in any room. Stained black, walnut or mahogany outside and a pale sage green inside, they have a tasteful and handsome appearance and are safe and comfortable houses for the birds. The secret of keeping Gouldians in good health lies in giving them a roomy cage, keeping them in an airy and sunny position, yet out of reach of draughts. Give your Finches a little ripe fruit as a substitute for greenfood, and as soon as you can get it free from frost supply grass in flower ad lib; grass flowers can be picked in London parks providing roots are not pulled up.

Middle Spotted Woodpecker.

J. S.—Am inclined to think this should have been addressed to Mr. Weston, and I must certainly leave it to him to indicate whether your bird should have been admitted to the British section; but I fear not. I did not note note your bird when at the Palace. Our Greater and Lesser Spotted Woodpeckers have a very wide range, extending through Europe, Northern Asia, and the Atlantic Islands. In Europe we have other forms—the Middle Spotted (D. medius) and and the White-backed (D. leuconotus). Howard Saunders, speaking of the Greater Spotted (D. major), says: "The young of both sexes have the crown of the head red. In ignorance of this fact, a bird obtained in the Shetland, during the migration of 1861, was supposed by Saxby to be the Middle Spotted (D. medius), and was afterwards figured by Gould as the White-backed (D. leuconotus); but it has been pronounced by Prof. Newton to other authorities to be a slightly albescent D. major." Personally, I should place only a slightly, if any, greater value on your specimen than on a normal D. major.

Brevities.

What Bird? (R.L.W.).—Am still at fault with this species, but it certainly is not a Parrot, which are pair-toed birds, viz., two to the front and the same number to the rear. Give it as much ripe fruit as it will eat, also some good soft food mixture, and put some Chemical Food in its drinking water. I shall be at the Museum next week, and will then try and solve the mystery.

Amazon With Sore Face (W.F.).—You give no idea how you have been feeding, etc., so I can only direct you to other replies, and advise your bird being dieted on similar lines. Give two or three doses of Dinneford's Magnesia, and also boiled maize and flowers of sulphur. For directions see reply to "E.T.B." Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food. I presume the bird will let you handle it. Gently bathe the face with warm water, and then after drying with a soft cloth rub on a little spermaceti ointment. This could be done daily, or every other day, according to how the bird submits to treatment. Try the above for a fortnight, and if there should then be little or no improvement, please repeat query. Note: Only a little ointment must be used, not sufficient to run among the feathers and make them greasy.

Budgerigars (B.N.).—You could keep 30 Budgerigars in your room, but not for breeding purposes. I consider four pairs ample, and if you get a nest off each pair simultaneously, as is by no means improbable, you would at once be fairly full up. Put in natural branches, such as will give the birds varying thicknesses to grip and climb about on, say, from about one-eighth to an inch thick, line the back of the aviary with such; pea sticks answer the purpose well.

Silverbills ("Sylvia").—Of course, it is a well-known fact that hen birds are not dumb, and with some species they sing almost as well as the male; but if you carefully note a true pair, you will find the throat of the male throbs much more with the effort than that of the hen bird. Also your comparisons must be made during the breeding season with wild caught birds. In the breeding season I think you will find that the male will be much the better songster. Note: Two hens will often nest, lay, and closely incubate, but, of course, to no purpose. Many thanks for your other remarks.

Amazon Mopy (E.T.B.).—Give a little boiled maize daily, about a tablespoonful; boil till soft, drain off all surplus water, and well stir into it half-a-teaspoonful of flowers of sulphur. Note: The maize only keeps fresh one day, and the food vessel must be kept strictly clean. Give ripe fruit, nuts, and a piece of plain biscuit, in addition to its seed diet; keep a piece of cuttlefish hanging in cage. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water for one day, and repeat same after an interval of three days. Follow this by a course of Parrish's Chemical Food, making the drinking water the colour of pale port wine with same. It should get more lively shortly; I fear it was improperly fed before coming into your possession.

Grey Parrot (Kilpatrick).—I must ask you for the same information as I have "Lester," and in the interim you had better treat the same; but also, on the intervening days well colour the water with Parrish's Chemical Food. If there are any sores, lightly annoint with spermaceti ointment.

Green Parrot (Lester).—Can only give you a provisional reply till you inform me how you are feeding and treating. In the meantime, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and repeat the dose after an interval of three days. Also to make sure re the parasites, spray it two or three times a week with quassia solution. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food.

Avadavats Bald ("Avadavat").—A correspondent informs me she was always troubled with these birds becoming bald when kept in cages, but that after she took to supplying rush nests in the cages the trouble ceased. It is certainly worth a trial, though I have known the baldness to occur even in outdoor aviaries, where there were husks and nests in abundance. Shall be interested in hearing the result.

Green Parrot (A.H.D.).—Continue treatment advised in previous reply. I am of opinion it will ultimately recover condition. Moisten the biscuit with the water and Magnesia. Supply this daily so long as the voidings are not watery. Try it with Parrish's Chemical Food in the water. I never had a bird refuse this yet; they appear to like it once they have tasted it. Tempt it with various kinds of ripe fruit till you find which kind it favours. The drowsiness should yield to above treatment.

Miniature Parrot ("Redcar").—I should like to have a short description of the bird. "Miniature Parrot" is so very vague. I certainly should not permit it to have all hemp; give it a tin of seed per day, and do not renew it, but leave it to get what it requires from cage bottom if it still throws it out. Also supply ripe fruit, a few nuts, and a piece of plain biscuit. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into its drinking water every day, and spray its plumage with quassia solution every other day. Do not give any slops or table scraps. On the days you are not giving the Magnesia, well colour the drinking water with Chemical Food.

What Bird? (T. Heywood).—I have looked up this description again, and am of the opinion it is some species of Elycatcher, and unless you can spare me the skin for two or three days, I fear I cannot definitely name it for you, but I shall be at the Museum next week and will see what I can do.

What Bird? (C H C.).—Regret you have lost one of the birds, thanks for sending me the body, which I feel sure is a Cactus Conure. At the same time, when it comes into mature plumage, it is quite possible the bird may prove a brown-throated Conure, but I do not think so for though the plumage is in that stage which makes a definite identification almost impossible I feel convinced that when adult it will prove a Cactus—an uncommon, though not rare species, and a handsome bird when in full adult plumage.

Budgerigar in Poor Feather (W.G.).—Several other replies on Budgerigars in this issue should help you. Give two drops of castor oil direct to the mouth. Crush some cuttlefish to the size of millet and mix with its seed mixture. Slightly damp seed mixture (you must not make it wet or sticky), and dust daily with flowers of sulphur; also well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Give a few oats daily and supply a little ripe apple or any other fruit which it will eat in lieu of greenfood at this season. As soon as you can procure it free from frost, supply grass in flower ad. lib.

PARK & LAKE AVICULTURE

Answered by Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., etc.

Sexing Doves.

Reader of "Cage Birds."—If you mean the ordinary tame collared Dove, they are very hard to sex; but the cock is rather longer and slimmer than the hen. As yours are now seven months old, they ought to breed this year, and soon, as they started cooing nine weeks ago. But, as you say "they" make this noise, I am rather inclined to fear you have two cocks. The hen Dove, when mated, rarely coos, though she will do so when alone.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

King Parrot (R. Earl).—Chronic congestion of liver with recent inflammation involving the lungs. Some inefficiency of diet is indicated.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

A Booklet (A. West).—We shall be glad to buy the booklet at price mentioned; send it along.

An Exchange (Osborne Davis).—We do not concern ourselves with exchanging birds, but if you write to one of the large dealers advertising in our columns, no doubt he would oblige.

Photographs (C. B. V. Hodgson).—We shall be glad to see the photographs; of course, we could not accept any liability for their safety, etc., when in transit.

Seed Samples (Durnovarian).—The answer to your query (with several others) had to be held over a week owing to extreme pressure on our space.

Our thanks to A. E. Prickett, Anon, W. P. B., A. W., and others for interesting cuttings, photos, etc.

A Linnet Deal (A. Mallett).—We cannot publish your letter in its present form, as it would only serve to place every honest trader in the district under a cloud of suspicion. Taking the facts to be as you state them, we trust that the threatened warrant will soon lay the man by the heels. We are ourselves always advising use of the deposit system.

REMARKABLE TESTIMONY

Not what WE say, but what OTHERS say.

I think Cage Birds quite surpasses ——, and I shall take it every week and invite all that I know to see the difference in news, advice, and advertisements.—John Evans (London, N.).

I heartily congratulate you on the excellent Jubilee Show number of Cage Birds. The plates are grand, and the whole number superb. Best wishes for the future success of Cage Birds.—W. H. Tottle (Plymouth).

Your Crystal Palace Show number was a splendid effort on the part of Cage Birds' staff, and I beg to tender my thanks for the excellent report of the great exhibition.—J. Brown, secretary of the Scottish Norwich Plainhead Club.

I cannot let this opportunity pass without congratulating you on your latest effort in putting out such a grand double number of Cage Birds as the last. The Palace report is A1, and is alone worth the 2d. itself. I have also Cage Birds Annual for 1909, which is better than ever.—R. V. Raine (Cathcart).

At the London and Provincial O.S. monthly meeting held yesterday, the subject of show reports was discussed, writes Mr. J. W. Ramsden (the show manager), and it was the opinion of most of the members present that Cage Birds' report of the "Jubilee" Palace Show was the best report of any National Show ever published by a cage-bird paper.

Have you ordered YOUR 'Annual" yet?

I was delighted with Cage Birds Annual. It is so well got up, and is a serviceable guide for both secretaries and exhibitors alike.—Henry Bennet (Kelso).

I have sold all my Cage Birds Annuals already, which says a great deal for it. It is a marvellous sixpennyworth.—J. Ford, secretary of the Kelty and Blairadam C.B.A.

I have much pleasure in sending again for a copy of Cage Birds Annual, as I think it a most useful guide to all fanciers. I derive a great benefit from it.—F. Bradley (Westhoughton).

My word! what a grand Palace Show number you gave us! And your Cage Birds Annual is a very useful book, if only for the list of trade and other addresses.—Chas. B. Evans (Clapham, S.W.)

I have received my copy of Cage Birds Annual and am very pleased with it. I may say that I got some very good customers through my advertisement in last year's Annual.—H Orford (Manchester).

Kindly accept my best thanks for Cage Birds Annual. It is a marvel, and should have a record sale. It is crammed full of information from cover to cover, and no bird keeper should be without it. And all for sixpence! Why, it is worth double.—Geo. Oakes (Masborough).

Cage Birds Annual is one of the finest books that ever I have had since first I began to keep birds. If a novice wants to know anything then I would advise him to buy Cage Birds Annual by all means. No fancier should miss it.—J. Bunn (Sneinton).

Spend YOUR money to your own advantage.

Thanks to your excellent paper, I have sold all my surplus yellow hens.—Clem. F. Savage (Rugby).

Kindly thank all who replied to my advertisement in Cage Birds, as they are far too numerous to reply to, writes Mr. F. Broadhurst (Macclesfield).

Kindly thank all applicants for my Hawfinch, writes Mr. H. Sayward (Halstead). I had so many letters that I could not answer them all. I wish Cage Birds every success.

I am pleased to inform you that I have had splendid results through advertising in Cage Birds, and I wish you every success with your valuable journal.—George Baker (Barnstaple).

I am getting most of our members to advertise a little every week in Cage Birds, writes Mr. B. Bullough, secretary of the Southport and Dis. C.B.S., as I myself have done well through advertising in your columns.

Kindly thank all who answered my advertisement in Cage Birds, writes Mr. Harry English (Holbeach), as I could not answer them all, I had so many. I wish Cage Birds every success, for I have gained a lot of useful information from its pages.

Kindly thank those who sent answers to my advertisement in last week's Cage Birds, writes Mr. F. Bird (New Tredegar). I have had replies from all over the kingdom, which speaks well for the circulation of your paper. I could not answer them all.

Kindly thank through your valuable columns, writes Mr. W. Pilbeam (Haywards Heath), all who answered my advertisement re Goldfinch and Bullfinch. Those who sent stamps I answered direct; it would cost too much to answer all. The replies ranged from the Isle of Wight to Durham and Wales.

The week before last I had an advertisement in a contemporary and only received one reply, writes Mr. J. W. Rogers (Fishguard). Last week I had the same advertisement in Cage Birds, and up to Monday I had received 15 replies, which speaks well for good old "C.B." I am enclosing you further advertisements, and wish your paper every success.

Order your 1909 ANNUAL AT ONCE. It is NOW ON SALE; "Better than ever this year," is the verdict.

CORRESPONDENCE.

NEW SOCIETY FOR KING CROSS, HALIFAX.

SIR,—A meeting of Canary fanciers interested in the forming of a new society was held at the headquarters, Trafalgar Inn, on February 8th, when 14 members were enrolled, and we are hoping to double this number at the next meeting. We decided to leave over the election of officers till next meeting, Thursday, March 4th, at 8 o'clock, when any fancier who would like to join may attend and take part in their election. Roll up fanciers, and let us have a good meeting.

W. MORTON.

CAGES AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE SHOW.

SIR,—I have noticed the paragraph headed "A Complaint About Cages," in your last issue, and I shall thank you to make it known in your valuable paper that your remarks do not in any way apply to me, as I have never refused to execute any order received through these competitions, for the simple reason that I compete in a perfectly fair and legitimate manner I contend that to exhibit a cage worth many shillings more than it is entered at, is not winning, but buying honours—it is a fraud, pure and simple. But please let it be known to your thousands of readers that all the exhibitors do not compete in this manner.

R. A. NEWLEY.

GOLDFINCHES AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE SHOW.

SIR,—We notice in your report of the Goldfinch class at the Palace Show you stated you had heard that our commended bird was our old champion. Who on earth gave you this information we do not know; evidently your informant was not a keen observer of Goldies, as there is not the slightest resemblance between this one and our old champion. The latter was at home with a damaged foot, otherwise he would have been at the Palace.

LEWIS AND DYMOND.

(Our informant was a Welshman himself, and one of the best-known present-day exhibitors of British birds in Taffy-land. We questioned his statement which, however, he adhered to as being correct.—EDITOR.)

THE SCOTCH FANCY CANARY NATIONAL "DERBY," O.A.

SIR,—The Executive have finished their labours in preparing for the current session, and have issued to fanciers membership tickets, appealing to them to do what they can to extend the membership. We know how ready they have been in the past to assist, and have no doubt they will do all they can to further the interest of the association. A further supply will be furnished on receipt of a postcard, and should any fancier have been overlooked in the distribution of the tickets, and wish to join or assist, if they will communicate with the undersigned, tickets will be sent. We appreciate the valuable assistance you have rendered our association in the past.

A CURIOUS DEVICE FOR SEXING BIRDS.

SIR,—Your correspondent on this subject in the last issue has at least treated readers to a bit of innocent humour by his spicy effusion, but still he should not ridicule a subject about which he clearly knows nothing. Let him ponder a little the words of one great English classic, that "there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in our philosophy." The device by which he endeavoured to discover the sex of his baby's doll, instead of being the new discovery he claims for it, has been well known, if not well understood, for many years. It was referred to by myself in these columns four or five years ago, and it was written of by Mr. J. O. N. Rutter, F.R.A.S., in a work on "Human Electricity: The Means of Its Development," as long ago as 1854; therefore it is neither a new discovery, nor a stranger to our columns. Even assuming that our humorous friend's judgment was not at fault in selecting two hens instead of a cock and a hen, as he thought, for the experiment, its failure in such a case is no criterion that a properly conducted experiment would not give more correct results. It is doubtless the proper harnessing of the forces which cause these phenomena which has made it possible to put a machine on the market which is said to reduce the determination of the sex of given birds or animals to an exact science. Of course, I do not attempt to criticise the article in question in any way, as I know nothing whatever about it intimately; but I should be far from ridiculing the idea, or questioning the possibility of it. Man has not yet laid bare all the secrets of Nature. What we know is only just sufficient to make us more fully alive to our ignorance. Perhaps our friend can solve this problem. If one gets a needle, cotton, and coin—silver is not essential, copper will do as well, and a disc of zinc will probably be better than either—prepares them in the same way as described for sexing birds, and then, instead of a bird, gets a horseshoe magnet and holds one pole only of the magnet between the thumb and forefinger of one hand, and suspends the needle over the coin with the other hand, either the gyratory or pendulum movement will begin according to the pole being held. Stop the movement, take hold of the other pole, and try again, and the contrary movement will begin. Now hold the magnet by both poles at once, the thumb on one pole and forefinger on the other, and neither movement will occur. Even if either of the movements is already in action, the needle will be perceptibly checked and soon brought to a standstill. The movements can be repeated as often as you like with the same results. When your correspondent can explain these phenomena, he will cease casting ridicule on these mysterious forces of Nature.

CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

THE NESTING OF GOLDFINCHES.

SIR,—I think Mr. Lloyd, in his essay on the management of British Finches, is in great error when he states that the Goldfinch lays three or four eggs. I am sure five would be the average. In 1907 there were four nests in an orchard near here, and they contained 5, 5, 5, and 6 eggs respectively. And all the eggs were hatched. In 1908 there was only one nest in the same orchard, and it contained four eggs; but it was a very late nest (October), and no doubt the hen would be exhausted by that time. All these nests were in apple trees. The sycamore and horse chestnut are two trees which Mr. Lloyd does not mention, and which Goldfinches are very fond of building in, and mostly at the extremity of the branches. I find that the ash tree is very seldom used.

YORKSHIRE CANARY CLUB OF IRELAND CHALLENGE CUP.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Devins, of Sligo, I may say that I fail to see why he requires my address before replying to queries. If Mr. Devins has acted honourably, he has nothing to fear. I would therefore ask him to be good enough to explain why he exhibited as a novice at Clapham Show, and he a champion exhibitor in Irish contests. When he replies to my question in a true fancier and sportsman spirit, I will ask him a few more straight and fair searching questions, and will give him my address. If Mr. Devins has received prize-money from Clapham show which he was not justly entitled to, perhaps he will consider the matter of handing it over to the Fresh Air Fund, and thus do a good turn and avoid further unpleasantness.

THE DEWSBURY ORNITHOLOGICAL FANCIERS' SOCIETY.

SIR,—We held our opening meeting on Saturday, Feb. 20th, at the Little Saddle Hotel, with a full attendance of members. Mr. C. A. Lindley presided. We decided to call the new society the Dewsbury Ornithological Fanciers' Society. The election of officers for the ensuing year was proceeded with. The post of president resulted in Mr. W. Kershaw being elected; vice-president, Mr. P. Ineson; treasurer, Mr. B. Cook; hon. secretary, Mr. G. G. Stafford, 35, South Wood, Lime Street Flats, Dewsbury. It was agreed that the annual subscription be 4s. per member, which should be an inducement for young fanciers to join. It was also decided to cater for the British bird fancier, and anyone interested in such should attend our next meeting, the date of which will appear in your club notices. I beg to thank you for the help you have given us.

PROPOSED MIDLAND YORKSHIRE CANARY CLUB.

SIR,—I was pleased to see Mr. W. C. Wells' letter in your last issue. I have previously had some correspondence with Mr. Bishop on this matter, and think that if the proposed club could count on the undivided support of the Midland fanciers of the Yorkshire variety, the venture might be launched with some considerable promise of at least eventual success. If Mr. Wells will undertake the duties of secretary (pro tem.) I would suggest that he call a meeting of those interested immediately, in order to hear their views on the subject. This would enable the officers to get matters in order for next show season, should it be thought advisable to form the club.

A. PADDOCK.

THE GREENFINCH: "A TUPPENNY JOEY."

SIR,—I wonder what blockhead first called a Greenfinch that name. I also wonder if he ever saw the pretty "Green Bird" in his native wilds, or noticed how beautifully his colours blended with his favourite wild rose bush in the winter, or in the spring with the tender green of the newly-budded hawthorn tree, to which he flies from his meal of seeds or dandelion heads on the fallows. If he had he would never have given him that horrid name. Personally, I think there is no British bird more beautifully clothed than the Greenfinch. See him in the spring when his greens and yellows have the glisten of the love time; how he shines in the sunlight as he skims his flight to his home, the ivy, where waits for him his soberly-clad wife patiently sitting upon those treasures which are a promise of greater joy to come. How happy she is to take his proffered dainties, and how brightly gleams her eye when that bonnie bird calls to let her know of his coming. Of course, I know the Greenfinch is not very elegantly shaped compared with some of our other birds, but still I think he has the portly appearance of a genuine John Bull. He may not be a "Dandy," but then I have seen "Dandies" who made one itch to kick them. Then as a cage bird, how soon he reconciles himself to captivity, and becomes a fearless pet, that is of course if his master or mistress have the happy knack of gaining his confidence, a by no means difficult matter. I have one at the present time for whom I often open the cage door and let her (for the bird is a hen) out to go where she will, but I never have to wait long before she is back waiting for her cage door to be opened, so that she may get in to her favourite sunflower seed. I have had others who would do more than this, for I have taken them over a mile from home, and they have returned not once or twice, but many times. I have often thought it a pity to "colour feed" a Greenfinch. The spectacle of a reddish Greenfinch does not appeal to me, and were I a judge, colour-fed Greenies would not win under me, simply because the schedule usually says "Greenfinch" and colour-fed ones are not "Green" Finches. Should I have interested anyone in this bird, I shall be delighted, for to my mind no bird better repays kindness than my favourite, the Greenfinch.

THE JUBILEE CRYSTAL PALACE SHOW.

SIR,—Will you please mention that all cash prizes, sales money, and cash specials have been sent to the winners and that medals will be sent out as soon as they arrive from the makers. I shall be glad to hear from anyone whose account is incorrect.

J. W. RAMSDEN, Show Manager.

A NEW SOCIETY FOR BONNYRIGG AND DISTRICT.

SIR,—A well-attended meeting was held in the Forresters' Arms on Feb. 20th, when Mr. Alex. McVie was elected president of this new society, to be called the Bonnyrigg and District Cage Bird Society. The business of the club was gone right into. It was decided to have 22 classes in all at the show to be held on Oct. 30th, namely, 8 classes of Scotch Fancies, 8 for Border Fancies, 4 for Norwich, 1 for British, and 1 for mules. The show will be held in the most suitable hall. Sixteen members were enrolled, and it is expected that as many more will join at the next meeting. Meetings are to be held on the last Saturday of every month, open to a radius of 10 miles.

GEORGE HARPER, Secretary.

THE COLOUR FEEDING OF NORWICH CANARIES.

SIR,—Will you allow me a small space in your valuable paper with regard to the colour feeding of Norwich Plainheads? I think, for the benefit of the Fanciers and our show they would be better shown in their natural colour. I know for a fact that a good many fanciers would take up the breeding of this bird as a hobby if it were not for colour feeding, and I fail to see how the working man with a long day's work from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., and who has one, two or three mouths to fill, can give the birds the attention they ought to get. Nor do I see where the £ s. d. is to come from. There is no getting away from it, the Norwich tops the tree of all the Canary tribe. There is no coarseness or overlapping of feathers, and the bird is not lanky or leggy; they are not even "wee gems," but of just a fine, medium size, and last, but not least, have no hump on their backs. Of course, I am speaking now of a good specimen. So, working men, wake up, and let us show our birds on their merits. There have also been lately a good many letters with regard to this bird. The fanciers down south will have to come to the "land of the thistle" to see the real type of the Norwich Plainhead.

EARLY CRYSTAL PALACE CAGE BIRD SHOWS.

SIR,—In the Palace Jubilee Number of CAGE BIRDS you publish a group of winners at Palace shows of fifty years ago. In the early years of this show the winning Goldfinches were the smallest in the class. I believe the judge suspected some of the others might be Germans. I have seen English Goldfinches wild caught, superior in size and beauty to many Germans. The artist at those early shows must have imagined the Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid, I fancy, for I do not think that any were exhibited until 1880 and afterwards. The first ever seen at a show was one at a Brighton show, entered not for competition. After this one, the breeder reared both Goldfinch-Bullfinch and Linnet-Bullfinch Hybrids, but I do not think he ever exhibited them for competition. Some were sold, however, and found their way to the Palace. In 1877 there was not a class for Hybrids (other than the Canary). I entered a Twite-Greenfinch in the small variety British birds, and it was "wrong classed." These early Palace shows were reported in the "Field" newspaper, and at later dates in the "Journal of Horticulture." The first show I visited was in 1864. The next 1872, when I exhibited a cinnamon Chaffinch. I did not attend again until 1880, and then never missed a year until 1902.

J. H. VERRALL.

A CAGE BIRD SECTION FOR THE DARWEN F.A.

SIR,—Will you please allow me to make known through the medium of CAGE BIRDS that the above-named association have decided to form a cage bird section in connection with their society? This has been done at the urgent request of many cage bird fanciers residing in the district. The society is confined to fanciers residing within a radius of 2½ miles from the circus. The annual subscription is very low, viz. 2s. 6d., with an initiation fee of 1s. for new members. The secretary will be pleased to hear from anyone desirous of joining the association, and hopes to have a ready response to this appeal from all cage bird fanciers.

J. T. WALSH, Secretary.

HOW WILL THEY MANAGE IT?

SIR,—The committee and members of the Dulwich O.S. were somewhat startled to find announced in your "Twitterings" columns last week that Mr. J. Robson was judging the Dulwich and Peckham Pair Show on March 4th, and their Young Bird Show on July 1st. These dates have already been arranged for the Dulwich O.S. shows, Mr. Robson to judge both, and that gentleman has written corroborating this fact to assure the members he will be with them on the above dates. So, without the Dulwich and Peckham intend to hold their shows earlier in the day than ours, they must bow to the D.O.S. this time. The annual show will be held in October, our last year's date clashing with several important fixtures. Several popular judges are being engaged, and the most magnificent hall in the neighbourhood has been booked. Several prominent local gentlemen have expressed their intention of subscribing to the guarantee show fund. We are gradually overcoming our financial difficulties, although through the recent magisterial decision we have had to cancel our whist drive fixtures at headquarters; but Messrs. Rogers and Bruty intend to run a mammoth drive at the Imperial Hall, in aid of the society at an early date.

WOOLHOUSE AND ROGERS, Show Managers.

(We think it possible the names of Messrs. J. Dobson and J. Robson have been confused. In the paragraph sent us last week, "Mr. J. Robson" (as printed) was plainly written, but in the secretary, Mr. Hodson's, club notice this week, we find that Mr. J. Dobson is announced. —EDITOR.)

THE FIFE AND KINROSS NORWICH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

SIR,—A well-attended meeting of breeders of the above-named variety took place on Feb. 20th, in Penman's Masonic Arms, Cowdenbeath, for the purpose of forming a Norwich Plainhead Club for Fife and Kinross. Mr. G. Fisher Bowhill was asked to take the chair, which he did. Mr. A. Dickson (Kelty) said it was his opinion that there was great need for a club here. There were about 60 breeders of Plainheads between Fife and Kinross, and, judging by the talk he had with most of them they were unanimously in agreement that the time was now ripe for starting such a club. The only breeders he had not seen were the Kirkcaldy and Dysart ones, but they and all others are welcome to come and give their assistance. He moved that a club be formed, and called the Fife and Kinross Norwich Plainhead Club (confined to the two counties named). Mr. T. Barclay (Kelty) seconded, and the motion was passed unanimously. Mr. G. Penman was asked to become honorary president, which he did with much pleasure. It would give him, he said, great satisfaction if the club would accept from him a cup for competition, to be won three times before becoming the property of the winner. The election of other office bearers resulted as follows:—President, Mr. G. Fisher; vice-president, Mr. T. Barclay; secretary and treasurer, Mr. Adam Dickson, 37, Adams Terrace, Kelty; and a small committee. It was also agreed that members be restricted to nominate three birds for each show, and that a novice section be formed; also that the annual subscription be 2s. 6d. per member, and all who would like to join are requested to send their names to me. ## HOW TO MAKE AND USE AN AVIARY FOUNTAIN.

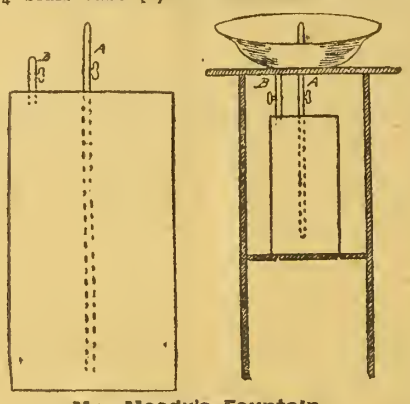
SIR,—Seeing in CAGE BIRDS of January 23rd issue that a reader asks for information as to how to make a simple fountain for an aviary, I herewith enclose a small sketch and instructions for the making of a pneumatic fountain. First, the apparatus consists of a reservoir made of stout tin, or, better still, an iron paint keg of a size to suit the purpose for which it may be used. Fig. 1: A reservoir which is air-tight and water-tight save for two holes bored in the top for two pieces of ¼ brass tube (a) to be carried to within



Mr. Moody's Fountain.

½ in. of the bottom, the other (b) about 1 in. inside, with a small gas or other tap on each. A very suitable way is to make a stand for it to rest on, also to carry the bowl on the top of stand. I find an ordinary enamelled wash bowl will answer the purpose well (see Fig. 2). Bore two holes in bowl (Fig. 1) for the brass tubes to come through, the centre tube, A, 6 in., with a fine pinhole in top; the short one, B, is a ¼-in. tube put through, so that when the bowl is filled the tap on the short one can be opened and the water flow back into the reservoir. The apparatus works in the following manner: Make the reservoir not more than half full by pouring water down pipe B; keep the tap on the A shut. Then force air into the reservoir—a cycle air-pump will answer first rate. When sufficient air, shut off tap B and open tap A, and your fountain is complete. STEPHEN MOODY.

SIR,—I send you an idea of a self-acting fountain, suitable for outdoor aviaries. It consists of two wide-mouthed bottles, marked X and Y in the sketch, of the same size, closed with large corks or bungs. The bottles are placed one above another, the bottle X being supported on a wire stand made for the purpose. A is a shallow basin or receiver, through the bottom of which the pipe E passes, the lower end of E passing through the centre of the cork that closes X. To the bottom of the basin A another tube, C, is attached, which is bent in such a manner that it may pass through the cork of the bottle Y, reaching nearly to the bottom. Another pipe, D, issues from the cork in Y and enters the cork in X. When the different parts have been put together, pour water into the basin, A, the water will pass through C and fill Y. When Y is full, the continued pressure will force the water through the pipe D, and fill X, and when X is full, the water will rise through E, and the fountain will begin to play. As soon as the water rises through E, cease to pour water into A, for the basin will be kept full by the water that issues from E. The whole arrangement may be hidden from view by a case covering the pipes and bottles, constructed in such a manner that only the interior of the basin A is visible. BIRD LOVER.

SIR,—As the readers of CAGE BIRDS comprise a large number of working-men I will try to show how, at the smallest possible cost, a fountain can be made by anyone with a little tact. Size: of course, that is left to the reader himself to decide upon, being governed by the room he has to spare. Make a concrete bed, say, 12 in. by 12 in. by 6 in. deep, of two parts gravel or small brick rubble and one part Portland cement, as a base to work from. Under the concrete leave a space 2in. square from the outside to just beyond the centre to take your water supply up, also to act as overflow drain. Into this bed place upright in the centre a piece of ¾ iron pipe to reach from the 2in. drain hole to a suitable height, but a little below the top of fountain, unless you want the water to run over the side of bowl. This pipe will take your waste water away. With a piece of wood and zinc you can make a pattern of half the inside of bowl and moulds on outside edge. This fastened to the iron pipe, so that you can turn it round, will put you right for making bowl, which, of course, you will make on concrete bed, finishing off afterwards with a coat of good cement to put a face on. In putting this last coat on use freely a soft brush soaked in water, as you will find this will lay it off more level than a trowel. As to your water supply, get a tank, or, if you have one, an ordinary tub, and fix this as high as you can so that you get a good pressure. From this bring a ½-in. pipe governed by a stop-tap connected to bottom of tub or tank; take this pipe to somewhere near the drain-hole in the concrete bed, and connect to it a ¾-in. brass tube or a ⅜-in. gas-pipe (brass or iron; it does not matter which, as both threads are the same size, but the brass is best, being rustless). Take this small pipe up the drain hole, then up the ¾-in. iron pipe. You will want an "elbow" for this. At the top of this small pipe, at a height to suit yourself, screw on a ⅜ straight burner nose, and into this screw a No. 1 burner, the same as is used on a public-house counter for lighting pipes with. I think you will then be satisfied. This gives a straight stream of water. If you want a spread of water, take a No. 6 burner and throw it in water, and you will be able to draw out the gauze from the inside with a pin, and if you have a good weight of water you will be surprised. I have seen this in a greenhouse throw a shower of water, or rather a mist, 6 ft. high by 6 ft. wide. If this is not clear, I shall be pleased to give any advice I am capable of if it will be of assistance to any. F. PURSER.

BREEDING THE CANARY-BULLFINCH HYBRID.

Choosing the Hen.

SIR,—I have been trying the Canary-Bullfinch cross for twelve years, and my experience has taught me that there is only one class of Bullfinch hen which will produce fertile eggs with a Canary cock, and that is the Bullfinch hen, which has a Goldfinch marked tail—that is to say, a half moon of white in the outside tail feather. If you look underneath the Bullfinch's tail feathers you will plainly see the Goldfinch mark on the tail of the bird, which I can safely say is the right one wanted for a Canary cock. I have hatched out several Mules in my twelve years' experience. In 1905 I hatched eight Mules from one Bullfinch hen, two variegated and one clear, the others dark. I only reared two out of the eight; one a variegated hen, the other a dark yellow cock. This dark one I heard the visitors praising very much at the Jubilee Palace Show, he being first prize (he has won a lot of prizes for his owner). Now, these Bullfinch marked hens are hard to get hold of. This year there were twenty-one birds in the hen class at the Palace show, and only three birds so marked, the numbers of same being 1,852, 1,855, and 1,865 in the catalogue. The owners of these hens can breed Canary-Bullfinch mules if they pair them to a smart yellow cock that has got plenty of go in him. I have also had fertile eggs from cock Bullfinch and Canary hen. I wish all breeders a successful season.

USEFUL HINTS ON BOOK BINDING.

SIR,—I duly received the CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, for which I thank you. This is the first copy I have had, and I think it can be summed up in one word—invaluable. I was so delighted with it that I at once re-bound it in stiff cardboard covers, and if you think the hint of value to other readers I herewith state how I did it. It took me about a quarter of an hour, and is very simple. First carefully remove the yellow cover and cut off the back, so that you have two leaves 5¼ins. wide. Now take two pieces of cardboard the same width and measurement. Next take a piece of linen (coloured looks best) about 2ins. wide and 1in. longer than the back. Glue the two cardboards to this, allowing room for the book to come between. Next turn down the surplus ½in. on each end over the front. Next cut a clean piece of white paper rather larger than the new back and glue this on the inner side, folding the edges over to the front. Now glue in the book, and lastly fix on the yellow leaves back and front, and you have a book fit for your bookcase, and one which every fancier will require to refer to all the year through. If bound as above it will stand any amount of wear and tear, and will always be in good order. Wishing all fanciers good luck, and "C. B." a good and prosperous year.

A. N. EVANS.

IS IT CRUEL TO KEEP BRITISHERS IN CAPTIVITY?

SIR,—Having read with interest Mr. E. R. Despard's letter on the above-named subject, I thought I would give you three instances, which will prove the reverse. I have never yet met one of these narrow-minded, ignorant persons who was a reader of CAGE BIRDS, and despite its numerous readers, I doubt if a single one holds such an opinion. Now, when I was a lad getting 6s. or 7s. per week, I kept my birds in a small loft over a pig-sty. Among my pets was a Blackbird, which I had hand-reared, and when this bird moulted out in perfect feather I found it to be a hen; therefore, I gave it its liberty. Would it go away? No; in the daytime it fed in the garden, and at night came to the loft to roost. It did this until it was one day killed by a neighbour's tame Magpie. I was once living in Staffordshire along with a pal who was a birdy man. We had on one occasion some very severe weather, during which a poor little, starved Robin, which looked as if it was not intended long for this world, came inside our house. Of course the weak-minded people who are against caging birds would have driven it outside in their mistaken kindness, and the poor feathered mite would have died. But we both being birdy men put Bobby inside the cage my pal had made. It looked, however, as if it had gone too far to be able to live; but with careful feeding we got it round, and it became so very steady that you might have thought it had been in a cage all its life. Now, one day when it was being fed it flew out of its cage and got away. It went, but (tell it not to them that dwell in blissful ignorance, lest it hurt their feelings) it came back again, and seemed as happy as ever inside the cage. Last summer a pal of mine found a Greenfinch's nest with two young ones in, and the old bird sitting dead on top of them. Now, had one of these mollycoddles, who sometimes tell us fanciers it is cruel to keep birds in cages, found these young birds they would have left them to starve to death. Now, my pal took them home, and his wife commenced to hand-rear them, and she succeeded with one, and what a pet it is! It sometimes has the run of the house, and once when I called had had a bath in a cup of cold tea. The bird is a hen, and never seems so safe as when inside her cage. My pal is going to pair a Goldfinch with her, and I hope he has some good luck with them. Now, just a few lines about these cranks that sometimes try to interfere with our hobby. Some of them will turn a starving human being away from their doors and refer them to that human cage, the workhouse. But a bird does not have to work inside its cage for a living as some of the poor things outside during frosty weather. Again, these people who will lecture one on kindness are often dressed at the time in furs and feathers (or their wives are, for we have both sexes in this class of people), and through the wearing of such are the very people who are causing cruelty in the getting of these furs and feathers. Animals and rare, brilliantly-coloured birds are cruelly trapped and slain for the purpose. That the readers of CAGE BIRDS may increase, and the numbers of these most miserable mortals may decrease is the wish of

WILLIAM P. BELL.

Nests of birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

THE CRESTED CANARY CLUB.

Testimonial to Mr. J. Tyson.

SIR,—Amount already acknowledged, £7 4s. 6d. Since then I have received from Mr. G. Colledge 5s., Messrs. W. A. Lott and Victor Wynn 2s. 6d. each. Total up-to-date £7 14s. 6d. As I am desirous of closing this list at an early date, I beg to jog the memories of some well-known "Crest" men, who apparently need it.

AN APPEAL FROM TORONTO (Canada).

SIR,—Would you kindly insert a request for the secretaries of Specialist Canary Clubs and others interested in the advancement of the Fancy, to communicate with me concerning standard show-cages for the different varieties? Our shows in Canada are spoiled by the non-uniformity of the cages, and I want to get this corrected, and have this society possess its own cages, and rent or sell them to exhibitors.

THE TYPE OF PRESENT DAY WINNING NORWICH.

SIR,—There seems to have been little fault-finding with the Norwich at the Palace show, and putting two and two together, it seems that the shape, generally speaking, is much better in the South than it is in the North. That is generally speaking, for I know a good big one can hold its own anywhere. There is no doubt there are two winning types in the North at the present time. The one is too long all over, but has grand chest and substance; the other, the true Norwich, is just the opposite—short body, neck, wings, tail, with domed round head. I was chatting with the winner of first prizes at one of our Northern shows, and he was telling me of his successes before the catalogues were out. We walked up to the class and I said I did not care for the type, but pointed out a bird I would have chosen for first. He replied, "That's one of mine as well. I always send one of each kind, so that whichever kind the judge goes for I have a look in." Now, this is very unsatisfactory to fanciers of the variety, as they do not know whether the bird which they like the best themselves will have any chance with the judge. He may go all for size. There is never any objection to this size if it is equal to the smaller bird in shape or type; but when a bird has a long head, long wings (and these sometimes crossing), and also shows as much feather at the waist as a sitting hen, with enough behind to touch the perch, were it not well held up, it is quite time some strong measures were taken in the interests of the variety. Let us keep to type: round all over, with a good head, short neck, wings well braced, and not beyond the root of the tail; feather, so short and close that the bird appears to be moulded; short tail, short legs, good chest, with a body as big as you can get it combined with above. Yes, give me the swell, with the tight-fitting jacket—in fact, a regular Bertie.

THOS. ROBSON.

THE ALLEGED STAINED LINNET AT BRISTOL F.A. SHOW.

SIR,—I am sorry to have to write under this heading, but do so as I think Mr. Birchley's last letter very misleading to the Fancy. He complains that the C.B.U. has condemned him without giving him a fair hearing in person; further that "they condemn a man before giving him an interview to explain matters if he desires to do so"; then says: "With regard to the deposit with the C.B.U., I was quite willing to comply if I had been given a chance of a hearing before the delegates or Committee." In one part of this letter he says that five minutes' explanation is better than 20 pages of written testimony. Now, it is no one's fault but his own that Mr. Birchley has not had the five minutes' interview he seeks, and this on account of his omission to pay the necessary deposit on appeal. He was written to on Dec. 29th of his suspension, and told that if he desired to appeal notice should be sent within seven days, with a deposit of 10s., as per rules (which were enclosed). Then on Jan. 3rd, in reply to his protest, I pointed out that the deposit was not enclosed, and stated that "the deposit was not necessarily forfeited should you fail in your appeal, but is demanded merely as a safeguard against frivolous appeals." Again, on Jan. 7th, I wrote: "Your letter of the 4th inst. to hand. I am sorry I cannot give effect to your protest until the necessary deposit is sent to me. Please let me have this per return, when I shall be only too pleased to put any statement you wish to make before the Council; otherwise I shall have to submit the suspension for their confirmation." I explained to him verbally on Jan. 1st that a meeting of the Council would be called to which he would be invited to give any explanation he wished, personally, and bring any witnesses he thought necessary, and even to bring a solicitor to appear for him. But he stated then his intention of not paying any deposit, which he has adhered to. This case was first discussed by the Bristol Committee, then by the District Committee of the C.B.U., who recommended his suspension, and to both of these bodies he made lengthy statements. All suspensions require confirmation by the Executive Council, and had he not failed to pay the deposit Mr. Birchley would have had the case re-opened by the Council. It is therefore misleading to state that the Union does not sift these matters to the bottom, and that it condemns fanciers in a haphazard way.

GEO. W. F. LYTHGOE.

SIR,—Mr. Birchley does very well as the "injured innocent," but some of his statements will be found hard to swallow by those of us who exhibit birds ourselves and "know the ropes." Why should every man's hand be against him as he would apparently have us believe? He is (or was) a member of the Manchester and N.C.O.S., a society which contains some of the leaders of the Cage Bird Union (I find on looking up your report that he was helping in the management of their show), so he ought to have had no difficulty whatever in getting a hearing. Personally, I should have thought his colleagues would have been glad to have "whitewashed" him, for their own sakes, if they could have found ground for doing so. Mr. Birchley now leads us to infer that this particular Linnet has been exhibited in a "faked" condition at many leading shows under 'well-known judges and specialists," and has been awarded prizes. This wants some swallowing! How about all the leading fanciers who must have seen it, and examined it closely because it stood above their own Linnets? Are they all blind, or do they know less about stained Linnets than the judge who found it out? And has the previous owner ever been disqualified for showing stained birds? I can give a guess at his identity, and if I am right then he has won scores of prizes, and especially with Linnets. According to Mr. Birchley's account the "staining" must have been put on cleverly, for he says: "We (Mr. B. and a friend) could notice no difference after the alleged staining matter had been removed." It would be interesting to know whether this Linnet ever had a bath, or was given a spray, by Mr. Birchley, for I take it water is necessary to keep all exhibition birds in condition.

PROPOSED NEW SOCIETY FOR STOCKSBRIDGE.

SIR,—On Saturday, February 13th, the inaugural meeting of a society for Stocksbridge and District will take place. Already we have received the names of twelve fanciers who have signified their willingness to assist in the effort to form a society. Anyone who would like to become a member, if they will communicate with Mr. H. E. Wilkinson, Wood Willows, Stocksbridge, near Sheffield, will receive all necessary particulars.

THE PROGRESS OF THE CINNAMON CANARY.

SIR,—One may ask is the Cinnamon Canary as good now as it was a few years back? I think it has made a little progress, but we are not yet up to the standard desired. At the annual general meeting of the Cinnamon Canary Club at the Crystal Palace, there was a long discussion over the club model as to whether it could be improved. After hearing a few ideas for a new model, it was thought best to stick to the old one, but alter the standard of points. There must be far more Cinnamon breeders than the exhibits on the show bench represent, but how are we going to get breeders to exhibit? This is a question that has been discussed by the C.C.C. over and over again. Apart from club shows, the classes, as a rule, are very small. I think the club at present has more novice members than ever it had, but where are the old breeders? They have dropped out altogether. The club is doing its utmost to regain them if they are still in the Fancy. It was very pleasing to see a few non-members exhibiting at the Crystal Palace. Now, if all Cinnamon breeders would join the C.C.C. I feel sure they would be benefited very much. Is it not much better for all to work in harmony, and club together in the interest of our variety? Our secretary will, I am sure, only be too pleased to receive the names of intending members.

ALLEGED EXHIBITION OF JUDGES' BIRDS AT ARBROATH.

SIR,—I as a member of the Arbroath Society fail to understand what Mr. Strachan wants to get at. He states that an old joker accuses him of exhibiting the judges' birds at the recent Arbroath Show. At first he takes it as a joke; the statement is repeated, and he becomes serious, and makes a public denial through your valuable paper. Now, seeing Mr. Strachan was not an exhibitor at the above-mentioned show, what his reason is for making the above statement baffles a few fanciers in this locality. He may be seeking notoriety through your journal. He tries to make us believe he is a sporting man. Well, I admit at times he looks it, but not in this instance. He may be above such tactics as borrowing or lending birds; that I can well believe. He also states that he got 14 birds poisoned at Arbroath Show in 1907. But what proof has he got to show that his birds were poisoned, seeing they were all alive and showing no signs of being poisoned when he took possession of them at the hall on the evening of the show? I believe they got a fairly rough passage home, owing to a wild gale inside the bar, and when he unpacked them next day three were dead and a few seemingly suffering. Of course, he at once came to the conclusion that they had been poisoned. Did he have a post mortem by an expert? I am led to believe that seven died within a week; the rest must have had a lingering illness. I may also state that this is the fourth season of the present society in Arbroath, and it has had a severe struggle keeping its head above the water. So, Mr. Strachan, please don't drown it; don't kick it out of existence; have mercy on the weak.

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

MANY societies have now got out their programmes of members' shows, lectures, etc., and some have already started on another season's competitions. Bradford West had a good turn up at their show on Saturday last, about 100 birds being staged, including "Palace winners," one of the latter securing special for best bird in show. The Novice buff hens were a very special lot, several exceptionally smart ladies being on view. Wakefield, Tong, and Halifax also held members' shows, and the classes were well filled. At Harrogate over 100 birds were staged, this being the last show for very valuable prizes, including such things as silver cups, etc.

DURING the first fortnight in March the annual ballot of the Yorkshire Union, for the election of officers, revision of rules, etc., is to take place. It is my intention during the time the voting paper is in the hands of the members, to try to explain the particular points of the respective items thereon. I hope the societies interested will call special meetings to discuss the pros and cons for the benefit of their members.

THE arrangements for the Amalgamated Prize Distribution and Social proceed apace. The dinner is likely to be very well attended. The presidents and secretaries of the various clubs are nearly all to be present to entertain their fellow members. Don't forget to send in your names, or maybe if too many arrive who are not booked, the "packing" may run short.

*Old Friends.

The following is a true story told us by a friend. A gentleman went to Brazil a good many years ago, and there he caught a Parrot and taught it to speak Spanish. Having to go to India he gave his pet to an English friend. On his return thirteen years later he visited the house of his friend. On learning that the Parrot was alive, he went to see it. Immediately the Parrot saw his old master he came out of his cage, and perching on his shoulder began to speak to him in Spanish.—Sent by Ed. Furlong (age 15), 159, Bedford Road, Bootle, Liverpool.

What a Beak!

A gentleman managed to get a splendid record of his own Parrot's cries on a cylinder. By way of experiment he set it going while the Parrot was in the room. "Pretty Polly"; "Scratch a Poll"; "Give us a bit of sugar"; "Uncle Whe-e-r," whirred the machine. The Parrot looked somewhat scared, and tried hard to scratch her head. "I want some sugar," came from the gramophone. "Great Scott," screeched Polly, as she looked down the trumpet; "what a beak for sweet stuff!"—Extract from "The Story Teller," sent by Emily Carter (age 13), 45, Beech Avenue, Nottingham.

*Attachment of Parent Birds.

It is recorded that a few years ago a pair of Sparrows which had built a nest in a thatched roof, were observed to pay visits to a nest long after the time at which the young birds took flight. This lasted throughout the year, and in winter, a gentleman, on mounting a ladder, found one of the poor little birds a prisoner by means of a piece of string round its leg. Thus it was prevented from obtaining its own food.—Sent by R. Bircham (age 13), The Mill, North Walsham, Norfolk.

An Unkind Friend.

Father tells me of a lady who used to keep a grocer's shop where he lived. One day the inspector of weights and measures came to inspect hers. Everything was found to be alright in the shop, and the man was on the point of leaving when a Parrot which was kept in the shop called out: "Light weights in cellar; light weights in the cellar." The man turned back and found them, and got the old lady fined 10s.—Sent by Fred B. White (age 14), 25, Clarence Street, Haverton Hill, Middlesbrough.

GUILDFORD.

The cage bird section is the weakest in the Guildford Fanciers' Society, therefore it did not make a big display in the show held at the Corn Exchange on February 4th. ## GREENOCK, PORT GLASGOW AND GOUROCK O.S.

The society is composed of working men, and having had a severe set-back through unemployment and bad trade, and the seceding of the Greenock members, sprung into life again on Jan. 30th, by holding a club show in the Co-operative Hall, Crawford Street, Port Glasgow. It was not on a very large scale, but the quality of the specimens shown compared favourably with that of some of the best open shows in Scotland, and reflects the greatest credit on the 14 members who staged 117 exhibits, some of which deserve a special word of praise for the able manner in which they were put down. Mr. Forrester proved himself an ideal secretary, and was ably supported by his assistant, Mr. Sanderson. Mr. London took charge of the financial affairs, while the eagle eyes of Vice-Presidents Black and Brown were on the whole arrangements. Mr. J. Laurie (Govan) judged, and gave entire satisfaction. Mr. McMillan won 1 special for the best Scotch Fancy in hall, Mr. London that for best Crest, with a large green Crest cock, and Mr. Gemmel that for most entries. Mr. Sanderson won the cup for best British bird with a superb Goldfinch. Mr. Black exhibited a fine specimen of African grey Parrot, in splendid condition, and Mr. McKay put down a splendid specimen of the Blue-faced Amazon.

Second table show of the year was held on Feb. 3 at Gregg's Cafe, Laygate-lane, South Shields, before the ordinary business was commenced. The cards were placed by our esteemed friend, Mr. J. Turner, whose awards gave general satisfaction. The entries were not so large as we might have expected, but the quality of those exhibited was good.

ASHTON-UNDER LYNE & DIS. O.S.

Monthly meeting, held on February 2nd, in the P.S.A. rooms. The occasion was set apart for a pair show of A.V. Canaries, and it proved to be quite a success. There were over twenty pairs, and so keen was the competition that we were obliged to split the classes into Norwich and Yorkshires, Mr. E. Marlor taking the former and Mr. W. Foxall the latter. A good many visitors came to view the show. At our next meeting, to be held on March 2nd, our chairman, Mr. W. Foxall, is down to give us a lecture, entitled "How to Rear the Young from the Nest." All are invited, and admission is free.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

The society is to be congratulated upon another very successful members' pair show. This event took place on February 3rd, and proved one of the best held for some time. There was a very good entry and some excellent birds faced the judge, especially so in the hen Crest classes, which had the largest entry. As Cheltenham is such a great centre it was only natural that all the birds staged should be of very high quality, and were well worth going a long way to see. The classes for Mule and Hybrid breeding proved very attractive, and drew a good entry, some lovely Finches being shown. We should like to have seen more Norwich, but what were there were good, and useful birds. There was a good attendance of members during the evening. Mr. T. J. King judged.

DAWLEY (Salop).

First annual show of the newly-formed Dawley and Dis. C.B.S. took place in the club-room of the Lord Hill Hotel, on February 9th. The room is admirably suited for the purpose, and the birds were splendidly staged on quite up-to-date lines. The management took the necessary step of not giving too extensive a classification for their initial show; only five classes were provided, which brought together an entry of 78, an average of about 16 per class, which must have been very gratifying, and should stimulate them somewhat to extend the classification another year. The show was opened by Sir C. B. H. Soame, Bart. (who was himself an exhibitor). Taking the exhibits collectively, they were very good, but one or two classes stood clear away from the others for quality, namely, the Goldfinch or Bullfinch class, also the Mule or Hybrid. The winners, or indeed the first three birds in each of these classes, were very fine, the winning Mule of Mr. Callear's being a gem; it captured the special for best exhibit in show. The same exhibitor secured the special for most points. The secretarial duties rested upon the shoulders of Mr. H. Callear, and right well did he carry them out. Mr. A. C. Brotherhood placed the awards in a manner that left but little room for fault-finding.

WEST BROMWICH & DIS. C.B.S.

Pair show of Norwich, and judging competition at headquarters, on Feb. 2. Mr. Jones, of Bearwood, judged. We decided to give a silver medal for the judging competition for the nearest competitor who placed the birds to what the judge placed them, and there was also a special of 2/6 for the best pair of birds staged. The medal was given by the society and the other special by Mr. Carter. The competition was very keen, and the judge remarked that some very good birds were staged. Annual meeting postponed until March 2nd, on account of members not coming forward with their subscriptions, and ticket money for last show.

Jennings; 2, 3, jointly, 2 pts, Mr. Cooper and Mr. Capewell; 4, 5, jointly, 1 pt., Mr. Collier and Mr. Joyner; 6, Mr. De Maillet. It was proposed that Mr. Burke, of Small Heath, judge our table show of Yorkshires. At the conclusion of the competition the winner was declared and a very hearty vote of thanks passed to Mr. Jones, who ably responded, and said any time that we wanted him again he would be pleased to help us. Mr. Jones was very busy showing some of the members how the birds should be paired together. The members present said it was a most enjoyable evening and hoped they could always be drawn together in this or like manner, as it was good for both society and members.—DUFFIELD and JENNINGS, Hon. Secs.

SEVEN SISTERS B.B.A.

First table show, held on Feb. 1, for matched pairs of Plainheads. The entries were good, considering the club is only a year old. The birds were a grand lot, and should breed some good youngsters. Several of the exhibits changed hands and good prices were offered for pairs, but the owners would not sell. Mr. Terry judged, and gave every satisfaction. He congratulated the members upon starting a Norwich Plainhead Club in the town. 1, R. Edmunds; 2, R. Hately; 3, T. Simpson; vhc, G. Bennett; hc, C. Grenfield.—R. EDMUNDS, Hon. Sec.

YORK C.B.S.

Very successful show, held at headquarters, All Saints' Schoolroom, North Street, on February 8th. The show was for matched pairs most likely to breed winners, of each variety, and competition was very keen all through. There were three classes provided. The Norwich class numbered 23 pairs, and amongst them were some noted winners, and the judges had great difficulty in separating them, as most of them were of very high merit. The Yorkshires numbered eight pairs, and there were a few pairs of the real type. The A.O.V. numbered nine pairs, and amongst them were a few noted winners. Messrs. T. Boylo and S. Campling judged Norwich, Mr. J. Davison the Yorkshire, and Mr. H. Shorney the A.O.V. Canary. Their awards seemed to give every satisfaction. The secretary, Mr. A. Waud, had all the arrangements well in hand. During the evening seven new members were elected, and this was one of the best meetings held by our society. A large number of members and friends enjoyed a very pleasant evening in discussing the various pairs on exhibition. The usual vote of thanks was given to the judges for their services.

WALLASEY.

Annual night show for pairs and British birds was held on February 11th, in the St. Mary's Schools, Liscard. There was not quite so good a turn up as at last year's, the Britishers not turning up from Messrs. Hurst, Coffey, etc., owing, no doubt, to these teams being up at the Palace Show. Mr. T. G. Goodman, however, filled the Greenfinch class with six very level birds, all good and little between them, albeit the first had rather more substance, and promises to moult out a fine show bird. There were 36 pairs of Yorkshires, Greens, and Borders, and some really well matched birds were shown by Messrs. Hadwin, Benson, Woodman, Edwards, Dodd, Holford, and Hodgkins. There were three specials of £1 1s., 16s. 6d., and 12s. 6d., for most points gained at the Nest Feather, Old Show, and Pair and British Shows. These were won by Messrs. Hadwin 1, Woodman 2, Benson 3. Mr. Mallinson still holds the reins as hon. secretary, and takes the deepest interest in the progress and welfare of cage birds in the district. He manages to keep a cash balance in hand each year, and this shows shrewd management. Mr. Charles Houlton judged, giving every satisfaction.

YORKS., CL., ETC., PAIRS: 1, Dodd, fine upstanding Cinn. mkd. GREENFINCH (6): All the lot shown by Mr. Woodman, level lot; with a good moult, one or two should become show birds.

ATTERCLIFFE AND DIST. C.B.S.

Table show of stock pairs for breeding was held in connection with the usual monthly meeting. There were four classes, two for members and two for novices. Mr. Richardson judged the Yorkshires. Mr. H. Taylor the Norwich. Mr. Richardson did his part very well indeed, and the members present were well satisfied with the judging, and also the able way in which he dealt with questions asked him. Mr. H. Taylor, with the Norwich, could have done with the night to himself. He gave the novices some very good advice, and every question he answered was a lecture in itself, and we got some really good information indeed. A vote of thanks was given to both gentlemen for their services.

The show will be a success financially, as there was a good attendance during the evening, among the visitors being a number of well-known London fanciers.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held on February 4th, Mr. Currah presiding. Although the weather was rather bad, there was a good attendance. Letters were read from the following gentlemen, who consented to judge at our annual show, fixed for the 22nd and 23rd October: Messrs. J. Robson, Wm. Vardy, Mundell, and W. C. Duncan. We were instructed to get terms of a well-known gentleman to judge the Crest section. Fanciers will therefore see that we are aspiring after another good show. A letter was read from Mr. Macpartling, who, for certain reasons, wished to resign the office of vice-chairman. His resignation, after a little discussion, was accepted, and Mr. Jos. Mackenzie was unanimously elected to fill his place. The considering of the rules was left over till the next meeting. The following gentlemen were made members: Messrs. Parker (Newcastle), and J. Gordon (Gateshead). Fanciers will be pleased to hear that Mr. W. J. Taylor, who has been seriously ill this last few weeks, is about again. We feel sure our members will all join us in wishing him a speedy recovery.—CURRY AND HUTCHINSON, Secretaries.

SOUTH MANCHESTER C.B.S.

Meeting held at headquarters on January 25th, when a lecture was given by Mr. Norris on the breeding of the Yorkshire Canary. He explained in a very able manner the different points to look to in pairing, to obtain the best results. At the close of the lecture several questions were put to Mr. Norris, and were answered in a very straightforward manner. Mr. Fairhurst, our most prominent British bird fancier, was unanimously elected assistant secretary, and in him the society has obtained a very hard and willing worker, and one who will be a tower of strength to the already over-worked secretary. A vote of thanks to Mr. Norris brought an enjoyable meeting to a close. All members wishing to obtain a copy of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1909 can obtain the same through the secretary, price 6d. each.—J. S. SPILSBURY, secretary.

It was also decided to hold the annual tea and presentation of medals on March 6th, at the Horse and Groom Inn, tea to be on the tables at 5.30 prompt, and tickets 1/- each, to be had of any of the members. It was further decided to hold the meetings the first Saturday in each month, at 4 o'clock, on show days, and 7 o'clock on other Saturdays. ## LEYTON AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

The second annual meeting was held on February 13th. Mr. F. Williamson occupied the chair. The Secretary, in presenting his report on the year's work, congratulated the members on the progress made, the membership showing a substantial increase. There was also a financial improvement, and they were in a much better position than last year. The year's working showed a deficit of 1s. 7½d., with assets of £10 16s., and liabilities of £4 10s. As regards assets, which included staging, cups, etc., they would be pleased to see the association had adopted the businesslike principle of writing off 10 per cent. for depreciation. The balance-sheet was duly adopted. The officers for the coming year were elected as follows.—Mr. F. Williamson, chairman; Mr. C. Carr, vice-chairman; Mr. Ovenden, treasurer; Mr. B. F. Forse, secretary; and Mr. Burbidge, assistant secretary, all re-elected. The committee consists of Messrs. Bartlett, Billingsley, Cooper, Forse, Handscombe, Marshall, Roberts and Shankley. Messrs. G. Forse, to throw the membership open to the United Kingdom. The Chairman announced that he had a very pleasant duty to perform on behalf of members and friends, who had subscribed for and purchased a "Smoker's Companion," to show their appreciation of the services of the secretary (Mr. B. F. Forse), which he asked Mr. Forse to accept. Mr. Forse suitably replied, and assured all that they could rely upon him for doing his best for the Association in the future, as he had tried to do in the past. A vote of thanks to the chairman, and to all the officers of the past year, brought the meeting to a close.—J. A. BARTLETT.

Meeting held on Feb. 9th, when five new members were enrolled. After the business had been got through a lecture was given by Mr. Sam. Dean, on "Pairing," which proved very educational and instructive. A good discussion followed, which showed how attentive the audience had been. Mr. Dean deals with this subject in a masterly manner, showing coloured plates to convey his idea more fully. A vote of thanks was proposed, seconded and carried, to which the lecturer suitably responded, bringing a most pleasant and well-spent evening to a close.—A. LIVESEY, Hon. Sec.

NORTH MANCHESTER C.B.S.

The election of officers for 1909 took place on February 9th, when the following gentlemen were elected:—President, J. Balshaw, Esq.; committee, Messrs. Aspinall, Norris, Fish, Jones, J. Connor, Deakin, Crossley, Clarke, Woods, W. Robinson, Walshaw, Craighill, and Stirrup; treasurer, Mr. J. H. Kenyon; assistant secretary, Mr. C. A. Slater; secretary, John Davey, 34, Alfred Stret, Harpurhey. It was decided to hold three shows this year:—First Feather, June 19th; 2nd Show, November 13th; and New Year's Show, January 29th, 1910. Mr. Aspinall has promised to give a cup for competition in the novice section, each novice to nominate four birds at each of the three shows. Any person wishing to compete for the above should join at once.—JOHN DAVEY, hon. secretary.

STOCKTON HEATH & DIS. O.S.

Usual monthly meeting held in the Hall Cafe, on February 9th, Mr. T. F. Moss in the chair. A good number of members and gentlemen attended. It was decided to hold a table show on March 9th, instead of our usual meeting, and also to ask Mr. C. Dukes to act as the judge. Four new members were nominated, and after the usual business of the meeting, we were favoured with a washing exhibition by Messrs. Dukes and A. Stout, of Warrington. Much interest was displayed by the visitors present, and many questions were asked, which were answered very satisfactorily by Mr. Dukes. An instructive and interesting meeting was concluded by a hearty vote of thanks to Messrs. Dukes and Stout. By the local interest already shown, this society promises to be a great success.—BENJ. MOSS, hon. secretary.

DULWICH O.S.

A series of whist drives was commenced at headquarters on February 14th, with the object of wiping off the deficit in connection with the late open show. Considering the limited time the organisers, Messrs. Rogers and Bruty, had had to prepare for the first event, they must be heartily congratulated, for it proved a decided success. Forty ladies and gentlemen assembled, and were rewarded by a most enjoyable evening. Pleasure was expressed on all sides. Mr. G. F. Woolhouse presented the prizes to the successful competitors. Mr. Bruty won the first prize for gentlemen, and Mr. T. Kent the second; Mrs. Mazzoni won the ladies' first, and Miss E. Taplin the second. Mr. Thorp won the prize for the three highest scores. Mr. A. E. Rogers acted as M.C. The next drive will take place on March 4th. An early application for tickets, at 1s., will be necessary.—S. J. KENT.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

The following is the result of competition for challenge cups and gold medals for members:—Lancashire Challenge Cup, Champions:—J. Garner, 98 points; J. Vickers, 35; J. Oldham, 31; J. Swalwell, 7. Novice Gold Medal Lancashires:—J. J. Brookes, 39 points. Lizard Challenge Cup, Champlous:—J. Dewsnap, 170 points; J. Rukin, 151; J. Hampshire, 111; W. P. Barnes, 68; and W. Lawton, 20. Novice Gold Medal, Lizards:—J. Dickinson, 23 points. Mr. Garner wins Lancashire Challenge Cup outright, having won it three years in succession. It is only fair to say that Mr. Swalwell only competed at one show, the Palace, owing to his bird's late moult I believe, and Mr. Lawton at two shows, viz., Rochdale and Manchester or otherwise their points would have been far larger.—JOHN RUKIN, hon. secretary.

NORWICH P.C. OF IRELAND.

Annual general meeting held in the Avenue Hall, Garfield, Belfast on February 9th. Mr. J. Cummings (president) occupied the chair. A statement of accounts for the year was presented, which all present thought very satisfactory, owing to the poor support received from outside fanciers at our recent show. Two motions by Mr. Barclay were discussed, but were rejected. The election of officers for 1909 resulted as follows:—Mr. J. Cummings, president; Mr. W. Connell, vice-president; Mr. J. Stewart, 359, Donegall Road, Belfast, secretary and treasurer; committee for Ulster: Messrs. Carson, Wilson, Barclay, Thompson, Lavery, Ross, Scott, Leacock, Ronaldson, and Bamford; for Leinster: Messrs. J. J. Cloke, W. J. Birse, C. J. Mulligan, and J. Osborne. It was decided to hold our show a little later this year to let a little more time elapse between the Ulster O.S. and the N.P.C.C. of Ireland shows. Irish secretaries please note dates of show—7th and 8th January, 1910. Judge, Mr. Geo. Harland (Hull) for Norwich, etc. A vote of thanks to Mr. Ronaldson for the able way he had conducted the election concluded the business.—JAS. STEWART, sec. and treasurer.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held on February 3rd, at the Crown Hotel, Mr. Broadhurst in the chair. A long discussion took place on the proposition for a reduction in the annual subscription, which has remained at 6s. for some years. The voting resulted in the subscription being reduced to 4s. per annum, payable quarterly. Messrs. Hay and Caine were elected to membership, and the silver spoons won at the washing competition were handed over to Messrs. Paddock and Allen. The secretary then presented the balance-sheet for 1908, duly audited, which showed that the open show had been a success, a profit having been made, and although the subscriptions had fallen slightly owing to a few of the members failing to pay up, the balance in hand had been increased from £11 12s. 11d. to £14 10s. 10d. Mr. C. A. House (Walthamstow) was elected judge for our open show. The members much regretted to receive the resignation of Mr. Dawes, late vice-president, who has been a most able and useful member. He had always done his utmost to further the aims of the society, and was a splendid worker, especially at show times. The secretary was instructed to write him, asking him to reconsider his resignation. A vote of sympathy was passed to the Wolverhampton C.B.S. in the loss of their esteemed secretary, Mr. Howes; also to Mrs. Howes, and the members are to be asked to show their sympathy in a practical way. It was decided that a table show for "pairs matched for breeding" be held on March 3rd, and to have two classes each for Norwich Plainheads and Yorkshires, and one class each for Crests, Cinnamons, and Muling pairs. Messrs. Hyde and Co. presented an electro toast-rack for most points, and Mr. A. Paddock will judge; birds to be staged by 8.30 p.m. Several members having complained of the late hour of starting business, in future the meetings will start at 8.30 p.m. prompt, and members are requested to bear this in mind.—J. H. DE MAILLET, hon. sec.

LAISTERDYKE B.F.A.

The annual tea and concert were held in connection with the distribution of prizes, on February 11th, at the Railway Hotel, when 47 sat down to a substantial tea. After the spread the president, Mr. J. L. Turner, proposed the toast of "His Majesty." The musical contributions of the evening were ably rendered by Miss Fortune and Messrs. H. Robinson, Parker, R. Gelder, Cludera, and Sharp. During the interval the president presented the gold and silver medals to the successful members. The winners in the open classes were Messrs. L. C. Casey 1, H. Coates 2, and A. Bottomley 3. In the novice classes Messrs. A. Hiles 1, H. Shoesmith 2, and F. Oddy 3. The secretary's report showed a successful year's working, the society finishing the year with a very nice balance to its credit. The singing then continued, and all present spent a most enjoyable evening. The usual vote of thanks to the president, host and hostess, brought a most enjoyable meeting to a close.—A. BOTTOMLEY, secretary.

SOUTHERN NORWICH P.C.

Annual meeting held in the board room at the Palace on the 8th of February, 1909, when some of the prize winners were present, also a good few of the country members, among whom were Messrs. H. Frost, W. Ellis, H. Pennells, C. Douch, and A. J. Kilby. The chair was taken by Mr. G. Crabbe. The report of the year's progress was given by the treasurer. The club has been successful in meeting its expenses, and starts the New Year with a balance in hand to meet the outgoings for prizes and specials. The membership has increased with 37 new members, four only resigning. We have now over 150 paying members. The shows, which have had the support of the club, have been well patronised, and the successful winners in champion classes were Messrs. J. W. Rennie, 155 points (for £10 10s. silver challenge cup), 139 points (for £3 3s. cup); J. Hodder (for £1 1s. cup); E. Baker (for 15s. cup); Midgley (for 10s. special), Gill and Pethick (for 5s. special). In the novice section, for £1 1s. teapot, the winners were Messrs. H. Luff for Wimbledon, G. Brooks for Hastings, F. Inch for Swindon, and R. P. Harper for Horticultural Hall. The treasurer's cup was won by Mr. Pennell's (Bexhill), Mr. J. W. Ramsden's teapot by Mr. J. Hodder, and the goblet by Messrs. Gill and Pethick. Several rules were slightly altered, and it was agreed to give four extra guinea cups for the show season 1909—three to champion section and one for novice, for most points at one show for champions, for most points during show season for novice. The usual £1 1s. teapots were allotted to novice section. The presentation of prizes was a pleasing feature, and those who received them were highly satisfied the cups being much admired. The result of voting papers was read, and again Mr. E. Baker has been elected president, the committee for London being Messrs. J. W. Ramsden (chairman), J. Hodder, L. Brown, Curtis, Gardiner, Morris, Leclair; for provinces, Messrs. Midgley, Collings, Rennie, Kilby, A. E. Godden, and Dring. Owing to Mr. G. Leclair resigning office, Mr. L. Richardson was unanimously elected, and as the secretary could not find anyone present to relieve him from office he again accepted the post. After a vote of thanks to the retiring officers and chairman of the evening, the meeting broke up with good wishes for the new year of the club.—F. S. MATTHEWS, Hon. Treas. and Sec.

CLYDEBANK AND DISTRICT O.S.

Clydebank and Dis. O.S., the society (Scotch Fancy only) confined to the parish of Old Kilpatrick, held their monthly meeting in McGill's Rooms, Kilhowie Road, on February 11th. Mr. Thomas E. Dean, president, took the chair. The following gentlemen have agreed to officiate as judges at the forthcoming show on November 13th:—Messrs. A. Melrose (Galashiels), J. Dalgleish (Leith), R. Wright (Greenock), and W. Watson (Rutherglen). It was unanimously agreed to hold next show in Co-operative Hall, Humo Street. The secretary was instructed to send for some copies of the CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. Five gentlemen were proposed, and accepted, for membership, and new members can join the club up to May. The usual vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.—ANDREW KIRKWOOD.

CAMBRIDGE C.B.S.

The annual dinner took place on February 11th, at Ye Olde Castle Hotel, when between forty and 50 members and friends were catered for. Mr. A. E. Brooks presided. The loyal toasts having been proposed from the chair, and patriotically responded to, Mr. H. Arnold submitted "The Cage Bird Society," and spoke appreciatively of its objects. The toast was responded to by the chairman and Mr. F. Doggett. Mr. Brooks reviewed the past year's work, which had been highly successful, largely due to the energetic labours of their secretary (Mr. T. S. Moore), and referred with regret to the serious illness of Mr. W. Linsey, who, as they all knew, was a genuine bird fancier, and one of the original members of the Society. Mr. H. Arnold presented the medals won during the year to the successful competitors as follows:—Cup (won outright) and medal for most points in Canary section, Mr. A. E. Brooks; 2, Mr. W. Linsey. Medal for most points in British bird section, Mr. W. Linsey; 2, Messrs. F. King and C. Lambert (tied). Novice Canary section: 1, Mr. F. King; 2, Mr. Hard. Medals for introducing most members during year (given by Messrs. Doggett and T. S. Moore): Messrs. Cartwright and W. Linsey (tied). "The Visitors" was proposed by Mr. A. Edwards, and responded to by Inspector Cox and Mr. G. Lawson. The musical programme was capably undertaken by Messrs. Fell, Harvey, C. G. Williams, Cousins, H. Moore, Summers, Sewell, Thurley, and T. S. Moore. —A. MCQUARRIE.

ROCHDALE O.C.

There was a large muster of members and friends on February 10th, to hear a lecture by Mr. W. Lord, on "Wild Bird Life on the Hills and Woods Round Rochdale." I will mention some of the species that have been known to breed, and are breeding, here year by year:—Kestral, Sparrow Hawk, Merlin, Barn, Tawny, Short-Eared and Long-Eared Owls, Nightjar, Cuckoo, Kingfisher, Magpie, Jay, Waterhen, Cornerake, Curlew, Lady and Jack Snipe, Woodcock, Wood Pigeon, Dove, Rock Dove, Gull, Swallow, Martin, Swift, Song Thrush, Missel Thrush, Redwing, Fieldfare, Blackbird, Ring Ousel, Woodpecker, Green Woodpecker, Yellowhammer, Bramblefinch, Whinchat, Garden Warbler, Blackcap Warbler, Willow Wren, Whitethroat, Chiff-Chaff, Bullfinch, Goldfinch, Snow Bunting, Brown Linnet, Twite, Chaffinch, Golderest, Greenfinch, Tree Sparrow, Tree Pipit, Yellow Wagtail, Grey Wagtail, Pied Wagtail, and others. After he had given his lecture, questions were invited, amongst which were the following:—Could Mr. Lord tell the sex of the Corn Crake; which bird's nest did the Cuckoo use the most; could the Cuckoo change the colour of its eggs so that the egg resembled others in the nest? There was also a little discussion on whether the Swallows, Martins, etc., when they left these shores after breeding, bred in the warmer climes; did they have two distinct broods in one year? Mr. Lord said the only solution in that case would be to ring the young ones here, and have them watched by the naturalists in the other countries. By the way, Mr. Lord is now engaged in setting up a Sea-Lion that died in Rochdale. A vote of thanks to the lecturer, and to Mr. J. Naden, the chairman, brought a pleasant evening to a close.—J. BUTTERWORTH, secretary.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Annual general meeting held at the Crystal Palace on February 6th. Proposed by Mr. Cooper, seconded by Mr. Wyse, that a hearty vote of thanks be accorded the hon. solicitor for the trouble he had taken in counting the voting papers. The chairman, Mr. Robson, addressing the meeting, said he was very pleased to hear the glowing report from Mr. Trower. It was no doubt very gratifying to all the members to hear that the club was in such a flourishing financial position—a better position now than ever it had been in. They ought to congratulate themselves upon having such an untiring, energetic hon. treasurer. No one could fail to follow the explicit report of the secretaries, which gave every detail of the club's good work for the past year. It gave him much pleasure in proposing a very hearty vote of thanks to the hon. treasurer and secretaries. This was seconded by Mr. Hurst. Messrs. Trower, Plumbridge and Carr suitably responded. A very hearty vote of thanks was given the chairman. Proposed by Mr. Robson, seconded by Mr. Fulbrooke, that a very hearty vote of thanks be accorded Messrs. Trower, Page, Maxwell, Weston, and Vale for their gifts of special medals. The meeting was adjourned until February 25th for the election of officers for the ensuing year.—PLUMBRIDGE AND CARR, hon. secretaries.

(The business done was recorded in our report published in the Crystal Palace Show number.—EDITOR.)

HALIFAX F.A.

Annual dinner of the Association, held on Feb. 11th, at the Bear's Head Hotel. The affair was quite as successful as in previous years. Mr. F. L. Helliwell, president, presided, and supporting him at the head of the table were Messrs. C. Waghorn, secretary; W. Greenwood, treasurer; E. Ingham, monthly show secretary; E. Booth (Idle), R. Calvert, and others. In all, about 50 partook of an excellent dinner served by Mr. W. J. Lingard. The cups won by the society and other awards were displayed to advantage about the tables. Mr. R. Calvert, in the absence of Mr. J. H. Roberts, proposed the toast of "The Halifax and District F.A." The President responded. He regretted that cage-bird members did not rally round them better. He would like to see more of them members of that society. (Applause.) They had about 120 members now, and if they could only secure another 120, he considered they would then be doing very nicely. Perhaps then they might have a chance of holding an open show. (Applause.) The toast of "The President" was proposed by Mr. J. E. Quarmby. Mr. J. Savile briefly but suitably responded on behalf of Mr. Horsfall. At this stage the cups, medals, etc. (Mr. H. W. Walsh won the cage-bird cup and the silver monthly cup), were presented by the president to the winners. The toast of the "Visitors" was submitted by Mr. H. W. Walsh and responded to by Mr. Chadwick. The "Press" and "Artistes" were two other toasts duly honoured. During the evening songs were ably rendered by Messrs. Tasker, W. Bulmer, and Crossley. Mr. Chris Noble made an efficient accompanist.

The Housing and Treatment of Foreign Birds in Captivity.

The Guttural Finch (S. gutturalis).—This is another charming and also a fairly freely imported species, of which I have kept several, but never succeeded in getting them to nest. It is a most pleasing species for either cage or aviary; it is a good singer, but it does not utter its song so frequently as some of the other species. It is long-lived, and not unduly quarrelsome in a mixed series. In a state of nature its feeding grounds are open pastures, and its principal diet the various indigenous grass seeds.

Adult male: The upper surface is dull olive-green, upper back, blackish; lesser coverts, olive-green; median and greater coverts, dusky edged with olive-green; the inner primaries have yellowish-white bases on the outer webs; upper tail coverts, olive-green; tail-feathers, dusky brown margined with olive-green; crown of the head, sides of face, ear-coverts, cheeks, throat, sides of neck and foreneck, dusky black; breast, abdomen, sides of body and flanks, yellowish white slightly tinged with green, sides and flanks lightly mottled with black; under tail-coverts pale yellow; beak, blackish horn; legs and feet, brownish grey. Total length, 4½, tail 1⅝.

Adult female: Upper surface, olive-brown, median and greater coverts are dusky, edged with olive-brown, and have their tips whitish, forming a somewhat obscured doubled bar; primaries, flights and tail-feathers, dusky with olive brown margins; crown of the head, sides of face and ear-coverts, olive brown; the ear coverts, streaked with whitish-buff; lores, eye region, breast and abdomen, whitish-buff; cheeks and under surface of body, buffish-ochre; sides and flanks, light olive-brown; thighs and under tail coverts, pale whitish-ochre. Total length, 4ins. full, tail 1⅝ins.

Young males at first resemble the adult female, but show a good deal of black on the throat and crown, all, however, concealed by the overlying greenish plumage. Habitat: Brazil, Guiana, Venezuela, Colombia, extending into Panama, Ecuador and Peru. (British Museum Catalogue, Vol. xii.).

The Black-Headed Lined Finch (S. ocellata).—This is slightly larger than the preceding species, an equally desirable bird either for cage or aviary; its silken and refulgent plumage, varying according to light refraction, imparts to this species a very fine appearance, the contrasts being very striking, yet so happily blended that the effect is altogether pleasing, with an entire absence of harshness. For some time the Zoo stood alone in possessing this species, but now several others besides myself have this handsome little species in their aviaries and birdrooms.

Adult male: The upper surface is glistening greenish-black (steely-blue in some lights), except for a band of white tinged with grey, across the rump; lesser coverts, glistening greenish black; median, greater and primary wing-coverts, and flights, dull black, edged with glistening greenish black, the inner primaries are white at the base of the outer web, the secondaries are also similarly marked, but the markings are concealed by the greater coverts; upper tail coverts, glossy greenish black; tail-feathers, black; crown of head, glistening glossy black, with a few white spots forming a longitudinal streak down the centre of the crown (this white streak is not constant, and is almost invisible in some specimens); lores, eye-region and ear-coverts, throat and sides of neck, glossy black; cheeks, foreneck, breast, abdomen, sides of body, flanks and under tail-coverts, white; the foreneck and sides of flanks are regularly scaled or mottled, the feathers of these parts having the bases finely edged with black; beak, black; legs and feet, blackish; iris, deep brown. Total length 4¼ins., tail 1⅝ins.

Adult female: Differs entirely from the male, having her upper surface dull olive, rump and upper tail-coverts light olive; wing-coverts, dull olive with pale ends to the median and greater coverts forming a double wing bar; primaries, flights and tail-feathers, dusky edged with olive; crown of head, dull olive; lores, eye-region, sides of body, flanks, and under tail-coverts, buffish ochre; ear-coverts, pale olive; cheeks, throat, and foreneck, pale buffish ochre; breast and abdomen, whitish buff. Total length 4½ins., tail 1¾ins. Habitat: Upper Amazonia, Guiana, Venezuela, and Colombia.

The Lined Finch (S. lineola).—Adult male: Upper surface, lustrous greenish black; which is also the colour of the head and neck; from the base of the upper mandible there extends a broad longitudinal band of white across the crown of the head, and the base of each cheek is adorned with a similar stripe; wings, greenish black relieved with a white patch at base of primaries; a similar patch adorns the secondaries, but this is obscured by the greater coverts; tail, black; under surface pure white, washed on the sides and flanks with light grey; the throat is black; beak, blackish; legs and feet, leaden grey; iris, brown. Total length 4⅝ins., tail 1⅞ins. It ranges over South Brazil, Paraguay, Argentina, and Bolivia.

Adult female: Slightly smaller, differs materially in plumage from the male, being an olivo brown bird, lighter on the under surface; the wings are dusky brown, most of the feathers being margined with paler olive brown; tail, brown, margined with olive brown; lores, eye region, cheeks and throat, pale buffish ochre, and the breast and abdomen are washed with the same colour; beak, blackish brown; legs and feet, brownish flesh colour; iris, greyish brown. Total length 4ins., tail 1⅝ins. (Male and female described from life).

"Young males at first resemble the old females, but are generally more fulvous below and may be detected by a little black on the wing- and tail-feathers, or under the throat feathers, which form a dusky patch, followed by a whitish patch on the lower throat." (Museum Catalogue, Vol. xii.).

This species is but seldom on the market, and so far I have been only able to study living specimens at the Zoo. It is an alert and confiding bird, and has a soft and pleasing song. Burmeister states that he met with this species in moist wooded districts, and that they were to be seen in small flocks. It is found in Brazil, Guiana and Venezuela. Dr. Sharpe gives two sub species:—1, S. trinitalis.—This inhabits Trinidad, and has the longitudinal white band on the crown of lineola represented by a few white spots only. 2, S. amazonica.—This, the Amazonian form (male), has neither white streak nor white spots on the forehead. Total length 3.9 ins., tail 1.65 ins. The female is much browner than the female of lineola, and lacks the olive tinge of that species, and is much browner below. Total length 4ins., tail 1.6ins.

S. aurita.—Adult male: Crown of the head, nape, mantle, back wings upper tail-coverts, tail, lores, sides of face, ear-coverts, cheeks, throat and upper breast, glossy black with a greenish sheen; a half-moon shaped patch on sides of neck, and an irregular band of white across the rump; a double white patch at the base of the primaries and secondaries, only the former being visible when the wing is closed; sides and flanks, irregularly mottled with black. Total length 4½ins., tail 1¾ins.

"In some males the white spot on each side of the neck is connected by a white band across the lower throat, and the base of the chin is white; the lower back and rump are also white, forming a broad band. Between this and the form described there is every intermediate link in the Salvin-Godman collection—as, for instance, a male with a white throat band and the rump black; another with the rump white and entire throat black, with scarcely any sign of the white neck patch; another with a white band on the throat, the neck patch obsolete, and the rump marked by a few white-tipped feathers. How these variations have been brought about, whether by hybridisation or not it is impossible to determine, but I quite agree with Messrs. Salvin and Godman that only one species can be recognised." (British Museum Catalogue, Vol. xii.).

The adult female is olive-brown above, and pale buff tinged with olive on the under surface; pale yellowish on the abdomen; wing-and tail-feathers brown, edged with olive. She is slightly smaller than the male. Habitat: Central America.

S. lucluosa.—Adult male: The whole of the upper surface, head, neck, chest, sides of body and flanks, black; breast, abdomen and under tail-coverts, white; a white patch at base of middle primaries, forming an oblong wing-patch; beak, upper mandible whitish-grey, lower mandible, washed with leaden-grey; legs and feet, greyish. Total length 4¾ins., tail 1⅝ins.

The adult female is olive-brown above, darker on the rump and upper tail-coverts; wing- and tail-feathers, mostly brown, edged with olive; lores and eye-region pale buffish-ochre; ear-coverts, light-brown, with whitish shaft streaks; cheeks, throat, and under parts, fulvous-brown; sides and flanks, washed with olive; centre of abdomen, whitish; beak, upper mandible pale brown, lower dark grey; legs and feet, greyish. Habitat: Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, and Bolivia.

S. corrina.—Adult male: The plumage is entirely black, save for the patch of white at the base of the middle primaries, and the breast marred with a few white feathers. Total length 4½ins., tail 1⅞ins.

The adult female is olive-brown above; wing-coverts and quills, dusky-brown edged with olive; tail-feathers, brown with olive margins; under-surface, paler olive than the upper surface. Habitat: Central America.

My Experiences as a Mule Breeder.

By F. G. SAVAGE.

Some Future Plans.

The birds I propose trying this season and which have been flying together all the winter, are Goldfinch, Linnet, and Saffron Finch male birds, and five hen Canaries, all of largo Norwich type, two of which are supposed to be Sib. bred, mealy birds, two yellow, and a very dark green one. I also have a tame Bullfinch hen, which laid seven eggs last season, most of them in the seed saucer. Two of the eggs, when set under a Canary, proved fertile, but the young died in the shell when only just formed. I have also a Goldfinch hen Mule in with them, as they are reputed to make good foster mothers. By this method it will be seen that any young that may be bred must of necessity be Mules or Hybrids. I have never had much trouble with the Finches molesting the hens, which is so common in cage breeding. This I attribute to giving them plenty of work to do and space to amuse themselves in.

I find it best to use two or three-year old birds, both Canaries and Finches, as they stick to their nesting and feeding duties better than do the younger ones, and the young that are bred I consider are better birds, being more vigorous. Some Goldfinches make excellent fathers, feeding the hens while they are sitting, and looking after the little wants of the young ones when they first leave the nest. If the cocks do not take kindly to these duties, the hens generally raise their broods unaided.

Young Mules grow much faster than pure Canaries. I have known them to leave the nest when 14 days old, and feed themselves entirely in 21 days. They should be taken out of the aviary when they are capable of looking after themselves, as this gives their parents a better chance to continue breeding.

How to Feed Mules.

Respecting feeding, I give as a staple food good sound Canary seed in a flower pot saucer, placed on top of the upturned pot; by this means you effectively place it out of the reach of rats or mice. I also give the following seeds in separate saucers, never on any account mixing them, and giving a separate kind of seed every day in the following order, as I consider change of food as beneficial to birds in captivity as to wild birds, and they, we know, are continually changing their diet with the seasons. First, hemp, then German rape, linseed, maw (the seed of the opium poppy), crushed white oats, niger, and millett, with a liberal supply of cornflower and wild seeds, gathered in the summer, which I give just as plucked, only dried. Any of the following wild seeds are greatly relished:—Dandelion, shepherd's purse, plaintain (commonly known as rat's tail and way bread), thistle, and dock. For green food in summer and when breeding, I give chickweed for preference, also young lettuce and dandelion leaves. Groundsel I never use except the ripe seed heads, as I consider it too purging in its effects. In winter I give a good sound sweet apple, cut in halves, also ripe privet berries, of which many Finches and Canaries are very fond.

For an ailing Goldfinch, or one late getting into condition, there is no finer pick-me-up than a few small meal worms given daily, or good clean flesh maggots and their little brown chrysalis. To induce a bird to start eating them, they should be very lightly crushed.

In the breeding season I supply them with egg food daily, made by boiling slowly a fresh egg for ten minutes and then plunging it in cold water for a few seconds, which stops it from going discoloured. While it is still warm I press it with the back of a spoon through a fine wire sieve, along with an equal weight of stale bread crumbs. I then mix it all together with a fork; this ensures their eating the whole of it. If it is not well mixed, they pick out the egg and leave the crumbs in the saucer. I also give two or three times weekly a little piece of bread soaked in milk and slightly sweetened. For drinking and bathing purposes I give soft water in a shallow flower pot saucer, but I always withhold the bath in bad or frosty weather, only giving it on bright clear days, when the feathers will quickly dry.

About the vexed subject of colour-feeding I would say if you breed a good Mule you must certainly colour-feed it, or he will stand but little chance on the show bench; but with ordinary Mules leave them as nature ordained them to be in her own inimitable style. By following the system I have tried to make plain, any one may enjoy a most interesting and profitable hobby, while the great uncertainty attached to the breeding of a valuable bird adds greatly to the charm.

The Internal Arrangements.

Having got so far, the place should be ready for the fixing up of arrangements internally. When properly arranged ventilators have been put in, this will be a rather easier task than might otherwise have been the case, as there should be less risk of having a cutting draught in any particular position, as is too often the case, when one has to rely upon makeshift contrivances, or open windows to admit air.

This being so, one is enabled to choose the brightest and most cheerful position for the birds to occupy. The advantage of this should be self-evident when one considers the fact that the birds are to remain there, in all probability, permanently for months at a stretch, and in dark, dismal weather, as well as the more enlivening bright days of summer, so that the very brightest and lightest spot in the room—always assuming it is perfectly damp and draught proof—is not a bit too good for the caged birds, from which, mayhap, the owner expects to reap profit as well as pleasure. Of course, in the alternative case the avoidance of draughts demands first and prime consideration, and this question may compel one to choose a less cheerful position. But in every case the utmost brightness should be insisted upon, after these points have been duly considered.

Two Undesirables.

At least two positions may be universally struck off the list of "eligibles," and any others which a knowledge of the spot and the general requirements of the hobby suggest as being not wholly suited to the comfort and health of the stock, must be added to the list.

The chief "ineligibles" are any position coming between a door and window, or two windows which open, or a door and an open chimney; and a position coming between either of these and a low-placed ventilation opening. In such positions there is practically certain to be very harmful draughts recurring very often, which would work irremediable mischief among the birds in a short time. As regards an open chimney, this would be far best done away with altogether, and a simple and efficient method of dealing with it is to fasten fairly stout cardboard all over it, nailing it to the wall all round with carpet tacks, and then pasting it over with tough, thick, brown paper, finally giving it a coat of whitewash or distemper, which may either be made to match the walls all round, or (and this is perhaps the best), made of a darker contrasting shade.

The advantage of the latter plan is that the chimney may be located readily at any future time should it be desired, and many little accidents will be averted by always having the spot marked. When a job of this kind has to be done, it should of course, be attended to in the initial stages.

Cage Racks.

When the birds are to be bred in cages, a rack to stack them in should be one of the very last items to think of dispensing with. They are really of little trouble to make, and anyone who can make any sort of a cage should be able to manage a very serviceable skeleton rack, whilst a nest of shelves on the same principle as a bookcase without any doors is simpler still, and this form answers the original purpose of keeping the cages separate, and any unit always ready to remove at a moment's notice, without the least disturbance of any of its neighbours. The immense advantage of being able to do this can only be thoroughly appreciated when one has known what it is to have to remove a single cage from the middle or bottom of a stack piled one upon another, when the entire stack may have to be removed and replaced, with all the consequent disturbance of the inmates, at, perhaps, a critical time, or otherwise one has to run the risk of causing the whole stack to topple over by withdrawing the cage required.

The bottom tier of cages should be at least eighteen inches clear of the floor, and each support should be bound round with tin for a depth of six inches at or near the top to prevent mice gaining access to the cages by climbing up them. The thinnest of tin, such as can be easily cut with a pair of ordinary scissors, and after being bound tightly round the support nailed on with small tacks, is all that is really necessary, and is quite sufficient to effectually prevent the mice getting any purchase on its surface to climb with.

Do not place these obstructing bands at the bottom of the supports, as many are apt to do, whilst others place them in the middle distance, no doubt thinking that top or bottom answer equally the same purpose as long as they are there. On the contrary, there is a vast difference in the effect of a band at the bottom of the support, and one near the top. In the former position, if mice are plentiful, some at least of the most venturesome will soon find some means or a scheme of scaling the contested track and gaining access to the land, which, to them, at any rate, is flowing with milk and honey, whereas if the band is at the top and the supports made of planed timber, as they should be, the most agile member of the mouse tribe will not be able to negotiate it, for the simple reason that in climbing up the lower portion, it will have spent the best of its climbing sprint, and then having absolutely no grip or point to lean upon, and the smooth, hard surface of the tin affording no purchase for the claws, a certain defeat and ignominious fall infallibly awaits the adventurer.

All the cages in the stack (and if this rule is extended to all in the room, so much the better) should be identical in size and pattern for the same type of cage. That is, all breeding cages should be of the same size and pattern; all flight cages ditto; and similarly all single cages for keeping birds caged separately or for singing should agree in size and shape.

With this systematic arrangement, and one or two cages kept in reserve, if any particular cage should become infested with insect pests, or if a bird should die of suspected infectious disease, the cage in question may be removed for thorough cleansing and disinfection, and a fresh, clean cage put in the place at once, so that the stack of cages may always present the same neat and complete appearance, and there need never be any necessity to hurry and skimp the work of cleaning a suspected or dirty cage.

The same principle of having a single type running right through the room should be extended also to the seed hoppers and water vessels, egg drawers, baths, and nest-boxes or nest-pans, whichever one elects to use, so that all are practically interchangeable with one another. Such a universal system is a vast convenience, and will materially minimise the routine work by allowing the utmost economy to be observed in the time required for performing such duties efficiently.

The Question of Temperature.

Supposing, now, the erstwhile shed has become a properly appointed bird-room, and is ready for its prospective inmates. At this point it will be best to refer to the much-disputed question of heating the place by artificial means. The question so frequently crops up from the novice or new beginner, and almost invariably takes the form of a request as to what particular method of heating is best, that it would really appear as if every beginner commenced with a foregone conclusion that heat is essential, and he only wishes to know how he can best utilise it. When it comes to be generally understood that comparatively few birds need heated quarters, and that all varieties of Canaries, not only succeed well without heat, but in most cases are decidedly better, the knowledge will perhaps be more generally acted upon.

As things are now, when one breeder partly rears, moults, and keeps for the greater part of the year, his stock in an abnormally heated room, and others carry on similar operations without any artificial help in that direction, it is practically impossible to say whether heat should be used in any given case without knowing the leading features of each particular case. Thus, it would be folly for one living in a bleak cold position to set up an outdoor bird-room, obtain stock from a room in a more mild and sheltered part of the country, and which has also been reared with the aid of artificial heat, and try to breed with such birds in a normal temperature. Such an attempt must almost assuredly end in failure, and the end of the first breeding season will invariably mark the commencement of a run of trouble and adversities, which, as Shakespeare says, "come not as single spies, but in battalions," and one's star of good fortune will be in the ascendant if he gets any more good results out of those birds.

To succeed with birds bred under these wholly artificial conditions one is practically compelled to keep up such conditions at the commencement, though it will be quite possible to gradually modify them so that in the course of a few seasons a hardier and acclimatised type of bird is produced, which will succeed quite well without any coddling system.

On the other hand, if one wishes to start without heat, then it is absolutely necessary to make oneself sure that the birds obtained in the first instance have been reared and moulted under quite normal conditions of temperature. If they are also the produce of birds bred under similar conditions, then one has a fairly well assured chance of success with them, and it would be a bad policy to introduce heat among such stock. Cold, of itself, will very rarely cause the least inconvenience to a healthy bird not hitherto accustomed to artificial heat; but damp and draughts are the bane of the caged bird's life. Eradicate the two latter, and the former may be very largely disregarded.

What Form of Heat?

In case where it is decided to use heat, or where it is necessary for acclimatisation, there is nothing to beat a hot water pipe installation, with the source of heat either out of doors or in an adjoining building, so as to avoid having any fumes from the combustion of fuel in the room to contaminate the air.

The latter method would be the most economical, as the expenditure of fuel required to keep the pipes heated will be decidedly less if the furnace and boiler be under cover, than is the case when they are placed in the open air. Any other system which has its source of heat in the room, must have a protecting cover, provided with a flue pipe to carry the fumes off into the open air, and the outside end of this must also be provided with a suitable cap to prevent a down-draught.

A final word: Do not forget that heat may give rise to many draughts from little unsuspected chinks and crannies, so be on your guard to discover them, more particularly in a warm room.

Birds Eggs, and Some Problems of Colouration.

By J. B. BROWN.

I hardly like to enter a realm altogether apart from this subject, but I cannot refrain from pointing out that the Flora and Fauna of Australia and New Zealand exhibit species distinct from those of the northern hemisphere; the reason assigned (and I state it with all reservation) is, that those regions were exempt from the deluge which caused the destruction of all animal life in this hemisphere. We may therefore term the Apteryx the rudimentary or parent bird. From this tendency of antediluvian birds to colour their eggs the evolution of coloured eggs began.

So far, then, we have endeavoured to explain why some birds' eggs are white; we now come to why they are coloured; and the fact that the majority of birds' eggs are more or less richly coloured is also not without significance, yet but little has been hitherto done to discover what this significance may be. In some cases, without doubt, the pigmentation serves a purpose—that of protective resemblance. Examples of such eggs are seen in those of the Plover tribe, or of many birds that nest on the ground, in the similarity in colour to that of the soil on which they nest.

But how are we to account for the striking colour of those eggs which are laid in nests and hedgerows, and which are familiar to us all? An attempt has been made to include many of these under the head of protective colouration; but, this is certainly an unsatisfactory way out of the difficulty, for if protection was necessary, it must come from the nest: and if the nest be in a conspicuous position, it will not save the eggs. Then, again, protective colouration means between the egg and its surroundings, and we see little evidence of that in some coloured eggs laid in open nests, such, for instance, as the eggs of the Thrush. But this must be borne in mind, that nearly all birds are more or less migratory in their habits; the Thrush is no exception to this rule. Both the Lark and the Blackbird are also migratory, and so is the Robin, and yet Larks and Blackbirds and Thrushes and Robins remain with us throughout the winter. Or, as one writer puts it—"While certain birds appear and disappear with an astonishing regularity as though they heard the pealing of aerial chimes afar off and knew the bells of home. The Swallow, for example—there are others, like the Thrush, which will pass away so absolutely, that for a hundred miles not one of its kind will be seen, nor even a straggler; while in some other direction they will be seen all the winter through.

The Skylark, in particular, in this respect, baffles the ornithologist." Now, is it not possible to conceive that the early home of the Thrush was in tropical regions, where vegetation is of a much more brilliant hue than here, therefore the vivid colour of the Thrush's egg, long, long years ago, may have harmonised with the surroundings? The bird has not changed its habits, although it has changed its abode.

The Hedge-sparrow

again, is an example of this. It does not belong to this country exclusively. Its real home is farther south. In a large number of cases it is therefore probable that the colour of the shell has now no relation to the surroundings, although we may fairly assume that it once had, and that the reason why birds' eggs are thus coloured, must be sought for in a study of the early history of the bird, or an endeavour made to trace whence the bird originally came.

The Dipper or Water Ousel is an interesting bird to watch, and although a sort of first cousin to the Thrush, it differs from all the other members of that tribe. It is said to have the power of being able to run along the ground under the water. Its eggs are white, and a pair will produce two or three broods in a year. It has a sweet song as it sings to its mate when she is sitting, and if you hear it singing on a stone in the river, you may be sure its nest is not far away. A few remarks in general may be allowed on that great assemblage of birds known as

The Perching Birds.

They are represented by most of our common and smaller birds, and of which the form of the bill varies greatly, and is used as the basis of their classification or division into four minor groups, and among them white eggs are the exception. The first called the conirostres are distinguished by the conical shape of the beak. Of this group, the Sparrows, Crows, Starlings, Finches, and Larks are familiar examples. The Hedge-Sparrow does not belong to this group, but to the second, or dentirostres which includes the Thrushes, Flycatchers, Tits and Warblers, most of them live on insects. The third is called the fissirostres, or split-beaked, owing to the "gape" or mouth-opening of the beak being very wide and far back into the head, and pointed with bristles to serve them in the capture of their insect prey. The beak itself is short Typical examples are the Swallows, Martins, and Swifts. The fourth class are called the slender-beaked, with a long and delicate beak tapering to a point. This group includes all the species of Humming birds, and Honey-eaters, but are not common to this country.

There is also another group called the picopasseres, which includes our friend the Cuckoo, Parrots and the Woodpecker.

We have besides these all that great family of

to which belong the Plovers, and Lapwings, and all the goose tribe. Curiously enough the eggs of the Lapwings, generally four in number, are placed in the nest with the smaller or pointed eggs ends together, so that they assume a crossed appearance when seen in the nest. Of all these groups the most familiar to us are the first, to which nearly all our song birds belong, even the Canary, numbered as it is among the family of Finches; this family also includes all the birds we know as Linnets. I do not suppose I can tell you anything about the Canary that you do not know. In the wild state their song is said not to be so sweet as in the domesticated state. In the wild state the nest is built of roots, moss and feathers, and from four to six eggs are laid of a pale blue colour.

A word about the size of the clutches before we pass on. Since among birds the eggs must be incubated by the warmth of the parents' body, it is obvious that no more eggs can be hatched than the bird can cover. But even here there is a very considerable range in the number produced by different species. The Ostrich tribe, the game birds, and Rails are the most prolific, the Ostrich sometimes hatching out as many as thirty at a time, the produce of four or five females. The Partridge will sometimes hatch twenty, the Mallard twelve, the Teal fifteen; while at the other extreme we have the Guillemot with its one beautiful egg, the Pigeon with two, and the Gulls and Plovers with four.

It would appear that from these numbers, varying so much, that there must be some intimate relation between the birth-rate and the death-rate of the young birds; that in some cases there may be great difficulties in rearing them, and in others the rearing of them may be easy, so that to preserve the species no great number of eggs are necessary.

How is it Done?

How do birds colour their eggs? It is stated that the colouring matter comes from the blood of the bird. Admitted. But then the bird must first get the colouring matter into its blood, and that by means of the food it eats. Plants have the power of extracting from the soil the minerals which produce the colours of their flowers. The birds' food, excepting those that live on insects, is the seeds of plants. Now the seeds of plants contain the germs of this colouring matter, which is absorbed into the blood of the bird, who by some unknown process can distribute this colouring matter over the egg shell. Another theory is that the colouring of the egg has to do with the colour of the plumage. This can hardly be so. We have Blackbirds, but no black eggs. If this theory held water at all a Blackbird should lay a black egg, a white bird a white egg, and so on. But it is not so.

The nearest approach to a black egg is that of the Emu of Australia; but the egg is not black, but a dark green, harmonising in colour with the dark green leaves of the gum trees. That it has nothing to do with the plumage can be proved by the ordinary domestic hen—the hen which provides us with our breakfast egg. Certain hens lay brown eggs, others white. An experiment tried with a hen always laying brown eggs, and kept confined, resulted in its eggs becoming white. When released, and allowed to wander about the grass and under the trees, which all hens delight to do, her eggs, after a day or two, were again of that rich brown colour we all prefer to see on the breakfast table. I mention this as an interesting fact, and as a proof that birds seek this colouring matter for their eggs, as much as they seek for their food, and this, apart from what they may absorb into their blood from what they usually feed upon.

HEREDITY IN BIRDS.

Lecture Delivered before the Aberdeen O.S. on February 17th.

Professor J. Arthur Thomson, Professor of Natural History, Aberdeen University, delivered a lecture in Marischal College, on February 17th, on the subject of "Heredity in Birds." There was a large audience. The following report, taken from an Aberdeen contemporary, reaches us from the sec., Mr. J. Bryson. Mr. John Hector, president, who occupied the chair, remarked that Professor Thomson was so well known to them all as a lecturer that he needed no introduction from him. The lecture from first to last was dealt with in a most interesting and lucid manner, and was followed with the closest attention.

Professor Thomson said he was to deal in the first place with reports on experiments in breeding birds by various workers. He began with Darwin, who made experiments with Pigeons, from which he drew several conclusions, for instance, that a bird's inheritance seemed like a mosaic built up of contributions from many different ancestors, and that crossing different breeds was apt to give at first quite unpredictable results, but eventually "throw-backs" or reversions to the wild Rock-dove type, from which all domestic Pigeons seem to have been derived. Thus two black "Barbs," a red "Spot," and a white Fantail were the four pure-bred grand-parents of a bird which showed the general blue colour and every characteristic mark of the wild Rock-dove. The reversion theory was not much in favour at present, but it was difficult to find any other interpretation for a case like this. Similarly Professor Cossar Ewart mated a very propotent white Fantail male Pigeon with a female which was itself a cross between an "Owl" and an "Archangel," and the result was two birds, one like the Shetland Rock Pigeon in almost every detail, and the other like the Blue Rock of India. Of late, however, the rediscovery of Mendel's law had given breeders a new clue, and Mendelian phenomena had been well illustrated in the case of poultry. When two pure-bred members of related races differing in two sharply contrasted features were paired, the offspring all resembled one parent as regarded the contrasted character. The character exhibited was called "dominant"; the other which had gone into the background was called "recessive." When these hybrids were interbred their progeny showed both parental types in the proportion of three with the dominant character to one with the recessive character. The recessive paired together yielded only recessive—the pure type was there again. And of the dominants, one-third were similarly pure, as breeding with them showed. The remaining two-thirds, however, when interbred gave the same proportions as before. This Mendelian rule, with the reason for it, was illustrated in three different ways by means of specimens and models. What happened when the parents differed in two pairs of contrasted characters was also explained. Taking the work of Bateson, Punnett, Hurst, and others, the lecturer gave illustrations of Mendelism. In poultry, rosecomb, white plumage, extra toes, feathered shanks, crested head, laying brown eggs, and broodiness were dominant characters, as against single comb, black plumage, normal toes, clear shanks, uncrested head, laying white eggs, and non-broodiness. The very striking and beautiful solutions which Professor Bateson and Mr. Punnett had given of the problem of the Andalusian fowls and the walnut comb were explained. Professor Thomson went on to speak of the experiments of Professor Davenport at the Carnegie Institute of Experimental Evolution—a fulfilment of one of Bacon's dreams. His work on poultry was particularly interesting in illustrating that Mendelian phenomena might be somewhat obscured by imperfect dominance. Of much interest also was the conclusion that relatively new characters which had not been long established might be dominant over much older contrasted characters. In conclusion, attention was directed to Davenport's recently published researches on Canaries, which were by no means in complete harmony with the experience of expert Canary breeders, such as Dr. Galloway. It was much to be desired that the discrepant results be compared and discussed. A very promising inquiry likely to shed light on the mystery of sex was an investigation of the breeding peculiarities of Cinnamon Canaries which had recently been begun by Misses Durham and Marryat. It had a very remarkable parallel in the case of the common currant moth. Finally, Professor Thomson referred to this line of work, and expressed the hope that those present who were making breeding experiments every year would keep accurate records of all their results.

A short discussion followed the lecture, in which the principal speaker was Dr. Galloway. The meeting concluded with a hearty vote of thanks to Professor Thomson, on the motion of Dr. Galloway.

My Method of Canary Breeding.

By F. AYSCOUGH.

One would think that after all the books on this subject that have been published, and the information to be gleaned from CAGE BIRDS week by week nothing further remained to be said. Experienced breeders may, however, relate their mode of operations with advantage, though much useful information is undoubtedly withheld for fear of making grammatical or other errors. I can only advise those who thus hesitate to run risks like myself, and put up with criticism, consoling themselves with the knowledge that those of well known literary abilities, are not themselves able to escape the inevitable.

Of Paramount Importance.

Whatever one's object be in keeping birds of any description, whether for exhibition, or for other purposes, general management is of paramount importance, as no good can be done with birds that are at all out of condition. In my opinion hard and fast rules cannot be laid down with regard to feeding or breeding. In justification of this, I can only refer our readers to the back numbers of CAGE BIRDS, in which they may study the various methods adopted by many successful fanciers who have candidly related their experiences; or else, to cases which have come under their own observation.

When first commencing to keep Canaries many years ago, I was advised by an old breeder to give the oft quoted "three parts Spanish canary seed, and one part German rape seed, as a staple food." This practice I have scarcely deviated from in the least since that time, and the success experienced in keeping my birds in good health and feather in a cold room during all seasons, and the number of birds reared each year, deters me from experimenting with other methods. Of course during the breeding season, or preparatory to it, and occasionally at other times, some little addition is necessary, more essentially when we desire to bring the birds into breeding condition. A few grains of hemp on alternate days, and a very limited quantity of inga seed about once or twice weekly, given to the hens during February and March are no doubt beneficial. I commence giving a mixture of hard boiled egg and bread crumbs about a fortnight before pairing up. Dandelion leaves are very good at this period, but they are usually conspicuous by their absence just when wanted. All through the winter I dispense with the use of green food entirely, substituting sweet apple therefor.

A Critical Period.

Undoubtedly the most critical period is the early spring, so far as the breeding stock is concerned. After all the care and attention bestowed on our birds, the atmospherical conditions which usually prevail at this period often upset everything, if allowed to work their pernicious influence in our rooms. Having waited until the calendar indicates the time for commencing operations, we set to work and are so often, so to speak, "caught napping."

This is the time, when, if one is provided with some means of artificially heating the bird room, he is able to counteract the detrimental effects of a sudden change in the weather. Birds, which have already commenced to sit, do not as a rule appear to suffer from this cause, it is those hens which have either commenced to lay, or are already on the point of doing so. We frequently see it advised for birds to be allowed the use of a large flight or aviary during the winter months; but in a place where the influence of a little heat from some adjoining room is not felt—such as an attic where many keep their stock—it is not good policy in all cases. If a bird be in robust health, it has much to gain; but place a bird which is not full of vigour in a large aviary, and it remains inactive, and as a consequence, does not derive the benefit intended. It will generally be noticed that this bird has a very starved appearance on a cold night.

In cases of this kind, I move the birds into more cosy cages, with only the front open, allowing them a moderate amount of space for exercise, at the same time giving them a little egg food or bread scalded in milk, to which is added a sprinkling of maw seed, about twice weekly. The success experienced by this practice over a long period induces me to recommend its adoption.

Keeping a Health Stock.

Too much importance in my opinion cannot be attached to the subject of keeping the stock birds in the pink of health at all times; the success or failure in the breeding season depending entirely upon its attainment. Many would-be-fanciers have, no doubt, given up in disgust, as a result of pairing birds not in breeding condition, either by putting those together which are physically unfit, or which are not in breeding form. A lot of disappointment might be avoided—considering the large number of thoroughly experienced men in almost every town—if the novice were to consult one of those before pairing up; a real fancier, no doubt, would be pleased to give his advice.

A momentary glance is often sufficient to the practised eye to determine whether a bird is healthy or otherwise. Ill-health will not always prevent a pair of Canaries from going to nest and hatching young, but trouble is certain to follow with the offspring.

In putting the stock up for breeding, I frequently use birds from the previous season; but for preference, I would rather use two-year old hens, and early-hatched cocks from the previous year. These hens I always consider, go about their domestic duties in a more business-like manner, and are generally better feeders.

Another Important Consideration.

Assuming the foregoing difficulties to have been surmounted, the next important consideration is the young. Having separated the cocks when the hens have gone to nest, I return them about a fortnight after hatching, as I find the hens almost invariably do better by themselves. My young birds are reared on equal parts hard-boiled eggs and bread crumbs well blended together, also green food daily, consisting of either chickweed, watercress, or lettuce. In mixing egg-food, I use the white as well as the yolk.

After separating the young when they are about twenty-eight days old, I place them in a flight cage with a well sanded floor. Plenty of sand is not only useful for them to peck amongst, but it keeps the feet, which are liable to become caked and hard, quite clean. When this occurs, it often gives one the impression that one's feathered pets are learning a clog-dance on the cage bottom. At this time I give the usual egg-food, also crushed hemp and Canary seeds, adding a little soaked rape seed every alternate day. Green food I use very sparingly. This flight I use as a half-way house; afterwards placing them in a large aviary. If those were allowed to remain until a younger lot were transferred to it, the older ones, who by this time would be almost weaned from the soft food, and, probably well on seed, would devour all the egg-food. It is not a bad plan, however, to leave one voracious youngster to teach the juveniles the trick.

Plenty of clean water for bathing and drinking purposes; a good supply of fresh air (the room being free from draught), and an unlimited space for exercise, I consider the making of any birdie youngster in ordinary health. Often on a fine, warm day, I have taken a newly separated nest of young ones, in a portable flight cage, out of doors at the back of the house. It is then under the influence of a warm sun, that they enjoy to their heart's content a good bath.

The Red Mite Nuisance.

Red mites usually at this period become a nuisance in the breeding cages, in spite of every care, owing to the rapidity at which they accumulate. The free use of insect powder is essential, especially about the nests; but I also find it a good plan to have two or three breeding cages in reserve. By this means a gradual process of cleaning can be carried on right through the breeding season, and this prevents any cage from getting very dirty, as well as lessening the quantity of these pests. When a nest has been reared, a clean cage can be substituted for the second round.

I have tried almost everything but dynamite for the extermination of this nocturnal creeper, still he "comes up smiling" like the thief he is, immediately darkness supervenes. Probably after all, seeing the way in which our pets die after one's bestowing every care and attention upon them, the surest method would be to try and rear this tormentor of bird flesh.

It is a common practice to run two, and sometimes three hens with one cock, and though I have frequently done so myself, better results have been obtained in all respects when the birds have been kept strictly in pairs. With regard to the type of breeding cages, those with good, roomy, double compartments I find are the most suitable. These enable the young to get a fair amount of exercise when leaving the nest, and are kept much cleaner.

I seldom allow a hen to go to nest after about the first week in July; as late-hatched birds seldom seem to thrive, owing to the cold nights appearing, before the young complete their moult. Of course if kept in a living room they are not so liable to be affected from this cause.

After the breeding season, I usually turn most of my hens into the flight cages, and immediately commence to scald and scrub out the remainder. This is another period which I consider very important in giving attention to the adult stock. One may perhaps be excused after a long period of anxiety necessarily involved in rearing a large number of birds, if a kind of fagged feeling takes possession of them. But what about the breeding stock, after their efforts in rearing nest after nest, and being fed on stimulating food, to be suddenly deprived of this, with perhaps the moult already making its appearance? I do not believe in a sudden cessation of the treatment to which they have for so long been accustomed. As egg-food, etc., is at this period being prepared for the young, why not continue to still give the adults a small quantity? One is amply repaid for any additional attention bestowed on the old birds.

In conclusion, I might perhaps venture to say that "sluggishness" is a fatal disease for any bird keeper to be endowed with; and I would advise anyone contemplating a start in this hobby with a tendency in that direction to take the advice of "Punch," to those about to marry—Don't.

Herons and Eels.

It is said that the Heron will sometimes kill an eel by banging it on a stone in the same manner as the Thrush smashes the snail. Eels are no doubt awkward customers for a bird to deal with, but the Heron is clever. He catches the fish by the middle, possibly breaking the spine, and then quickly swallows it. This bird has been known to throw large ones on to the grassy bank of the stream, and then devour them at leisure.

WILD BIRD LIFE

Coming of the Wagtails.

We are nearing the end of the month, and although the night air is keen, and hard frost grips the land; yet the power of the sunshine is increasing, giving us several hours of lovely spring-like weather. This, together with the extra daylight, is causing a gradual change in the appearance of the country. The morning and afternoon song of the Skylark is delightful to listen to. He trills and warbles with all the ardour of his nature. These are his courting days; and he not only sings to his lady-love, but shouts defiance at sundry males within hearing. In some cases individual birds have settled down to certain quarters, and one can almost tell within a few yards where the nest will be located. A pair have taken possession of a piece of waste ground close to my garden, and at intervals during the day the cock bird soars above us trilling silvery melody to all who care to listen. We anxiously hope he will stay the summer, and wonder if he is the musician that pleased us so much last season. Once again the Pied Wagtails have returned from their wanderings, and just now nearly every patch of grassland, fallow, and common, contains one or more pairs. There have always been some odd birds to be seen during the winter, but these with us now must be part of the gathering which passed south during the autumn months. The Pied Wagtail is considered to be one of our resident birds, but like many other species is not by any means constant, and is subject to a good deal of restlessness during the spring and autumn. As the days shorten, these birds leave the more northern parts, passing southward; many no doubt leaving the country for a time. Here we are evidently situated right in the track of these dainty wanderers, for at certain times the fields and hedgerows are crowded with immature birds of the year, with here and there an old one, conspicuous by the density of his markings and larger size. They move in numbers, only staying a few days in the district, feeding in small flocks fairly well together. No doubt, nearer the coast they mingle with other migrants. Their return is conducted in a different manner, for although there are many about, they have now paired, and each couple keep to themselves.

Chaffinches in the North.

The gunboat "Africa" when off the coast of Iceland, had a flock of Chaffinches fly on board. Many of them were so exhausted that the sailors were able to catch them, but as they had no proper seed were unable to keep them. These birds were evidently driven out of their course by contrary winds.

A Lady Egg Gatherer.

There is a lady egg collector living near Deal, in Kent, who fearlessly ventures over the cliffs during the egg season. Upon one occasion she had to be rescued by a coastguardsman, as the cliff had given way and prevented her returning. One requires considerable nerve to trust to a single rope when suspended in mid-air.

Our Smallest Duck.

The beautiful little Teals are our smallest ducks, and as handsome as any birds we have. They are very constant to one spot, and a brace or two may generally be found upon some local mere or marsh. When disturbed they fly off very fast and straight, but may be put up again the next day in the self-same spot.

The Precocious Robin.

As usual we read of early nests of birds. Usually it is one of the Thrush family, but this season the friendly Robin appears to be the one most anxious to propagate its species. The courtship (which performance is well worth watching) has been finished some time in the southern counties. These early nests seldom escape either boys or animals.

Resort of Wild Fowl.

The Inverness Firth appears to be the resort of hundreds of wild fowl during the winter months, and among them Mallard and Teal appear to be the most common. This year the Brent Goose has put in an appearance. These birds come from the Arctic regions, and their early appearance, is considered to be a sign that their Northern feeding ground is frozen over.

Birds Crossing the Sea.

It is reported from the scene of the great earthquake that clouds of Crows and Ravens have found their way across the Mediterranean from Africa. This mysterious intuition of the disaster is most wonderful. It is well known that in Africa if an animal or human being drops under the scorching sun, Carrion birds will flock from all quarters, although previously not one was in sight.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

AMBLERS' strain of Yorkshires is not of a few weeks' standing like many of the advertisers of to-day, but is the study of a lifetime, and for thirty years has been acknowledged the finest strain on earth. This is proved by the noted champions we have bred, sold, and exhibited during that period. We have not gone in for any Yorkshire competitions, but this last season our team of Yorkshires have won more first prizes than any team of Yorkshires in the Fancy at the number of shows exhibited at. Owing to serious illness, have not been able to offer our birds for sale, so have an extra choice lot of Yorkshires to dispose of. Cocks of wonderful length, correct shape, and full of quality; hens long-sided, full of breed, and teeming with quality. These are the sort to breed champions, and are guaranteed to give satisfaction. Pairs from 20/- to 60/-, hens 10/- to 30/-; also a few winners for sale, approval.—Messrs. ## GENUINE PROOF.

Who has the (oftentimes told) best stock in Yorkshire. Having done what no other fancier has done, winning the championship in both Y.C.C. (Ramsden six guinea cup), and C.M.Y.C.C., this making it our third time in succession winning 1st prize in Cinnamon-marked competition; also winning Ramsden special for most points at all Yorkshire Union shows and running second for Shackleton's 30 guinea trophy, only losing by two points, counting 326 points with only three birds to count, finishing up with more 1sts at Crystal Palace than any other exhibitor, three 1sts and championship diploma; now that shows are over, we have for sale several absolute winners that have helped to win these competitions; also a few real good stock birds, at 15/-, 25/-, 35/- per pair, as it is impossible for us to breed with them all; all sent on approval; cash or deposit.—Dudley Hill, Bradford.

The H. W.N. Challenge Cup 1908-9.

At Crystal Palace my birds have won first prize in every Yorkshire class (except Greens), in three years combined. I also won at Crystal Palace in two successive years more firsts, medals, and special prizes than all other exhibitors put together during the same period. I state facts that can be easily verified, and not wild exaggerated bounce to catch the inexperienced fancier.

My birds come to the front year after year as regularly as the day dawns, which is ample proof that this is the most pure and reliable strain of the present day. The chief characteristics of my strain are length, position, style, length of leg, and superlative quality of feather, combined with plenty of nerve, which is such an essential quality in a really high-class Yorkshire.

To those who wish to breed their own winners, now is your opportunity, as all birds are in perfect health and condition and cold room bred. Three days' approval. Stamped address for particulars.

The times were: Hanging, 3 minutes; singing, 10. Mr. E. Royle judged. 1, Bates (3min. start), 9min. 19sec.; 2, Cockshaw (4min.), 7min. 41sec.; 3, Bordman (3min.), 7min. 43sec.; 4, Lee (2min.), 7min. 43sec. The experiment proved in every way a success. ## OBITUARY

Mr. JAMES McLAREN (Glasgow).

Another blank has arisen in the ranks of the breeders and exhibitors of the Scotch Fancy Canary in the West of Scotland, writes Mr. Thomas Smith (Glasgow), by the passing away of Mr. McLaren. He was a member of the Scotch Fancy National Derby O.A., the Glasgow Confined Derby O.A., the Glasgow Southern Confined Club, and other cage bird associations. His familiar presence and kindly smile will he missed at the leading exhibitions. He was a genuine and keen fancier, and took an interest in the Fancy generally. Being of a retiring disposition he would not take office, but he was ever ready to help in his own way. He was one whom the Fancy can ill afford to lose. I am sure readers of CAGE BIRDS will much regret to hear this sad news, and that they will all join in sympathising with his widow and family.

Mr. A. HIGHTON (Leicester).

I am sorry to inform you, writes Mr. J. A. Tyler, secretary of the Leicester C.B.S., that Mr. A. Highton, one of our oldest members, passed away on Sunday morning, February 21st. He had not been well for some considerable time, but that dreadful disease consumption took him very rapidly towards the end. He was well respected and a true fancier.

The Wallsend and Mid. Tyne C.B.A., writes Mr. Jas. Johnston, the hon. secretary, are having their annual show on the old dates, viz., November 12th and 13th. The judges for same were elected at the monthly meeting held February 25th, and after a deal of discussion and voting the following gentlemen were appointed: Messrs. J. H. Roe, J. Wilcox, and J. W. Bruce.

Coventry Godiva C.B.S. will hold a pair show, writes Mr. W. H. Bray, the secretary, at the Chequers Hotel, Little Park Street, at 3 o'clock, on Saturday, March 6th, admission free. Friends are earnestly invited, as we are trying to encourage the Fancy as much as we possibly can. Fanciers wishing to join can get all information either from myself or Mr. Symonds, the assistant secretary.

Mr. H. J. Chittenden, of Bolton Woods, will give a lecture on his experiences in the breeding and management of the Yorkshire Canary at Bentley's Temperance Hotel, Clockheaton, on March 9th, writes Mr. Fred Allen, hon. secretary of the Spen Valley F.A. The chair will be taken at 8 p.m. There will also he a pair show (two classes). Fanciers and friends are cordially invited.

I was agreeably surprised, writes Mr. C. Dukes (Stockton Heath), to see my yellow cock Canary depicted in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. It is the same bird that won in the unflighted class at the Crystal Palace in 1908. The yellow cock that won in the unflighted class and the yellow hen which stood 4th were both bred from the above, which goes to prove the value of pedigree breeding. The drawing is a life-like illustration of the bird, and reflects great credit on your artist, Mr. Norman.

The Crestbred Canary on our front page this week is reproduced from a drawing taken by Mr. R. G. Joliffe (Glasgow). The owner of this promising bird, Mr. John Sharp (Brighton, Polmont Station, N.B.), writes: "My young Crestbred cock was a late-hatched bird, and had a bad moult, which handicapped him last season, but, nevertheless, he stood first at Falkirk, second at the Scottish National, and v.h.c. at the West of Scotland Show. With a good adult moult I hope to do well with him."

I wish CAGE BIRDS every success, as it is the best cage-bird paper in the world, and, I should think, will soon be in every home.— S. F. MCINTYRE (Airdrie).

At our meeting held on February 20th, writes Mr. E. Craven, hon. secretary of the Bramley O.S., we decided to withhold our annual show for 1909. The syllabus for the ensuing year was made out, and the meetings promise to be very interesting and encouraging to members, both old and new. Also I resigned my position as secretary, and Mr. A. H. Craven was elected secretary; therefore all communications with respect to the society must be sent to him, at 28, Whingate Avenue, Armley, Leeds.

From Mr. E. E. Pass, the well-known cage-maker, of Annesley Road, Hucknall Torkard, comes his 1909, catalogue, comprising all the latest styles in breeding, stock, flight, and show cages, together with nursery and bath cages, wire fronts and other items indispensable to the well-ordered bird-room. The prices are very favourable to the customer, and we recommend readers to obtain a copy of this list, which will be sent post free by Mr. Pass, on receipt of a postcard. Mention CAGE BIRDS when writing.

We hear that at the recent matched pair show held by the Watford and Dis. C.B.S., Messrs. Fox. Bros.' (the now noted egg and biscuit food, Lark food and other food specialists), and Partridge Bros.' (local seed merchants') stalls proved a great attraction, and were well patronised by the visitors. The Partridge cup was also on view at the latter stall. At the close of the show Messrs. Partridge and Co. bought up Messrs. Fox Bros.' goods. This was not a case of the fox stealing the Partridge, remarks our correspondent.

We are informed that Liverine, Limited, of Grimsby, the well-known food specialists, are very rapidly developing their cage, bird seed, and food department. Mr. Alderman King, the managing director of the firm, is the inventor of fish biscuits for dogs, and the well-known Liverine for poultry. In the pigeon world the firm's registered Health Grit is a household word; and already among packed foods there is no seed mixture for Canaries and other seed-eating cage-birds better thought of than their "Sing Song," while their penny Lark foods are simply unique in quality and price. Messrs. Liverine are said to be the largest importers of flies and ants' eggs in the kingdom. Readers should note the firm's advertisements in our columns, likewise send for their price-list.

A Scottish Crest Club Cup.

At the annual meeting of the Scottish Crest Club, held on February 27th, in Glasgow, a discussion took place anent the Robert's Cup, and it was passed: "That the secretary he instructed to notify Mr. Roberts that unless he hands over the cup to the S.C.C., we decline to continue competition until we get possession of it."

A Nottingham Presentation.

A special meeting of the Nottingham and Dis. Permanent O.S. was held at the Grapes Inn, Nottingham, on February 27th, writes Mr. W. Beal, the secretary, for the purpose of presenting the late president, Mr. F. Cooke, with a silver mounted umbrella as a small token of esteem and respect for his long and faithful services to the society. Mr. Clay, who presided, made an appropriate speech, and wished Mr. Cooke the best of health and happiness on his retirement.

An Old Friend.

A winter or two ago friendship grew up between a Robin and the keeper of a certain Scottish curling pond. The bird not only learned to feed from his hand—perching on his wrist, and picking crumbs of bread out of his palm—but, responding to his call—a low whistle—followed him up and down the ice, and accompanied him inside the cottage which serves as a clubhouse, and waited about the fireside until he made the room tidy. For some months the pond-keeper was unavoidably absent from his post, and on the day when he returned, and was engaged on his customary work, something struck him smartly on the ear. At first the keeper thought some boys had thrown a fir cone, but when the tap was repeated he discovered that his old friend the Robin had recognised him.

A Death Trap.

A remarkable slaughter of wild birds has occurred at Strumble Head Lighthouse, Fishguard, according to the "South Wales Echo." Last Tuesday night (February 23rd), the light-house-keepers (Mr. Young and assistants) were startled by a thundering sound against the lantern looking channel-wards, and on going out to ascertain the cause, found hundreds of Puffins, Blackbirds, and Finches piled in a heap on the parapet surrounding the light-house. Apparently attracted by the powerful light, the birds in their swift migratory flight collided with the huge body of glass, the concussion killing them outright. In hundreds of instances the beaks of the poor innocents were bent backwards, whilst scores of others which had cannoned against the foremost of the flock lay wounded. Water-rats quickly revelled among their prey, and many were devoured, their feathers strewing the rocks below. The keepers gathered the birds up in buckets and piled them on a large table, the huge heap of the feathered tribe being a unique but pitiable spectable. On Thursday night last another smaller flock of birds fell victims in precisely similar manner.

Chapter XXVII.—My Silverbills.

A man influences his fellows very little by what he says, by tricks of manner, or by want of them, by the food he eats, and the particular taste in liquor he happens to possess; his practical effect upon his world results. from the amount of fresh air he takes, from the wholesome thoughts he begs or steals from bird and beast and tree, from the free wind of charity. These things cling round him, giving out fragrance, as of herbs that grow in a well-tended garden, to every passer by. It is no credit, you will say to the man; the credit is to the birds, the beasts, the jolly wholesome earth; but credit or no, he makes for good, be it much or little, and in a world that is too much given to shut out winds and call them draughts. In these papers I try to bring a little of nature into our daily life, and for this I claim some meed of credit.

It has struck me that perhaps in the past I have spoken too often of rare and costly birds; I propose therefore in this chapter to leave the clouds and descend to common earth. We all love change. To me anyone who does things with absolute regularity appears about as insipid as toast and water or cold veal, or some such washy but harmless form of refreshment, while the unexpected seems to me the very wine of life, and the changefulness of people their only really salient point of interest. Have you not often been told "So and So" is so delightful, always the same, always to be depended on?

Now I don't want people to say that about me. Mind you, I don't think they will, because those who know me best, are never surprised at anything I do, but then all do not know me so perfectly. So I want to surprise them, and I am going to do so by writing about a nice common or garden bird, the Silverbill. I don't like to remember how many waters have run under the Bridge of Time since I saw my first Silverbill. It was certainly "Consule Planco," which for the sake of the weaker brethren I will turn into English—"a very long time ago."

At the time I am thinking of, Silverbills were "horribly common;" you could see them by hundreds in the dealers' cages; but I have noticed of late years that all these little Finches are imported much less commonly than of old. I can only suppose that the dreadful mortality has caused the trade to be unprofitable; but as I said, in the days of which I am thinking, Silverbils were the easiest of birds to obtain, and their price so modest that anyone could afford them. I suppose that most people would speak of Silverbills as sober little birds, but then, as a certain celebrated lady once said, "comparisons are odourous."

A dear American friend once told me she thought the Colosseum at Rome "pretty," but liked the Court House at S. Louis better! Perhaps the Silverbill is rather soberly clad, but his elegance of shape atones, and more than atones, for any deficiency in this direction. Some people are never satisfied, they remind one of Oliver Wendell Holmes' ultra careful housewife, of whom he tells us, that even if the Angel Gabriel had come down from heaven to visit her, she would have complained that he littered up the place by dropping his feathers about!

I will allow then, for the sake of peace and quiet, that the Silverbill is not much to look at, but then he only resembles a good few of my readers.

When I purchased my first consignment of Silverbills, I confess that I knew very little about birds. I believe I bought about ten, in the hope that I should get some of either sex. I may say in passing, that Silverbills are rather difficult to sex. I was quite a long while in finding out the secret. In a big dealer's cage they all look much of a muchness, and but for the fact that one here and there will occasionally raise his neck and sing, I could see no difference whatever. After many days of patient watching, I discovered that the hens had rather finer profiles, and that the line of brown on the wing flights was much narrower in the hens than in the cocks. For a beginner it would be much the safest plan to buy a dozen; the cost will not be ruinous—probably about 18s.

I put the whole dozen out into a large garden aviary, the first I ever made, and anxiously waited for results. I had not long to wait. In about a fortnight I saw some of the birds holding a grass stalk in their mouths, and exercising a most comical sort of dance up and down on the perch; there were the cocks making love. In a few more days the advances had been accepted, and I saw the nest-boxes being anxiously inspected, one by one, for possible future homes. In these far away days I used cigar-boxes for the little Finches, nailed against the walls, with a circular hole cut in the middle. I found these very favourable nesting sites, both with Silverbills, Cutthroats, Zebra-finches, and many others.

I supplied plenty of dry grass for nesting material, and a few feathers. The hint was soon taken, and I had two or three pairs busy building within a week. I was rather surprised, as I believe Silverbills are shy breeders. At least, I have come across very few people who have successfully bred them.

In about a week some of the hens disappeared in the boxes, and then ensued an agonising period of suspense. Would anything happen? had eggs been laid? should I just give one little look? Inclination said, "Yes;" prudence whispered, "No." For a marvel prudence won. After about twelve days, as near as I could judge, the cock began to visit one of the nests at frequent intervals, and after a few moments inside the nest, popped out and flew away to the end tray. I thought this looked promising, but I still refrained from looking at the eminent risk of something giving way inside. At last, one morning as I was passing the next-box I thought I noticed a smell. A few hours later—it was mid-summer weather—the smell had become violent, and it was unmistakably of organic origin. I waited till evening, and then I proceeded to investigate. In the meantime the bodies were going bad—rapidly bad, and the smell for a mile round was strong enough to take the paint off a door. I lifted the lid of the box gingerly, and there I found four little black and swollen bodies, and there was no need to inform me that they were my first brood of Silverbills! However, I consoled myself that things might have been worse, as the man said in the old legend when the Devil came to carry him off to Hell? "How's that?" asked an acquaintance. "Why the Devil," he answered, "might have made me carry him!" I felt that in my case things might have been worse. I might have lost the hen. Now she was sound and well, and therefore I had every chance of succeeding in my second venture.

The birds did not seem much affected by their loss. Within three days they were busy nesting again, and they selected a box quite close to their former home. The old drama was repeated, and for some weeks I had to possess my soul in patience.

The cock once again began to visit the nest, and then I knew that I was going to have another chance, but as I did not dare to look to see how matters were progressing, it lifted the performance into what is called at the theatre, a "situation of suspense." In vain I tried, like Moses' sister, to "view afar off." I could see nothing. The inside of the nest looked as blank as a wolf's mouth. A few hours later, however, I had a little bit of comfort, and a little bit of depression, for I discovered a dead youngster beneath the nest-box. It was not exactly a pretty object, laying in a state more approved of by Praxitiles than by the general public nowadays.

Still there was a bit of comfort in knowing that the eggs had hatched.

A few days later, I tried to fancy that there was not a strong and fruity smell near the nest, and I tried to suggest to myself reasons why the old birds seemed to avoid it; but I could only keep up the delusion for a few hours, and then I had to own that the feared had really happened. I felt as disgusted as a gourmet, who, sitting down to some favourite dish, is robbed of appetite by finding the corpse of a cockroach in it.

But I am never discouraged by my lack of success. Rebus adversis, fortis et animosus. A few more days and Hope set her bow in the cloud. The birds were evidently getting a little bit tired of their labours, for this time they did not trouble to build a nest, but callously appropriated a box that had been nicely lined by a pair of Zebra Finches, and then deserted for a new site, a very common habit of Zebras, by the way. My belief is, that finding the nest ready made, they said, Wemmick like, "here's a bed. Let's lie in it," and they proceeded to do so, or rather, the hen did. This time things went quite well, and in due course I became the proud and happy owner of four little Silverbills.

They looked exactly like their parents, only perhaps they were a little slighter in build and paler in colour; but in a few weeks I found it impossible to distinguish between parents and children.

During the next season or two I was successful in breeding many more, but after a time I cleared them all out to make room for other and more valuable varieties.

Silverbills are very easy to keep, and if turned out at the right time they are comparatively hardy. June is the best month for enlarging, for then the weather is fairly settled. Give them good millet seed and plenty of cuttlefish bone, and they will be perfectly contented. In cold weather they require a sleeping place, and I believe that more deaths occur for want of knowing this than from any other cause. Master Silverbill has no idea of sleeping on a cold twig if he can find a snug shelter anywhere handy.

I quite expect that some of my readers will take me to task for writing on such common little birds as Silverbills. Let me tell them a little story. Morier when at Darmstadt took supreme trouble to get the best Havana cigars for his friend. On one occasion, when he was going to have a party, his supply failed, and he said to a friend, "What am I to do? My reputation is ruined." "Nonsense," was the reply, "leave everything to me." Ere long his friend appeared with a number of cigars, bought in the town. "Gracious heavens," said Morier, "I can't offer these things. They are poison." "Not a bit of it," rejoined the other, "all these men who are coming are unable to buy the best cigars. They can only buy the second best." His friends came, and Morier watched the result in fear and trembling. When the entertainment was over, one of the guests said, "you always give us admirable cigars, but this evening you have surpassed yourself." The moral is fairly obvious; let us hope you may all see it!

Some Popular and Desirable British Birds.

By CHAS. HOULTON.

Being the substance of lectures recently delivered before the Liverpool and Widnes Ornithological Societies.

My discourse will be confined to a consideration of some of the most popular and desirable British cage birds for exhibition and song. I think I may divide them into three groups, as follows: 1, Seed Eaters (proper or true Finches); 2, Part Seed Eaters (or omnivorous birds); and 3, True Insectivorous Birds.

Seed-eaters and Their Treatment.

The first group consist of the Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Linnet, Greenfinch, Hawfinch, Siskin, Redpoll and Twite. All these are very desirable cage birds for show, whilst the Linnet is far and away the best songster in this group. All these, except the Bullfinch and the Siskin, may have a good supply of hemp seeds. They may all be supplied with cracked sunflower seeds. Finch and Linnet seed mixtures may now be bought at all seed shops, and if these are mixed together they form a good staple supply. The oat groat is a good grain to give them. Of course, according to the conditions of housing the various birds, the seeds may be given in bulk, mixed, or each variety of seed in separate pots or seed vessels of any other sort.

In a flight cage or aviary, it is best to keep the seeds separate, as some birds will go for one kind and some for another, and when they are all mixed together the birds scatter and waste a lot in searching for their favourite seed. Any or all of the following may be given: Sunflower, hemp, groats, Canary, summer and winter rape (these two are commonly called German rape and Cole seed respectively), golden or Indian rape, maw (both white and blue), thistle, teazle, niger, and flax (both white and brown, which latter is commonly known as linseed). I used to give my show stock tit-bits in seeds, such as cabbage, turnip, lettuce, and other vegetable and herb seeds. I got large sacks of barn seeds and sieved them, and used them freely, particularly for the dozens of newly-caught birds I secured every year to select my future show birds from.

Exercise Important.

It is most important to give all newly-caught birds plenty of room for exercise, and also a liberal supply of the natural wild seeds and grain for them to feed upon. With a supply of the various dried seeds as well, and plenty of fresh water every day, very few will be found to die off, comparatively speaking.

A light spray of water blown over them now and again will do no harm, but, on the contrary, a lot of good, for it will make them preen up and dress their plumage; and if it damps the hard seeds slightly, they will swell a little, and when the birds eat them, they will be the more easily digested. A dose of Epsom salts once or twice a week in the drinking water (just enough to cover a small silver coin) may be added to an ordinary vessel of water. This is all the medicine practically needed to stop newly-caught birds from over-feeding and contracting inflammation of the bowels. Some of them feed so greedily that they cannot digest the food quickly enough, and therefore very speedily set up inflammation of the bowels and abdomen and die. Hence the advisability of taking precautions to treat them judiciously from the first. Most of the best and most easily kept birds are taken in frosty weather, when the seeds and ground everywhere are hard.

Some Natural Foods.

Now is just about the time for acquiring the newly-caught birds to put in stock, for moulting purposes, which is the reason for my saying this much about them. Ripe apples, part peeled and cut into pieces, are excellent for almost every kind of cage bird, and some should be given whenever possible. The apple Pippin or seed will be eaten by such as the Hawfinch, Bullfinch and Greenfinch; and sometimes some of the other seed eaters will eat them. Green food, and as they come in season, ripe wild seeds and plants may be brought in from the country and also supplied to the birds. Some of these are: Groundsel, dandelion, plantain, charlock, dock, shepherd's needle, scandin emdin (a small green herb with clusters of needle-point seed pods, sometimes called wild turnip), "Ribwort," or small leaved plantain (plantago lanceolata), starbelia, corn spurry (having a small star cluster of needle-point leaves with bunches of round seed pods on a soft stem about a foot high), red nieze, "Persicaria" (about the most useful and important of all the wild seeds at moulting time for Linnets, Goldfinches, Bullfinches, Redpolls, Twites, Greenfinches and Siskins), various thistles and other wild seeds and plants.

For Bullfinches and Hawfinches, various coloured berries should be gathered when ripe, and offered, and those which have them are very much improved in plumage thereby. The mulberry, elderberry, gooseberry, blackcurrant, raspberry, strawberry, blackberry, hawthorn berry, privet berry, etc., may all be gathered and given at the proper time.

I have briefly enumerated the essential seeds and foods to acquire to feed and keep in good health and condition the seed eaters proper, or British Finches. Sulphate of iron and steel drops may be given occasionally (particularly during the finish of the moult) in the drinking water to darken the tone in the darkest parts of their plumage.

Concerning Part Seedeaters.

The part-seed eaters are a group which will eat and live on either seeds or soft foods, or on the mixed diet. The mixed diet for this group is decidedly the best. Amongst this group we find all the Buntings, the Chaffinch, Bramblefinch, Nuthatch and the Tits, etc. The insectivorous foods on the market, and the mixed seeds, together with egg-food in some instances, ants' eggs, mealworms, beetles, etc., may be introduced, and the birds will relish most of them. Indeed, there is hardly any kind of seed, insect, fruit, grain, or flower and meal food, which this group will be found to refuse. Of course, the Chaffinch, Bramblefinch, and Yellow Bunting appear the most popular birds in this group, and they have attained a very high standard of excellence on the show bench.

Sunflower and hemp (both cracked) should always form a large share of their staple diet, particularly the three species named, and the other Buntings. The Tit family are very fond of fatty substances. I have had them in separate flights, and when I put a lump of mutton suet in, they would fairly "go for" and soon devour it. This takes the place of the oily nuts which these birds feed upon in their wild state. All kinds of insect life I used to get in the garden and take in for them, and the insectivorous birds proper.

The Feeding of Insectivorous Birds.

The last group comprise a large number of species, and can easily be divided into two sections for my present purposes with regard to their food supplies. All the larger species suitable and desirable as cage birds, amongst which are the Chough, Magpie, Jackdaw, Jay, Blackbird, Ring Ousel, Song Thrush, Missel Thrush, Redwing, Fieldfare, Starling, etc., may have a stock supply of meal foods. They can also have raw and cooked meat, and I always let my meat supply contain a fair proportion of fat as well as lean.

One of my composite foods consists of: Brand's meat meal, ¼lb.; Capern's Blackbird food, 1 packet; ants' eggs, 1oz.; maw seed, 1oz.; summer rape, 1oz.; sugar, 1oz.; best Indian meal, 1lb.; 2oz. best grocer's currants; 2oz. best raisins; one teaspoonful of salt; Spratt's poultry meal, or chicken meal, 1lb. All which I well mix. I had a large corn crusher, which I used to put the poultry or chicken meal through before being added to the other ingredients. I would multiply the whole of these and make a six-months' stock, and store in a very large iron tea chest. For use I would scald this mixture with boiling water to a crumbly consistency, and give sufficient to last each bird one day.

This is a fine recipe, and one which kept my birds in grand show form. Of course I would give them a piece of apple or banana, sometimes a piece of boiled potato, and sometimes I would add a small quantity of grated carrot. All kinds of beetles, moth worms, flies, spiders, woodlice, cockroaches, crickets, wireworms, etc., when procurable, I made use of and gave as delicacies, and it afforded great amusement to watch the birds pull them to pieces and devour them.

How I Manage My British Finches.

By WILLIAM LLOYD.

The Greenfinch.

The Greenfinch is a charming bird, and very easy to keep; but we don't get very sweet music from it. Greenies are not among our best songsters. The bird is very lively and makes good company. Greenfinches build their nests in hawthorn bushes, very roughly, it is true, but all together. The hen lays four or five eggs, and the cock helps her to incubate them. When the young leave the nest they are brown all over, and when moulted the cock bird has plenty of yellow and green, and the wings and tail have plenty of yellow in them. The hen is a very dark brown all over. She has a slight yellow in the wings and tail. I have reared a lot of these birds under Canary hens. I am reminded of a friend of mine who had some bad feeding hens. I advised him to try a nest of Greenfinches, which he did, with the result that the hen reared two Greenfinches and left three young canaries to die. The two Finches turned out to be a cock and a hen, and my friend gave them to me as he did not like them himself.

I might here say what happened with this same friend of mine some six years ago. It was just after I first knew him that the incident occurred. I had then a nest of young Greenfinches, which were being fed by a Green hen Canary and a cock Goldfinch. My friend had been trying to breed Goldfinch Mules for some fifteen years, without even getting one mule for his trouble. So he came to see if I had a good breeding Goldfinch which I could sell him. When I took him upstairs, the first thing he saw was this nest of Greenfinches. He took a fancy to them straight away, and seeing he praised them as mules, I though I would have a bit of fun, so I told him that I would take a pound for the five young birds. He agreed on the spot to take them, and offered to give me another half-sovereign for the Goldfinch; but this I refused, as this Finch was a good sitter and fed all the youngsters that were left in his charge (I have one now that will do the same, but they are few and far between). I told my friend to come up at the end of the week to see if they were ready. I also told two of my chums to come up on the appointed day. Well, he came, and so did my chums. Up-stairs we went, and although the birds were not quite ready, he would take them he said. He offered me the money, but I refused, telling him to pay me again. Then the fun began, my chums telling him that the birds were Greenfinches. But no, he knew better, they were Mules, and we laughed heartily. At last I told him the truth, but he would not believe me; he knew better, he said. When he got home his wife told him they were not Mules, as they did not have red heads. He brought them back to me, remarking that they had too much yellow on them for him. They turned out to be all cocks, and of the best colour I ever saw, besides being very large. I showed him the birds when they had moulted, and he admitted they were the best Greenfinches he ever saw. I sold two of them for eighteen shillings each, and they took first and seconds at three of our leading shows.

In selecting Greenfinches, I choose good large chubby birds, with plenty of yellow, both in the body and the wings, and with yellow bars and yellow tail feathers, which must be folded close together, as a wide spread tail spoils any bird. The head should be as large as possible, with black around the eyes. The back should be dark greenish olive colour, with close-fitting feathers.

I feed with Canary, ½lb.; hemp, ½lb.; teazel, ½lb.; summer rape, ¼lb.; and winter rape, ¼lb.; with plenty of wild seeds as mentioned before. I give plenty of sunflower seeds, green and black ivy berries, wild dog rose berries (these must be opened before being given), plenty of green chickweed, groundsel, and hard heads. I get the birds to take a meal worm now and again, and I give plenty of water for them to bathe in. With this treatment they will be found to do well.

The Redpoll.

The Redpoll, or "Chitty," as some name it, is a very attractive little fellow. It is a kind of a Linnet, but much smaller than the Linnet.

Redpolls can be taught to do many tricks, but you will have to put them to some hardships at first; such tricks as drawing water and drawing its food with a little engine. I had one which I taught to climb a little ladder which I made and ring the bell on top with a piece of string when it wanted food. I took some trouble to teach him to do this. He would even carry a match up and down his cage. If I gave him what we call bitter weed seed, he fairly amused all who saw him. Some friends came to see me on one occasion with the result that "Tommy," my pet, had to pass into their possession.

When I go catching Linnets I get some Redpolls, which saves my keeping decoy birds; they are then very easy to catch. The cock bird, when moulted, has a patch of red on the head, with dark feathers running down around the beak and forming a bib underneath the beak.

I have never selected any for exhibition, but some four years ago I bought two cock Redpolls with the intention of turning them into my outside aviary, but I soon found that they did not let the other birds alone, so I caged them off separately for three or four months. It was near moulting time, so I let them loose in the aviary. They did well this time. So when they had finished the moult, I gave one away, as a present to a friend, with the result that he showed it at Plymouth, taking first and special, the same at Bristol, and reserve at Oswestry. The other bird I gave to my brother. He let it die, however, for want of water, quite by mistake. I feed Redpolls the same as Linnets, except with regard to hemp, which I give sparingly. A little inga also given sparingly will do them good. I give Shepherd's purse knotted grass seeds, plantain seeds (which I give freely to the Linnets), also bitter weed in flower, dried chickweed and plenty of water to bathe in. On this treatment I have found them come on well.

In concluding my essay, I may say that it has always been my aim to learn as much as I can, and with the methods of feeding as stated—with plenty of screenings from the thrashing machine, plenty of water for the birds to bathe in, good, fresh air, and once a week a dose all round of Epsom salts—my pets have been kept in the pink of condition. I hope that the remarks and the secrets I have told may be of benefit to young fanciers, I would not try to teach the older ones, as they know more than I do myself.

Canary Breeding: Some Difficulties of Beginners Discussed.

By MISS BARROWS.

Every beginner meets with many difficulties, and perhaps novices in particular will be interested in the story of my experience as a novice when I started keeping Norwich Canaries. Living five miles from a country town, I cannot seek the advice of other fanciers, and am also at a business disadvantage in being a woman. Nevertheless, I have succeeded in rearing some good birds, and in showing them with success. It is wonderful what you can find out for yourself with observation and by the perusal of CAGE BIRDS.

Preparing for Breeding.

Birds have characters, and you must humour them. It is no use forcing a marriage between two birds, for instance, as they settle their choice by call when the cages are in the same room. It is therefore desirable to keep the hens in a different room if possible. If this is not possible, place the cages so that the sexes are not within sight of each other.

Within a month of commencing to breed you can arrange the birds you mean to use in breeding cages with a partition, and place a cock in one and the hen you intend him to have in the other. The slide can be left closed, as they can see each other through the water holes, and you may begin to feed them a little better. In the winter I give my birds two parts good Canary, one part German rape, and in very cold weather a few crushed oats or plain boiled rice (the latter they are very fond of), a piece of dessert apple twice a week or banana, and bread and milk with a sprinkle of maw seed if I observe a cold or other disorder.

Towards the End of February.

Towards the end of February I begin to think of special diet, and one of the advantages of having the hen you mean to use in a partition alone next to the cock bird, is that you can feed her according to her temperament. Now, a very fat, lazy hen wants this fatness or laziness removed, or she will have some clear eggs or be too lazy to feed her young. Let the treatment for such a hen be a pinch of Epsom salts (as much as will go on a threepenny piece) every alternate day for a week, a little more rape, and give bread and milk occasionally. After this give the usual seed with the addition of a little niger and plenty of salad. The lean kind, or those at all run down, you can commence to feed up by giving a little egg-food twice a week. Also treat the cock similarly. It is a good thing to give all the hens a pinch of niger twice weekly, as it is a preventative of egg-binding, and into the egg-food of both cock and hen mix five drops of Parrish's chemical food.

About the end of March or first week in April, if the weather is propitious, the partition comes out, and if the birds are in condition, there is no mistake about the business. The cock carries about a feather (the badge of matrimony) in great excitement, and the hen almost directly shows her approval of the situation by flapping her wings vigorously.

Under such circumstances eggs may be expected within ten days, often within a week or at the latest a fortnight. I must mention that it is desirable to cut the nails of old birds, just the points, and cut off superfluous feather from under the vent. Accidents are common through improper nesting material. I gather fresh moss and dry it with short lengths of hay, and as lining, cowhair, or saddlers' doe stuffing. I tried sheep's wool, but lost a nest as the newly-hatched birds became entangled in it. The same occurred with cotton wool, and I have known of a hen being hung in the string of a bought nest bag.

When the birds are together, I continue the Parrish's food until the hen lays, leaving it off when the birds are well started for the season, giving one teaspoonful of egg-food per pair every other day. On alternate days I give a spray of young lettuce, watercress, groundsel or dandelion. Before the first round is the only time I use dandelion, and this I soak overnight in warm water, and use one small leaf per bird. I put a little soft brown sugar in the egg-food before the hen lays, and if there appears difficulty, a few spots of olive or salad oil on a piece of sponge cake.

Treating Egg-bound Hens.

I have only had one case of egg-binding, and this gave way on my giving first a few drops of whisky and water in the beak, after which I dropped a spot or two of oil on the vent. I left the hen for an hour wrapped in flannel in a little cage near the fire, and then steamed her over a narrow jug of boiling water, covered with flannel, taking care to hold the vent only over the piece of flannel, and keeping the fingers well open, with the bird's neck between the thumb and first finger. The egg was laid the next morning after I had given up hopes.

But, alas! I performed acts of cruelty at first in my ignorance, steaming when there was no egg, and thus killing a hen. Steam a hen only when you can see the egg under the skin. You can generally see the egg quite plainly the day before it is due to be laid. If a hen is really egg-bound, she is absolutely prostrate, lying helpless in your hand. It is necessary to give cuttlefish bone and unboiled crushed egg shells in the cages, as well as gritty sand, as helps to prevent egg-binding.

While on the subject of steaming, I may emphasise the fact that prevention is better than cure in the case of colds. If a bird starts wheezing at any time, place the cage over a basin of boiling water—it will stand on a piece of wood laid across—cover the whole with a cloth for 20 minutes, but keep an eye on your bird from time to time. This wants doing daily for four days to be of use, at the same time keeping the bird warm and giving bread and milk.

One of my greatest difficulties has been in relation to the behaviour of the cock. Some cocks are troublesome, but those that are very destructive in the first year, often steady down when they are older, and turn out grand fathers. Even the mischievous ones that have to be taken away while the hen is sitting, when returned, often feed the young of ten days old; so one needs to watch and study the character of each cock bird.

One Male With Two Females.

With regard to running one cock to two hens, there are several ways of doing it, but it is a great advantage to have the rival wives out of sight of each other, and as far away as possible. Also try to get them into condition at the same time, so that No. 2 is ready to lay when No. 1 is sitting. If by any chance things do not fall like this, I let the cock pass the morning with one hen and the evening with the other. If he is disposed to be spiteful to No. 2, then I put him with her morning and evening for a very short time, in the hope of a better understanding being come to between them. You can only be guided by circumstances.

To return to the laying; it is very important not to startle the birds. Sudden disturbances such as a noisy entrance into the bird-room, cause the hen to crouch down and pinhole the eggs, especially if her nails are not cut. But sometimes the hen pricks the eggs in trying to clean them.

Eggs sometimes get thrown out of the nest through nervousness. The hen waits till you are gone, and then hops out in a fearful hurry less you may return, dragging an egg with her.

Nervousness also causes that troublesome complaint, nesting diarrhœa. I only give plain Canary when the hens are sitting, and have tried chlorodyne for the diarrhœa, but believe it does harm in other ways. It is very difficult to dose birds when they are sitting, and I wish some fancier would tell me of a cure for nesting diarrhœa. (To be continued.)

*The Pedlar and the Sparrow.

Once I saw a London Sparrow
Fly upon a pedlar's barrow;
He chirped and hopped, and seemed to say,
"What have you here to sell to-day?"
The pedlar was busy taking money,
And birdie was in—oh!—such a hurry!
He put his little head aside,
For many skeins of wool he spied;
Then, taking one of lovely blue,
He spread his wings, and away he flew.

A Lucky Capture.

One sunny day I had orders to put my pet Goldfinch out in the garden because it was such a fine day. I then thought I would clean him out; so I took his seed bottle out to refil it, and to my great surprise he flew away. He stayed away all that night, and the next day, when I went to bring his companion, a Goldfinch Mule, in, to my great surprise I found the Goldfinch sitting on his cage, which I had left out with the door open. He promptly hopped in none the worse for his night's adventure.—Sent by Rowland F. Davies (age 14), 11, Southey St., Wordsworth Avenue, Cardiff.

*A Close Shave.

One Sunday my dad put a Linnet outside the second floor window. The wind was very high, and both the bird and cage were unfortunately blown down into the area below. The glass drinker being a heavy one caused the cage to break in pieces, and away flew "Linnie." My mother and I ran down the street to try and catch him, but he was frightened. However, a man picked him up and gave him to mother more dead than alive. When mother said "Poor 'Linnie'," he opened his eyes as much as to say, "I am pleased you have got me again."—Sent by G. Monard (age 12), 13, Handel Street, London, W.C.

IN THE COURTS.

A Bristol Case.

James Tapscott, of Redfield, Bristol, was summoned at the Long Ashton Sessions on February 26th, for causing unnecessary suffering to a Linnet and Goldfinch whilst in captivity or close confinement, at Portbury, on February 10th. Mr. Roberts, of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, was present in connection with the prosecution.—P.C. Martin stated that about one o'clock on the day in question he was on duty at Portbury, when he saw the defendant in a field in the occupation of Mr. Williams, farmer. He had nets laid down, and was using a Goldfinch and Linnet as decoy birds. They were braced round their bodies with string, and pegged down to the ground. They would flutter in the air for a few seconds, and then drop down thoroughly exhausted. On examining the birds, he saw that their feathers were all rubbed off. The birds appeared to be in a wild state. He then took possession of the traps and net, and asked defendant for his name and address, and he gave a false one. The man, he believed, was a professional bird-catcher.

There was a second summons against the defendant for taking a Goldfinch at the same time and place, contrary to the W.B.P. (County of Somerset) Order 1904. P.C. Martin again gave evidence in support of the case.—The defendant, who was not present when the case started, but arrived just as the second summons was being heard, said that he had been out of work for 15 weeks, and he had a wife and seven children, and hardly a bit of food in the house. His father was a bird-catcher, but it was not his occupation, for he was a painter; and the reason he did this was to get a bit of food, instead of stealing. The evidence having been read over to him, defendant questioned the constable to show that he did not use any "flirt" line, and that no injury was done to the birds except the ruffling of their feathers. Defendant said that he did not catch any bird, and the two he had with him he took down there.

The summons for catching birds was dismissed, and on the defendant giving his promise not to do this kind of thing again, he was bound over on the first summons in the sum of £5 to be of good behavious for six months.—"Bristol Times and Mirror."

WILD BIRD LIFE.

Hard Times for Birds.

The snow lies thickly all around, covering fields and meadowlands, and even the low hedgerows are in some places barely discernible, and can only be traced by a slight rise in the landscape. There has been no wind with this fall; consequently, the trunks and branches of the trees are beautifully outlined in white. Upon the thin twigs at the extremities, where the swelling birds are waiting for more genial weather, the delicate tracery of the graceful birches is most enchanting. But the first wild bird to settle among them spoils the picture, for, light as he is, he displaces the white covering, which falls slowly to the ground in a feathery shower. On the outskirts of the village, where the roads lead right away into the country, the hedgerows are full of birds. The larger ones search diligently along the bottom among the stems and the rough underwood, and in the banks, where here and there a tuft of overhanging herbage has prevented the snow from covering the entire surface. We disturbed a Missel Thrush digging into the bank; so much earth had he moved that at first sight it appeared as though some animal had been at work. His flight was heavy and laboured, and he perched within a dozen yards of us with dejected mien and ruffled plumage, looking double his usual size in the white surroundings. There has been quite an influx of the tiny Wren into the district lately, but few have found their way into the gardens in the village. They frequent the fences and hedgerows near the outlying cottages, visiting the old outbuildings and hen roosts, where they search every crevice and corner for lurking insects. Although there are so many of these tiny creatures to be seen about, there is no evidence of pairing. Each bird keeps quite by himself. He is one of the most independent of birds, and appears to be able to exist quite by himself, and is in no way beholden to man for a living, simply using his old barns and buildings as a hunting ground, as he does the hedgerows and woodlands. The food thrown down to the poultry and domestic animals has no charm for him; insects are his daily fare, and these have to be securely hidden to escape his sharp eyes and prying habits.

African Cuckoos.

The African Cuckoos generally lay coloured eggs, but white ones may be found in the nests of birds which lay white eggs.

Habits of the Siskin.

The Siskin is said to breed regularly in Ireland and very sparingly in Scotland. The flocks of these birds seen here during the winter are migrants from northern Europe.

Destroyers by Night.

Insect life in the open is naturally very scarce during the winter months, between sunset and sunrise, but as the air gets warmer it increases immensely. Fortunately for us Nature has provided a remedy in night-feeding birds, chief of which is the Nightjar.

Yorkshire Birds.

The Grey Crow appears to be rather a scarce bird in Yorkshire, and the Land-rail, for some reason, is fast disappearing. To counterbalance this, however, is the fact that the Red-legged Partridge and that summer migrant, the pretty Turtle Dove, are pushing further Northwards.

Doings of the Missel Thrushes.

A sign of the dawn of spring is apparent in the actions of some of our familiar birds. The most interesting to watch are the doings of the Missel Thrushes. It is now courting time with them, and a pair of males may often be seen chasing each other among the branches of one of the larger trees, until one gets the worst of it, and flies off. During this performance the hen bird sits quietly by watching the quarrel.

The last members' show of the season was held on February 20th, in the Lowther Chambers, when 319 birds were staged. Several very fine exhibits were on view, amongst those worthy of special mention being the winning buff ticked and the yellow hen owned by Mr. W. Brown; also the winning buff hen owned by Mr. T. Head; these were all put down in the pink of condition. This being the last show for the society's specials, it caused competition to be rather keen. The result was as follows:—1st prize, cup, Mr. W. Brown, 186 points; 2nd prize, rose bowl, Mr. T. Head, 123 points; 3rd prize, cup, Mr. W. E. Fergusson, 73 points; 4th prize, silver medal, Mr. J. H. Walker, 69 points. The members trust he will soon be well and strong again. We found a very good substitute in that well-known Yorkshireman, Mr. P. ## NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

A most successful table show was held in Lockhart's Cafe, Grainger Street, Newcastle, on February 16th, when nineteen pairs faced the judge, Mr. J. Shepherd.

After judging, Mr. Shepherd congratulated the members upon the excellence of the exhibits, and said that if he had a legacy left him he would not be afraid to invest £100 of it in purchasing the birds in the room. There was hardly a bad bird amongst them. The secretary, in proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. Shepherd, stated that the prize-money won that night he intended to devote towards a nucleus for a special for the next feather table shows, which we usually have during the summer, and he hoped members would contribute so as to get a special worth winning. New members, Messrs. Harkus, Curry, Dix, Coomber.—T. C. CRAWHALL, hon. secretary.

DULWICH O.S.

The first of the two pair shows arranged for this season took place on February 28th, at The Herne Tavern, Peckham Rye. By some misunderstanding the appointed judge, Mr. Geo. Gardner failed to put in an appearance, whereupon Mr. W. R. Wall was elected by the committee to act in his stead, and this gentleman is to be heartily congratulated on his initial attempt, for he appeared to give general satisfaction. In the champion section Mr. G. F. Woolhouse won the special for best pair with a grand large buff cock and a heavily variegated yellow hen; this pair also won the prize for best pair in show, closely pressed by Mr. J. Foster, the novice section winner, who showed a clinking variegated yellow cock with a typical buff hen. Mrs. Mazzoni won the special for best muling pair with a very likely pair consisting of a topping Goldfinch and a fine yellow hen. At the conclusion of the show Mr. Goodwin presented the prizes.

CHAMP. NOR. (10): 1, 2, c, Woolhouse; 3, 4, Rogers and Mazzoni; vhc, hc, Sprules. NOVICE (8): 1, 2, 3, hc, Foster; 4, Rees; vhc, Parker; c, Powles. CAN. AND BRIT. ## WATFORD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A most successful show of matched pairs (British and Foreign) was held in the Conservative Club Annexe, Clarendon-road, on February 27th. Everything was in apple-pie order when we arrived about 12 o'clock. One end of the spacious hall was occupied by two very tastefully-arranged stands, viz., Messrs. Fox Bros. and Co's with their now noted food specialities, and an enterprising local seed merchant's, Messrs. Partridge Bros., who had all kinds of seeds on show, and the Partridge Cup, which came in for a deal of admiration. The matched pairs of Norwich were a good all-round lot. Mr. Quantrell informed us that the Crest class emanated from four rooms, whereas at previous shows there was only one Crest member. The entry of 126 birds made a very nice show. Mr. Quantrell took great pains in the management. Several fanciers were down from town, amongst whom we noticed Messrs. R. J. Pretty, H. Pearce, and E. S. Lugg. Mr. J. Robson judged.

CHAMP. NOR. (10): 1, spl, 3, Wright, 1st cl. buff cock, a beauty for size and quality, with a grand cap and wing-mkd. yell. hen; 3rd, variegated yell. ck. and typical buff hen; 2, Buckingham, cl buff ck. and cl. yell. hen, likely to throw some good ones; vhc, Shirley; hc, Goodall; c, Wright. NOVICE (8): 1, spl, Fox, cl. buff ck. and yell. hen, very good pair; 2, hc, Swain, 2nd buff ck., cl. variegated hen, ran very close; 3, Freeman, buff ck. and variegated yell. hen; vhc, c, Groves. CREST BREEDING (8): 1, spl, c, Miss Hewat; 2, Watson; 3, vhc, Jouens; hc, Lowe; very nice class, the winners in which should breed some good youngsters. CHAMP. YORKS. It was decided to appoint a committee to select cups and medals to be presented at our annual meeting. The following were elected: Messrs. T. Robson, J. Shepherd, J. McKenzie, E. Atkinson, and J. ## CARDIFF AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A very interesting members' show was held on February 17th, at Naish's Royal Stores. There was a grand entry, the total being 134, and every bird was staged. The quality and type were far in advance of those of previous shows. In the Norwich sections the awards were well split up, but the Yorkshires owned and exhibited by Mr. Banks were an outstanding feature in every class of the champion section, his first prize buff cock winning special for best single bird. There was a good attendance, some of the visitors having come a distance by train. Mr. Dummett judged the Norwich sections, and Mr. Mellhuish the Yorkshires and remaining classes, and their awards seemed to give satisfaction.

POPLAR C.B.S.

The first pair show was held at the Club House, 147, East India Dock-road, on February 25th. The entry was not so large as had been expected, owing to the inclement weather which prevailed, many of the members not caring to risk their birds. The amateurs were headed by a grandly-matched pair of Norwich, birds of good type and quality, next coming a smart pair of Yorkies, the third being a useful pair of Crests. In the Novices, a fine, slim Yorkshire led the way, being followed by a small but good pair of Norwich. Muling pairs were good, especially the leaders, a fine, bold, ruddy-faced Goldie, and a slashing big hen, followed by a smart Linnet and Norwich hen, and another nice Goldie-Canary pair. Mr. C. A. House judged, and afterwards gave a short lecture on the birds, and the reasons for their being placed in their relative positions.

AMATEUR (11): 1, vhc, Cowles; 2, hc, T. G. Hunt; 3, Cook; c, J. Hunt. NOVICES (8): 1, vhc, Spink; 2, Braithwaite; 3, hc, Hammond; c, Bryson. MULING (5): 1, Heaven; 2, 3, Braithwaite; vbc, hc, Bryson.

ORMSKIRK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The second annual pair show took place in the well-equipped club-room at headquarters (Buck i' th' Vine Hotel), on February 22nd. The display was scarcely up to last year's, and although the society abounds in Yorkshire fanciers, the birds of "grace and beauty" were very disappointing as regards numbers; some of the faint-hearted members evidently preferred to keep the birds by their "ain fireside." Mr. Tasker again led the way in the Norwich section with a fine team, and Messrs. Johnson and Sons took the plums in the Mule and Hybrid sections with some likely pairs. Mr. J. W. Johnson had his Crystal Palace winners on view, the White Sparrow and Yellow Bunting being much admired. Mr. T. H. Dent (Preston) placed the cards, and he kindly explained the merits and demerits of the birds as he judged the various classes.

PRIZE MONEY PAID.

[Will exhibitors who have not received their prize money please communicate with the respective secretaries at once.]

City of Wakefield O.S.

A Fancier Amongst His Birds.

This photograph of a fancier spending a quiet half-hour with his birds, shows the arrangement of a typical bird-room, with double-compartment breeding cages in the top rows, and flight cages in the bottom rows. The dividing slides, the food and water vessels, egg-pans, etc., are clearly seen, also the piece of cuttlefish hanging in the flight cage. We regret that, owing to the name of the sender not being written on the photograph, we are unable to state who the fancier depicted is.

In addition to the list of foreign orders you published last week, I have just had come to hand another order for goods from Manitoba, writes Mr. W. Rudd, the famous bird specialist, of Norwich. I make a point of sending you this, because in such a short space of time I never before had such a quantity of foreign orders, and I do not believe any other person in the trade has ever received a quarter so many in the time. True, some are small, but they are foreign orders.

The second annual show of the Dulwich O.S., write Messrs. Woolhouse and Rogers, the show managers, will take place at the Imperial Hall, Dulwich, on October 12th and 13th. The judges elected are, Messrs. W. Mundell (Bradford), J. Robson, W. H. Vale, and W. Vardy (Hucknall Huthwaite). One or two more judges are being communicated with. We mean, with the help of our supporters, to make this event one of the most important of next show season.

Several interesting articles grace the pages of the March issue of "British Birds," a magazine devoted to the birds on the British list, among them being that on a "Colony of Little Terns at Spurn Point, Yorkshire," by Mr. Oxley Grabham, M.A., M.B.O.U. (which is excellently illustrated by the author's own photographs), and that "On the Eggs of the Tree Pipit," by Mr. Percy F. Bunyard, F.Z.S., M.B.O.U. The "Notes" this month are specially readable.

A Straight Talk.

When Mr. J. R. B. Masefield, a well-known Staffordshire naturalist, found himself confronted with a fashionable audience of county ladies on February 22nd, at the meeting in support of the R.S.P.C.A., at Stoke-on-Trent, he was evidently struck with their inconsistency, for he observed a sea of elaborate millinery in which birds' plumage played an important part. Mr. Masefield launched into a vigorous denunciation, pointing out the cruelty with which plumes are frequently procured. He had not looked round to see who were wearing aigrettes, he said, but these were the breeding plumes of the Egret, a species of the Heron formerly found in abundance in America. In consequence of the fashion of wearing aigrettes these birds had been slaughtered wholesale in the breeding season, and their young left to starve, with the result that they were almost entirely wiped out.

When the habit of wearing wings came into vogue an order went out for 25,000 pairs of the wings of gulls and terns. The local gunners in Yorkshire started out in the height of the breeding season, and it was shown that in many cases the wings were torn off whilst the birds were yet alive, and the quivering bodies flung into the sea.

"If you continue to wear plumes after this," said Mr. Masefield, "I hope the society will be able to prevent you."

Some ladies, however, were not content with wearing one bird in their hat. In the train the other day he met a lady who had no fewer than thirteen stuffed Robins in a ring round her headdress. He quickly left the compartment lest his indignation should get the better of him.

The ladies present passed a resolution urging the necessity for greater protection of wild birds.

CANARY QUERIES.

Well-meant Advice.

G.M.D.—Am sorry to hear you have had the misfortune to throw the Crest hen backwards again. Your friend's advice was well meant enough, but I have not the least doubt the bath is solely responsible for this relapse. Do not be persuaded by anyone to give this bird a bath of any kind—either tepid or cold—until the weather is quite mild and settled, or you will certainly find these relapses of frequent occurrence, and will also find it exceedingly difficult to bring her round permanently. The medicine you have begun to use is about the best thing you could have given. Continue giving it two days in every three for a week, and if the cold has not quite disappeared in that time, continue it for another week, except that you may substitute ten drops of tincture of tolu for the glycerine, and omit the latter. Then you should begin at once with the treatment given in this column on February 20th, and continue it for a fortnight. Then stop it for a week, and begin again and repeat it for another fortnight. As the bird must be very much run down in vitality, it would be best to give at least three of these fortnightly courses, with an interval of a week between each.

Unseemly Behaviour.

J. Stephens.—The way in which you say the hen acts on certain occasions when a bath is given reads so much like a description of a bird "sunning" itself, or taking what one may call a "sun-bath," that I wondered whether the sun happened to be shining brightly into it cage, or the bath, on these occasions. If it was so, I feel sure you may be quite easy about her health, as she was simply enjoying herself in this way. A special favourite of mine, which used to fly about the room, would very often perch upon the fender before a blazing fire and abandon himself to this form of enjoyment during the winter months, just as he would resort to the sunshine on the window sill for a similar purpose in the summer. But, assuming there is no ground for this theory, then I should say the bird is not robust enough to withstand the shock of a cold bath at this inclement season. Birds, like humans, are not all of exactly the same calibre as regards stamina and vitality. I should advise you not to give her a bath until the weather has grown more mild and comfortable.

Effect of Mark Upon Young.

Inquirer, A.R.—If I understand you aright, you wish to know whether a mark which is on your bird's plumage will cause any of the young from him to have marked plumage; you evidently wish to breed only clear young ones. Well, the mark (which is technically called a tick) certainly will cause some of the young to be marked in plumage. But this is no real detriment, as you cannot in real practice breed all clear birds unless you are willing to sacrifice depth and tone of natural yellow. Even if you mated two perfectly clear birds together the probability is that you would breed a fair proportion of ticked young. The proportion of marked young your bird will breed depends upon whether the parents of both your birds were all clears, or otherwise. Your birds appear to be selected quite right for breeding clears, as it is customary, and most advisable, to have one bird at least slightly ticked, as yours appears to be. The ticked specimens are often quite as valuable as clears, and are most useful as stock birds, besides which some of the most typical and handsome birds are to be found amongst them, so that ticked birds are not to be despised, by any means.

The Terrors of the Night.

"Amateur."—The hen which has such difficulty of breathing at night is most likely exposed to draughts some time or other, or is subject to great fluctuations of heat. You do not say how this hen is fed, but I suspect it is on the same lines as the next one you enquire about, and as this is not very suitable you should feed both as follows:—Staple diet, plain canary only. Three times a week half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and twice a week from now until they go to nest the same quantity of inga. Limit general diet to this, with a scrap of green food three or four times a week when it can be procured in the proper condition until the birds are ready to feed up for mating. For the present add to the above for the first hen half a teaspoonful of crushed spongecake with two drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion every second day for a fortnight, and in the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for two days, and afterwards twenty drops of port wine, ten of oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil every second day for a week, or fortnight if it appears necessary, and on the alternate days give twenty drops of chemical food. Feed second hen the same but give nothing but the seeds and green food. Give the salts as above for four consecutive days in each week for a fortnight, and on the remaining three days each week two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel.

Stands Huddled Up.

G. D. Jones.—The diet is very unsuitable, and you must also see that the place it is kept in is not damp, as this is a common cause of birds going wrong, with much looseness such as you describe. Feed on a staple of Canary seed only, and every second day give separately a half-teaspoonful of summer rape seed, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake or egg-food with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it. Twice a week, in addition to this, give half a teaspoonful of hemp. Give this on days when you are not giving egg or sponge cake. Do not give any green-food, but a bit of banana two or three times a week may be given with benefit. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts, for one day only, as will cover a sixpence, and after this twenty drops of chemical food every second day for a fortnight; on the alternate days in the first week give two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel. See that the cage and water vessels are kept scrupulously clean, and that the water is quite pure. If you have any doubt about the water, boil it all before use.

An Epileptic.

A. G. Nicholls.—Your bird probably suffers from epilepsy, and I do not think any treatment will be of any avail to make it a good sound subject suitable for the breeding cage. Indeed, I would strongly advise you not to breed with it again, as it will in all probability only help to perpetuate a type of "undesirables," which give little pleasure to care for. It will do for a singing bird, so you might give him a place as an old pensioner in this capacity, and always take care to avoid scaring him, or making any sudden flutter or movement about his cage. Feed on a diet of three part Canary to one part summer rape as a staple. Give half-a-teaspoonful of egg food twice a week, and green food or sweet, juicy fruit about four times a week. Limit diet to the simple regimen, and every now and again give a pinch of Epsom salts in the water for one day. Every time he has an attack give as much bromide of potassium as will lie on a sixpence, and the same quantity of Epsom salts, in the drinking water for two or three consecutive days. If it gets any worse, it would be kindest to chloroform it.

About an Aviary.

Jonathan.—In an aviary of the size you name, viz., 5ft. long, by 3ft. wide (the height is of little importance), you could keep about 16 Canaries. This would be its full capacity, and would not allow of any breeding being carried on. For breeding to be carried on, two cocks and four or six hens are ample to stock it with, and even then, if they succeeded fairly well, it would be necessary to remove the first broods by the time the second broods were about leaving the nests. Of course it is quite safe for you to breed them in this way, and the plan may succeed very well provided you do not introduce too many cocks. Two are quite sufficient. Put in plenty of nests to prevent squabbling. Any attempt to breed Canaries and Mules at the same time in this place will be almost sure to end in failure. You should limit your attention to one or the other. If you try for Canaries proceed on above lines; if you decide to try Mules, then turn in all hen Canaries and two or three cock Finches, either all one variety or a mixture. A good selection would be one cock each of Goldfinch, Linnet, and Siskin. One-inch mesh netting is not safe to confine Canaries by; three-quarter-inch mesh is the coarsest that can be used with safety.

Dropping of Feathers.

C.N.M.—Besides seeing draughts and fluctuations of heat are avoided, you may go on feeding as I advised, and on the alternate days between giving the aconite and glycerine, give four drops of tincture of steel. Should you discontinue the aconite at the end of the next week, go on at once to the treatment I previously advised and still give the tincture of steel as above on the alternate days when giving those medicines, continuing the steel until the feathers have ceased dropping. In the case of the other bird give plain canary seed as a staple, and for the rest follow the treatment as advised to "Altenheim," which you say you have begun. If this does not stop the moult in, say, a fortnight at most, get a pennyworth of citrate of iron and quinine from a chemist, dissolve it in two tablespoonfuls of port wine, and give twenty drops of this in the water daily for a week. This should have the desired effect. You should certainly not encourage the moult in either case unless you are sure the bird did not moult last autumn.

Six-pointed.

Novice.—(1) Yes, taken altogether, a good class of Crested Canaries are more difficult to rear than ordinary Plainheads. It is very usual, however, to pair up a few Plainheads at the same time as Crests are mated, and then the young Crests may be, and frequently are, transferred to the Plainhead parents, to be reared, if any trouble arises, with their own parents, or they refuse to feed. (2) If kept over the winter in flight cages it is always best to keep cocks and hens in separate cages, but when flying loose in a room there is no objection to allowing both sexes to fly together until the end of January, by which time they should, as a rule, be separated. (3) I believe in using a certain amount of egg food, or crushed sponge cake, which is a very good substitute for the purpose, to prepare birds for breeding. The actual amount may be left to one's own discretion if it were borne in mind that the birds require to be in very full health and vigour for mating, and if they are in this condition, naturally, at the proper time for mating, then no extra forcing is necessary or advisable. But the more backward in condition the birds are, the more they require feeding up to bring them forward. (4) Within reason, you may allow any variety of Canary to fly loose in a room with British Finches or Buntings. It is not advisable to keep them with Softhills, on account of the food difficulty. Individual temperaments must also be considered, as you do not want "guinea Crests" to be done to death by "tuppeny joeys." (5) I cannot say how you can tell the age of cage birds, save by their general antique appearance, coarse scaly legs and feet, and long blunt claws, which show evidence of repeated trimmings, when they have already left their youthful days behind them. (6) No, you would not be very likely to breed black Canaries from mating two variegated ones. The usual produce of such a mating will be very heavily variegated, broken green, and perhaps a few self-greens. The black Canary is as yet a rara avis.

What Kind of Mate?

Young Fancier.—A suitable mate for your bird depends so entirely upon what object you have in view, as well as upon the parentage of the birds, that it is impossible to give you a really satisfactory reply without my having this information. I think you had better write again and say what you wish to breed. Personally, the only object I can see for the Crest-bred Cinnamon cross-bred is to mate back to Crests to help to develop the Cinnamon marking of the Crests, or to originate a strain of Cinnamon Crests. It might, of course, be mated back to the Cinnamon to give increased size, and new blood, but the crossing of these breeds is far too difficult a job for a novice to begin on. Did not the man you got it off, and who told you it would breed some good birds, give you an idea what mate to select? One thing is certain, the "good birds" will neither be "good Cinnamons," nor "good Crests," though it may breed useful birds to continue crossing with if you know what you are aiming at.

Outdoor Aviary.

T. F. W. (North Shields).—Judging from your sketch, the building if in the open and enjoying a fair amount of sunshine should make a very suitable birdroom, but if it gets no sun at all, it needs a knowledge of its immediate surroundings, and of the cause of this absence to warrant one's giving a definite reply as to its suitability. There seems to be no arrangement for ventilation, so you should attend to this, and have at least a portion of the glass in the front made to open, or a pane removed and replaced by perforated zinc on the outside and inside surface of the frame, and the holes in the zinc not facing each other. This will prevent a draught. An inlet should be provided in the middle of the front at the bottom. Providing you secure cold bred birds, and do not turn them out before the middle of April, any hardy variety of Canary would suit your requirements—common nondescripts, German, Norwich, Borders, Yorkshires or Cinnamons, should succeed. Those which are to fly loose for Muling may be placed in about the middle of March. I would not advise you to start the season with more than six birds in this space, say, three hen Canaries, clears, or very lightly ticked bred from clears, and a cock Goldfinch, Siskin, and either a Bullfinch or Linnet. The Linnet would probably be the surest breeder, but, if successful, the Bullfinch Mules would be the most valuable. Put in at least six or eight nesting receptacles.

Gone Off Song.

W. R. Alexander.—It is not at all an unusual circumstance for the cock to cease singing when introduced to the hen, and, provided it was in full song and ready to mate before being put in view of the hen, they will, as a rule, set to work and breed quite as successfully as those which remain in song after mating. In your case the bird was clearly not in full song, nor forward enough for mating, and as it is also too early to begin, I should doubt the success of putting the birds together. Your best plan is to hang the cock on the same wall as the hen so that they cannot see each other. Feed up the cock from now until the end of March, as advised in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," adding a pinch of gold of pleasure seed to the egg-food twice a week, and giving a leaf of dandelion every second day; and begin to feed up the hen about the middle of March the same as the cock, except that you should give her a pinch of inga instead of gold of pleasure. Mate them together at the end of March or first week in April, according to weather. By that time the cock will probably be in full song again.

How to Force Them.

E.P.—The fact that you are quite a new subscriber certainly is the only excuse for asking this question. At this season of the year I am frequently trying to impress upon readers the inestimable value of the virtue of patience, and advising them not to be in a hurry to mate up the birds. Your birds are evidently more discreet in the matter than you are—a fact which was forcibly illustrated by the latest wintry snap and snowstorm setting in almost simultaneously with the receipt of your query. It is even now much too early to mate the birds. You should still have cocks and hens caged separately, but the hens may as well be put in the breeding cages now, in readiness for the cocks to be introduced at the end of the month or beginning of April, which will be quite early enough to put them together. From now onwards until they are mated, feed on a staple diet of a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape for both sexes; and in addition give the cocks half a teaspoonful of egg food or crushed sponge cake every second day; twice a week a small teaspoonful of hemp; and on two other days half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts inga, linseed, and gold of pleasure. Three or four times a week give a scrap of green food—a leaf or two of dandelion, if obtainable. For another week or so, give the hens the above staple diet, and add only half a teaspoonful of inga twice a week, a little egg food once, and green food three times. After that put them on the same diet as the cocks, except that you give only about half the quantity of hemp, and make up the bulk with extra inga. As you are quite a novice, you would do well to get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. from this office.

Prolonged Moulting.

A. Williams.—Am afraid the bird hanging over the kitchen door is subject to very great fluctuations of heat, or to cold draughts, or perhaps to a combination of the two. You must see that he is quite free from draughts, and that the temperature varies as little as possible. Continue to feed on a staple of plain Canary, and give in addition a half teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days the same quantity of egg food or crushed sponge cake in which you have well mix two drops each of sherry and cod liver oil emulsion. Twice a week give also half a teaspoonful of hemp. Give a scrap of green food three or four times a week. Keep cage perfectly clean, well supplied with clean, gritty sand, and only give the bath on mild, bright days. In the drinking water give twenty drops of chemical food every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days four drops of tincture of steel until the feathers cease dropping out. Your description of the symptoms of the Roller cock is rather vague. You say you can almost hear him, but omit to say what you can almost hear. Try treating him same as above as regards feeding for a fortnight or so, and in the drinking water for the first two days give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and afterwards twenty drops of whisky, and ten drops each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, every second day for a fortnight. If not considerably better in that time, write again, and give more particulars; also refer to this reply.

Brevities.

What is Wrong? (C. Shenton).—You give absolutely no idea as to what is the matter, or, indeed, whether anything at all is the matter with your birds. I can only guess that you want to get them on song. If last season's birds, I should say they are certain hens, but if some are years old you may persevere with the treatment for another three or four weeks, and instead of gold of pleasure seed in the soft food, give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts inga and gold of pleasure. If the birds do not appear healthy then, you had better write again and say how they are, where kept, and how you treated them previously.

Pecks Itself (G.H.F.).—Examine cage well for red-mites. Look especially about the perch ends, any wood joints, or cracks, and joints of doors, for a white powdery-looking substance adhering to the surface; if this is found, colonies of red-mites will invariably be found close by or on the spot. The remedy is obvious, viz., a thorough overhauling and cleaning of cage and surroundings. Meantime give baths, with a few quassia chips soaked in. If no mites are found, I should say there is really nothing wrong, the pecking being merely the bird's way of working off its superfluous energy. You may give a crystal of sulphate of soda as large as a small pea and ten drops of lemon juice in its drinking water for two or three days, if you like.

Going Bald (S. Brough).—Stop giving linseed and feed as advised "A. Williams," except that you need not give sherry in soft food. Give cod-liver oil emulsion, and twice each week for a fortnight dust the soft food slightly with a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash. In drinking water give twenty drops each Chemical Food and port wine every second day, and on the alternate days two drops each tincture of gentian and tincture of steel. A mealworm a day for a time if you have any handy would be very beneficial. You may slightly anoint the bare skin with olive oil or vaseline, about once a week, if you like, but it is not of much material service, if any, in such a case. You may not see any great improvement now before the bird moults again, I don't expect.

Keeping Cocks over a Year (R.H.).—You do not give the width of flight. If only about ordinary cage depth, say, from 12in. to 18in., I am afraid there would be a good deal of squabbling during the spring and early summer. At this time vigorous young cocks require a certain amount of "elbow room" to prevent breaches of the peace. But these breaches would probably not go beyond calling each other bad names, and perhaps pulling a feather out occasionally. If you do not care to risk this, I should not advise you to run more than six or eight in the flight if only of the above depth. If it is something like four or five feet deep—i.e., from back to front—you would be quite safe in keeping them all together.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Hybrid Couples in Aviary.

Beginner, W.P.—You can certainly leave the hen Britishers to sit their eggs and rear their young with a fair chance of success when in a decent-sized outdoor aviary. I have known both Greenfinch, Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Redpoll, Linnet, and Siskin hens make excellent mothers. No particular preparation is necessary for feeding any young which may be hatched. I presume you supply the usual seeds, and give suitable green food (including seeding wild kinds, chickweed, shepherd's-purse, groundsel, grasses, etc.). If this is so, then all else needed is the provision of two dishes of soft food daily—one containing a first-class insectivorous mixture, and the other the usual egg and biscuit (or bread) adopted by fanciers. If you choose to do so you can omit the latter item—should you give it, be certain it is always fresh and sweet, changing the supply twice or thrice a day during very hot weather, and keeping it in a well-shaded portion of the aviary. A feed of small mealworms daily would be appreciated and any other suitable insect food you can lay hands on. By-the-bye, a good prepared egg-food would answer admirably as a substitute for the egg and biscuit. Such a thing can be bought nowadays, and needs only to be slightly moistened to be ready for use. Probably, too, you would find live ants' eggs eaten with avidity by many of the hens, and you can give nothing better, if able to obtain them. But the chief thing, after all, is a plentiful supply of the wild seeding plants mentioned above.

Cutting Their Claws.

Beginner, W.S.P.—What a lot of "Beginners" this week! You must certainly trim the claws of all hens which show signs of requiring this attention; you can take it from me that it is absolutely necessary. It is not hard to do; neither is it painful when properly done. Catch the bird and place it on its back in the palm of the left hand, holding it gently but firmly, taking care not to squeeze it. Let the thumb fall over its throat, and the third and little fingers (or middle and third, as most convenient) each side of its legs, the latter projecting between them. It will then be easy to get at the bird's feet and claws. The latter should not be cut too close to the toe, or they will bleed, and likewise hurt the bird. Roughly speaking, a tiny blood vessel runs into the nail from the toe for about a quarter of an inch (in a small bird), and one needs to always well cut outside this. The claws on the two side toes (front) can, of course, be cut closer to the toe than the claws on the middle and back toes, being relatively smaller. If a bird has white nails (like most Canaries), this blood vessel can be plainly discerned on holding the foot to a good light. Use a pair of sharp scissors, cut quickly and firmly, and the operation is easily performed.

The Gentle Dove.

Ring Neck.—Ring Doves are quite simple things to keep. Warmth is not necessary in the winter, though the indoor room should be a dry one, and free from draughts. I want to convey, however, that a warmed room is quite unnecessary. The feeding is a simple matter. Packets of "Dove mixture" (composed of small grains, such as wheat, barley, buckwheat, dari, canary, hemp, millet seeds, etc.), can be obtained from any good seedsman, and on this your bird will thrive admirably. It will also relish dry crumbled biscuit (or moistened with milk), bread and milk, ants' eggs, coarse insectivorous mixture, peas, clover shoots, almost any shoots of growing grain, etc. It must have coarse grit and old lime (say, crushed mortar). Give a big dish of water. You ought soon to be able to let the bird out to fly about the place; they get delightfully tame, and are very affectionate towards their owners. By-the-bye, I am not quite sure that your query is really a "British" bird one.

Enamelling Cages.

Ginger.—Enamel is certainly the best covering for the insides of cages (this includes breeding cages). The expense often stands in the way of its use, however. Any good brand of enamel, such as is sold by oil and colourmen, is suitable for use in cages. You cannot beat a very light (sky) blue shade of colour, for both breeding and stock cages. Some fanciers "size" the insides of their cages before putting on the enamel; and good "size" can be bought at the same place as the enamel. This "size" will save one coat, but personally I prefer to let the enamel sink well into the wood, even if an extra coat (or even two) of enamel is necessitated. It makes, I think, a better and more enduring job of it in the end. If the enamel is too thick, thin it out with a little turps, or whatever is recommended on the tin to be used for the purpose. It is advisable to use the enamel just a little thin for the first two coats. See that you lay it on evenly (not in "waves"), and let one coat dry before applying another. I always use a fair-sized flat camel-hair brush to apply it with, letting it soak in turpentine for a few hours (when new) before bringing it into use.

Sexing Skylarks.

Doubtful.—What an awful lot of trouble the sexing of Skylarks (and Thrushes) causes my readers (and poor me). I am continually having to give answers concerning it. I can only repeat what I have oft-times said before, viz., that to try to sex Skylarks is not a very satisfactory job for anyone to undertake who is not well acquainted with the species. Both cock and hen are alike in plumage. When a lot of Larks are together, however, the cocks can be easily picked out by their larger size and greater length of wing—of course, I refer to fresh-caught Larks which have not previously been sorted over. If, however, you at any time get a very big Lark, you can be certain it is a cock. As the cock has a longer wing than the hen, the tips of his wings (when folded) reach appreciably further down the tail than in the case of his mate. The males, too, strut about their cage in a bold, "cocky" fashion, whereas the females are meek-looking and retiring—the difference is quite plain. The hen is generally more thickly spotted (blotchy) on the breast and back than the male. But size and length of wing are practically unfailing guides. Any dealer worthy of his salt will pick you a certain cock if you leave yourself in his hands and pay a fair price for the bird. The dealer knows. Colour is no guide at all. Many of the cock Larks we get in England in the winter (having migrated here from the Continent) are very grey in colour—almost ashy-grey—whereas our English-bred Larks are always more or less rufous in their coloration; so far as my own observations go, that is.

Nests for Hybrid Pairs.

Donovan.—I have from time to time had quite a deal to say on this subject. A small flight, with the nest-box up in a well-shaded corner is the best of all places for breeding Hybrids. A big cage, however (say not less than 3 feet long by 18 high by 12 to 18 inches wide), is also very good; likewise a double Canary-breeding cage with the centre slide withdrawn. The nest (or nest-box) should be screened in any case, either with dead broom, gorse, fir, etc., or brown paper fixed over one corner of the cage front. The easiest and best way to provide acceptable nesting material is to go out and collect and store old (but good) Greenfinch, Linnet, etc., nests—in fact, practically any Finch nests—and pull them to pieces when wanted. Thrushes' and Blackbirds' nests are all right at a pinch; with the help of an ordinary nest-bag, at all times. Many hen Bullies (and other British hens, too) will build in (sort of re-line) an old Blackbird or Thrush nest when nothing else will tempt them, and lay their eggs therein too, seldom dropping them on the floor. A suitably sized sod of clover grass (or turf), something like that given to Larks, with a shallow, cup-shaped depression beaten into it, will also invariably induce them to build thereon. To avoid mould (through damp) a piece of half-inch mesh wire netting should be tacked on to two strips of wood and be fastened in the breeding cage, on a level with the first cross-bar (and consequently the perches) from back to front. The piece of netting will, of course, be cut to size according to the depth of the cage. The sod should be placed on this wire netting platform. Some twigs, etc., can be twisted into the meshes so as to form at the front an effective and natural-looking screen. The old Thrush's or Blackbird's nest could be slung up in the same way. In a flight (small aviary) hen Bullies will sometimes favour a wood nest-box, and sometimes an old nest; while I have known them decline both, and build on shelves, etc.—many actually on the floor. Wicker (Roller Canary) travelling cages, with the front and inside fitments knocked out, are also often favoured; stuffed, say, with hay.

On Pairing Up.

Beginner, A.M.—The procedure when Mule-breeding with Canary hens is practically the same as when Canary-breeding, and you should most certainly invest in a book dealing with the latter, and carefully study the instructions given therein for the mating of birds, and for the management and feeding of young. There can be no "exact date" for pairing any breeding couples. If two birds are in "breeding condition" they will produce young in January; but if either one or both be not in "breeding condition," it will not matter one jot whether the month be Jan. or June, the result will be the same: unfertile eggs. No one can give a definite date to pair up on. Breeders have to settle the point for themselves, being guided by the state of their birds. You will find plenty of signs to help you. When the cock begins to take an interest in the hen, he will be found feeding her through the wires of the sliding division; he will also serenade her in vigorous and adoring tones. She, on her part, will accept his offerings of fodder, and, as the pairing fever fills her veins, will "bounce" from perch to perch, flapping her wings, and "calling" to her Romeo in a high-pitched voice—a sort of delirious shriek. One of the best things to do, however, when an understanding seems on the verge of being arrived at between any given couple, is to keep a sprig or two of nesting material in the lady's side of the house. When she begins to carry this about in her beak, and to look for a suitable place in which to deposit it, get a move on you at once—put in the nest-pan, and pull out the slide. Afterwards you must be guided by what happens between them. Should the cock bird interfere with the nest, only let him run with the hen a few hours daily, say, early in the morning, or the last thing at night, and shut him off entirely after the third egg has been laid, removing the egg each morning before letting his lordship in, and substituting a dummy egg.

Mating Up.

Mrs. Henry.—There is no great difficulty in getting a cock Finch to mate with a hen Canary, as a rule. I am assuming, of course, the former to be a steady, domesticated bird. The simplest and most straightforward procedure is that I am always recommending, viz., to get a two-compartment breeding cage, and run the hen in one half and the cock in the other, the wired slide being between them. They will thus get well acquainted before the time for muling comes round. When the hen shows a desire to go to nest, hang in the nest-box, give a supply of nesting material, and draw out the dividing slide. You can, if you choose, give the birds a run together for a time daily before leaving them finally together. You should read the reply given "Beginner, A.M." this week. You must not be in a hurry. The Goldfinch in a state of nature does not start to breed until very late—the end of April and beginning of May. The Greenfinch is also a late bird.

Brevities.

Two Matters (No nom-de-plume).—1: The Finch seed you name is very good so far as packet mixtures go, and would not cause the trouble; neither would the egg-food. As a matter of fact, I feel sure your bird is troubled with redmite. Get CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL, and read the treatment described at length in the article entitled "Diseases of Birds and How to Treat Them," under Parasites. 2: The notes of the Bramblefinch would not affect the song of the Goldie.

Identity of Bird (W. J. J.).—The only bird I can think of which fits your description is the Bramblefinch, and this species does so perfectly, except that it cannot truthfully be said to be the "size of a Lark"; it is smaller.

A Goldfinch's Beak (T. J. B.).—It would not be caused by cracking either hemp or other hard seed, but most likely by catching the base of the beak on a rough edge of wire somewhere, or between two wires. It would not be "catching," that is communicable to other birds. Soak the part in hot water before you remove any scab, and afterwards again wash and paint on the place a little Friar's Balsam, bought from a chemist. What was the other query about?—I don't remember it.

Both Hand-reared (A. J. F.).—The likeliest mate for the hen Greenfinch would be a big cock Goldfinch. This is a cross not at all difficult to produce. The hen Chaffinch I should, if mine, mate with a heavily marked yellow cock Canary. Any Hybrids from them would be very valuable indeed. Seeing that both hens are Canary reared, they should do well.

A Matter of Procedure (A. Wilson).—My own experience leads me to strongly favour running one cock with one hen right through the season, providing they seem to hit it. Goldies are the only safe birds to run with several hens. Much depends on the hens, however. For instance, if your hen Bullie "called" to your Greenfinch as soon as he popped into the cage (many will do this when quite "ripe") he would undoubtedly do the needful. But if she did not, he would probably proceed to "set about" her; and Greenies can be very savage when they choose.

Pied Blackbirds (G.F.).—I think it likely that a pied cock Blackbird (or a normal coloured one from a pair which also threw pied young) would produce some pied youngsters when mated with the partly white hen which you have. I have never had the opportunity for experimenting, however. In one place near my native town, pied Blackbirds can be seen year after year, pretty conclusive proof that the tendency to come "rare-feathered" is an inherent one. When I tried breeding with white Linnets and with a cinnamon Greenfinch, I got only normal-coloured young.

Feeding a Thrush (Willie).—You must have been weary, Willie, last week, and missed reading my column, for in the replies given "Ginger" and "Cee Gee" I gave my methods of feeding Softbills, including Thrushes. Kindly refer thereto. Get some mealworms and give him a few daily; also "black-beetles" from a friendly baker, or someone who "stocks" them, and let him have a few of these also. Live foods, and a little finely-minced hard-boiled egg in the stock food, should soon bring a bird into song, if a cock, and steady.

Sweet and Low (H. M. Thrush).—Strange things happen, certainly; and I have heard curious stories about certain birds "singing down" others. In your case, however, I should rather think that the subdued song is the result of the young (1908) hand-reared Thrush not properly "feeling his feet" yet. No doubt, too, he is industriously learning some of the strophes executed by the Larks. You are feeding him well, and the warm room would hardly affect him adversely seeing that he has always been used to it. In the Spring you will find him sing out all right, I feel quite sure.

Chaffinch-Canary Mule (Beginner).—Try for the cross, by all means. If you succeed, you will have produced something very valuable. I do not know anyone who has succeeded in rearing young from the Chaffinch cock to Canary hen mating (nor vice-versa). The cage mentioned is a nice size, and should answer quite well.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Parrot with Watery Swelling.

R. A. D.—In such cases it is always best to call in a vet.; of course, the swelling must be pricked, and the watery humour got rid of by gentle pressure, but it should be done when the swelling or "bladder" is fully charged or ripe, and it is difficult to tell this without seeing the bird. With unskilled hands, and the bird suddenly jerking its head, it might easily be fatally injured in the act of pricking. However, with a little care and the needle or lance pushed just under the skin across the swelling, no harm should result. After all the humour has been pressed out, foment with warm water, dry off surplus water with a soft cloth, and anoint with a little spermaceti ointment, not sufficient to run among its feathers and make them greasy. For one day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and give two other doses with an interval of three days between each. In between, and continue for a month at least, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits should be given in addition to the seed mixture, with grit scattered over sand-tray, and a piece of clean cuttlefish should always be hanging in cage. Tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food, must not be given. I must repeat that the best method is to let a vet. see it, as in skilled hands almost immediate relief could be given. However, the above treatment if carefully carried out should give relief, and the bird ultimately recover condition.

On Outdoor Birdroom.

Picardy.—(1) If care is taken in watering the birds that the water is not slopped about, having no floor should not necessarily make it damp, especially if the earth inside is 6 inches above the outer ground level. (2) One inch pipe would be better, which does not protrude straight out, but has the end bent downwards. A flap at either end is the best, then you can admit air the opposite way to which the wind is blowing. (3) I should not advise putting the birds out before April, as during some portion of the day the temperature must be pretty high in your kitchen. Birds, like humans, soon get a chill, if they are left during raw, cold weather in a temperature much lower than that which they have been accustomed to. Unless the season proves exceptionally late, it should be safe to transfer the birds in April, but you must be guided by the weather.

An Excited Parrot.

E. E. C.—I do not know what species you have, as the name you quote is quite unknown to me; so till you describe it I can only venture on a provisional reply, and assume it is one of the seed-eating species. Your seed mixture is suitable, but a few oats would improve it, and there should be double the quantity of Canary seed to either of the other kinds. Give 3 grains of bromide of potassium dissolved in a little syrup, and the next day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water (one ounce), and after an interval of three days, repeat dose. Do not give bread and butter or egg custard. Also stop giving tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, and any kind of animal food. Any kind of ripe fruit it will eat, nuts, and plain biscuits are all wholesome. On receipt of your reply enabling me to define species, I will at once notify if any variation of above treatment is necessary.

Amazon in Poor Feather.

"Amaz."—An Amazon is all the better for taking almost an entirely seed diet, but most Amazons are very fond of boiled maize; unless it is very thin, it is eating more of the boiled maize than you imagine. Continue to tempt it with ripe fruit, and try an apple core. You might lightly dust its plumage with the sulphur; the bird is sure then to take a little of it in preening its plumage. Lightly spray it with tepid water twice a week, but carefully protect from draught till dry. Continue the Chemical Food, and also give 3 or 4 doses of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful in one ounce of water, and let this form the only drinking supply for the day; it can have ordinary water when this has been consumed, with an interval of three days between each dose. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in the cage, also a chunk of wood (piece of willow branch for preference) for it to chew up. Be as still as possible when attending to its food supply and cage, and things should improve somewhat a little later. The moult should be over now, though it is often very irregular. Report progress in a few weeks.

Mocking Bird Out of Condition.

A. E. T.—In the first place, keep bird from your other birds, as being newly imported it may be infected with some contagious disease. Every other day for a week, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and put 10 to 20 drops of Parrish's Chemical Food on the daily supply of soft food for a few weeks. Diet: Soft food, ripe fruit, ad lib., and live insects (8 to 12 mealworms about right), beetles, etc. The F. mixture should answer well, but I have not used egg for some years, and do not advise its use. The following is a good wholesome soft food mixture: 3 parts each ants' eggs and dried flies, and one part each game meal, crissel, biscuit meal and sponge cake—well mix and keep in a close tin in some dry place. Take the daily supply, and pour over it sufficient boiling water to make it crumbly moist (not wet), and at times, instead of game and biscuit meal, partridge and chicken meal can be used for the sake of change. Do not confine it to one kind of fruit; supply any kind of ripe fruit it will eat. However, to be quite clear, the treatment that suffices for the Shama should keep this bird in health; also once it has got over the hardships of importation. I do not think it is a cold, but bowel trouble from the details you supply. If there should be further developments write again without delay.

Birds for Aviary.

A B. C.—If I remember right, your county is a northern one, and I should certainly advise you to drop an end to the covered part of roof, as this is 8ft. distant from the window, and would not encroach across it; it would not darken the room at all, and would add greatly to the comfort of the birds. If you will send me a stamped-addressed envelope through the Editor I will send you a rough diagram of my idea. I still advise clearing out the Chaffinch and Robin; if you do not, you will pay the price later in disaster. It simply illustrates the difference in the individuality of birds. I have had six Madagascar Weavers in my aviary at one time, among Waxbills and small Ornamental Finches, and they never did any harm. The Pekin Robin is apt to help himself to an egg or two in the course of the year, but he is a handsome and merry chap, and has a cheery song. Grey and Green Singing Finches (only one pair each) would survive your winter, as also would Common and Green Avadavats and Zebra Waxbills, providing you fixed up a number of rush nests for them in snug corners under cover. Never spare these; have them greatly in excess of the numbers of your birds, and then every one is sure of a snug roost. A Lark would sing alright, but you must watch him till his demeanour is ascertained. The price you name does not allow a very wide choice. You can add the following:—Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Spice Birds, Silverbills, Bengalese, and a pair of the pretty miniature Diamond Dove, also a pair of Chinese Quails, would all make attractive additions to your aviary.

Brevities.

A Recovered Parrot (M. Shanks).—Glad to note the recovery has been so complete, and if you continue to diet as directed, is should thrive and continue in health and vigour. Draught, damp, and a vitiated atmosphere are the chief enemies of all living creatures.

Amazon with Dry Skin (A. de C. D.).—Continue the treatment already advised, and see the bowels are kept freely moving, but not watery loose. An occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia, as already directed, will suffice for this. Give as much ripe fruit as it will eat; well spray it with tepid water twice a week, keeping it carefully out of draught till dry, then anoint the dry portions of its skin with clean vaseline, taking care not to make it uncomfortably greasy.

Indian Parrot (W. G.).—The birds are termed Parrots and Parrakeets indiscriminately; the terms are very loosely used, and it would really be difficult to draw a dividing line between the two. It is an Alexandrine Parrakeet. It would depend on the schedule, but the bird would have to be entered in the Parrakeet class. You will find diet and treatment in recent issues. Ringnecks, Alexandrines, Moustache, and so-called Green Parrots all require the same treatment.

Changing the Diet (F. T.).—You are quite right; it is the Roseate Cockatoo. A sudden change of diet is rather risky for any bird, and I could have replied with more assurance if you had given me a little detail as to the sops, etc.; I can, however, be definite on one point. Tea, coffee, or milk, slop, fat, meat, or egg must be stopped at once. If it is eating at all freely of the proper dietary, a week would be sufficient to wean it from the unwholesome items. Newly imported about 7/6 to 10/- each, a talented talker, what you can get for it; it ought to fetch 40/-, at least from what you say. Only a small percentage talk to any extent.

Diet for Pekin Nightingale.—Soft food (see advt. cols.), or mix the following: Two parts each ants' eggs and dried flies, one part each crushed biscuit, crissel and sponge cake, well mix and store in some dry situation; take the daily portion and make crumbly moist. It can have as much ripe fruit as it will eat, also a teaspoonful of millet seed every other day, and such live insects as you can capture, with, say, three or four mealworms daily. Cage should be of the box type, and, say, 24 by 15 by 18 inches high.

Sexing Rosella Parrakeets (F.M.).—(1) These are almost infinitesimal; it would be very difficult to tell the sex of an odd bird, but it should not be difficult to pick a pair out of a number or from several caged alongside one another. There is generally some effeminacy in the hen which betrays it. The largest, boldest, and brightest coloured birds are usually males, providing they are all adult. (2) The same applies to the Red Rosella, but some hens have a patch of green on the nape, and though this is not constant, it may be taken for granted that a bird possessing this patch is a hen. (3) Canary, millet, oats, with a little hemp; the latter may be given in larger proportions during cold weather. Ripe fruit, green food, grass in flower, cuttlefish, grit and water, must also be regularly supplied.

What Bird? (Karachi).—It appears to me you have one of the Hanging Parrakeets. If you will kindly give me an idea of its size, I can give you a definite reply. In the meantime, continue your present diet as it is evidently doing fairly well thereon—let it have as much fruit as it will eat. On receipt of the details asked for, I will then give a full reply.

Fitting Room for Parrots, etc. (D. L. M.).—It is impossible for me to reply to a query so vaguely put. Kindly indicate approximately what kinds of Parrots or Parrakeets you wish to keep, and then I can help you. I am rightly not allowed to recommend special advertisers. In repeating query, please give full details.

What Parrot Is It? (E. E. C.).—I take it you have an ordinary Red Rosella Parrakeet, but will take an early opportunity of looking in at the Museum and verifying this. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in the cage, also a chunk of a willow branch. It should soon be able to keep its beak to proper proportions by exercising it on these. As regards the excitement, treat as already advised. Whenever the swelling on leg bleeds, touch with Friar's Balsam and keep the bird from pecking it till this has dried in. Providing there is no wound, lightly paint swelling with tincture of iodine, but do not use this when the swelling is bleeding. The Friar's will always check the bleeding.

Plants for Aviary (W. L.).—I know a roomy aviary in which there are quite a number of Aucubas, and the birds take no harm therefrom. However, I recommend the following, and for Finches plant them pretty thick, leaving two or three open spaces at intervals—Enonymous, Fir, Bamboo, Red and Black Currants, Elder, Veronica, Willow, with a plant or two of wild clematis, and Virginian Creeper, to ramble up and over the standards. Sow underneath various grasses, cereals, weeds, etc., in fact, make it a wilderness with an open patch here and there, and you should have good breeding results. Privet also is safe, the evergreen variety being the best for the purpose.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

Memo. Forms (H. E. Wilkinson).—We do not supply memo. forms free, but charge the nominal sum of 2s. for 250 sheets, or 2s. 6d. for 500 sheets; attractive and suitable design, and any wording desired.

Sawdust (H. Deely).—Coarse-cut pine sawdust (not the very fine dust) is largely used in cages and flights and indoor aviaries. It is excellent, providing grit be supplied also, and it is not allowed to get in the soft food (if used), nor choke up seed and water vessels.

Reports (A. Donnelly).—At this period of the year the number of club reports we receive is simply enormous, and it is not possible to guarantee insertion the same week as sent, though we always do our best to this end.

Bird Seeds (W. J. Andrews).—We are very much obliged to you for the suggestion, which we will give our best consideration. You do not make it clear whether you refer to ordinary seeds or to wild seeds.

A Liverpool Breeder (C. R.).—The secretaries of the Liverpool O.S., Messrs. Metcalfe and Hillmen, Reservoir Hotel, Whitefield-road, Everton, would probably be able to give you the information desired.

Edinburgh O.S. (W. M. Campbell).—Your "club notice" did not reach us until after we had closed for press last week.

Long Eaton and Dist. C.B.S. (A. E. Wigginton).—We cannot possibly insert the, same "club notice" two weeks in succession, unless the second insertion is paid for at our usual advertisement rates. Considerations of space will not permit it, and compel us to adhere to this rule.

Our Thanks to G. W. Doran, D. McCarthy, W. T. Goord, A. W., and others for cuttings and other interesting items.

NORTHAMPTON (Hand-in-Hand.

Monthly meeting, held on February 23rd, when a large number of members were present. A talk was given by Mr. J. Nason (Northampton), his subject being "The Crystal Palace Show." The lecturer, after speaking about most of the prize winners at the exhibition in a very masterly manner, went on to explain the difference between inferior specimens and champions that are winning to-day. —Mr. Nason being a well-known judge of cage birds, his remarks were listened to with great interest, and a deal of information was vouchsafed to those present as to how to breed and exhibit such champion specimens as were this year to be seen at the Crystal Palace.

GLASGOW & W. OF SCOTLAND B.C.

Usual monthly meeting held February 25, in the Good Templars' Room, 122. Ingram Street, when we were favoured with a paper on the "Breeding of Norwich Plainhead and Crests," by Mr. J. McLay (Kirkintilloch). The president Mr. R. B. Jarvie, occupied the chair, and there was a good turn-out of members. Mr. McLay's paper was most interesting, recounting briefly his experience of over twenty years in the Fancy. He had nothing special to advise in the way of pairing either of the varieties, but strongly favoured pedigree breeding, to which he attributes most of his continuous success. Mr. McLay impressed on his hearers the need of knowing how birds bought had been bred, and warned them against buying even a very good bird unless they had some knowledge of its parentage, as most likely, if from poor ancestors, the progeny would revert to type of earlier stock and disappoint the breeder. His main advice to young fanciers was to buy the very best they could afford from winning stock and off reliable breeders and advertisers, and be careful in mating to breed in the good points, and as far as possible breed out the objectionable features. The Chairman invited questions from the members, and quite a pleasant twenty minutes was spent, after which Mr. McLay was warmly thanked and invited to come again soon. The matter of continuing the open show was next discussed, and fully an hour was spent in friendly exchange of opinions as to the best methods of carrying on the exhibition, and it was agreed to do nothing definite till all the members had been requested to intimate how much they were willing to contribute to a guarantee fund to be called up before the show. Ten gentlemen were appointed to canvass the whole of the members before the March meeting, and on the response then reported our further action will depend. Twelve pounds was guaranteed among the members present. Eight new members were added to the roll, and a vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.—R. A. Brown, secretary.

GATESHEAD C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held on February 17th. There was a good attendance of members. The secretary having read the balance-sheet showing a cash balance of £14 15s. 2d., it was proposed and carried that members' prize money be paid at the rate of 3s., 2s., 1s., leaving a cash balance of £6 11s. 2d. in hand. The assets are valued at £5 12s., challenge cup, etc. The income showed a marked decrease on 1907, the ticket money being a good way behind. This was mainly responsible for the diminished balance in hand. The expenditure showed a marked decrease compared with 1907, with the exception of prize money, which is some £4 odd heavier on account of extra classes provided. This was considered most satisfactory. No doubt the long strike had effected the sale of tickets, etc., but whilst we are considerably down on last year, the members congratulated themselves that they still had a good balance to carry forward, whilst many of their neighbours' balances were on the wrong side. The show, it was pointed out, had proved a record so far as entries went, and also as regarded the many congratulatory letters received by the secretary upon the dispatch of birds, prize money, etc. A little squabble had occurred in class 37; the bird credited with winning should not really have had even a card, this being a clerical error on the part of the judge. The following were elected officers for 1909:—President, Ald. A. Gillies, J.P.; vice-president, Mr. W. Clark; chairman, Mr. T. Almond; vice-chairman, Mr. Shafton Robson; secretary, Mr. G. Buck, 30, Keswick-street; assist.-sec., Mr. H. Johnson; treasurer, Mr. T. Taylor; C.B.U. representative, Mr. T. Taylor; committee, Messrs. Mather, Longstaff, Hodgow, W. J. Smith, J. Moore, Campbell, Rule, G. E. Robson, E. Wright, Jonasson, and Hooper; auditors, Messrs. J. Brown, Grieve, and G. E. Robson. The show date was agreed upon as December 10th and 11th, this being nearest our late show date. The annual subscription next came up for discussion, and it was finally agreed that it be 2s. 6d., entrance fee 1s.—Thos. Taylor, late Secretary.

WANDSWORTH F.A.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the Red Lion Assembly Rooms, on February 18th, the occasion being the annual prize distribution, and the holding of a most enjoyable smoking concert. Mr. Field was to have taken the chair, but at the last moment was unavoidably prevented, and his place was taken by Mr. C. A. House, who was supported by a company numbering about eighty, amongst whom were Mr. and Mrs. Murrell, Mr. and Mrs. Summers, and Mr. Summers, jun., Mr. and Mrs. Bushby, Mr. and Mrs. Denham, Mr. and Mrs. Earl, Mr. and Mrs. Warwick, Mrs. and Miss Gorringe, Miss Rowe, Miss Blencowe, Miss Bolson, Councillor Fletcher, Messrs. Tarrant, Mills, Rose, Hull, Blofield, Bonnsell, Horsey, Sage, Pettifer, Tillman, Turner, Jordan, Lupton, George, Badenoch, Bothe, Berryman, Lightfoot, Coote, Parfitt, Bright, Clifford, Upton, etc.

In distributing the prizes, Mr. House addressed fitting remarks of encouragement and congratulation to the winners, and spoke of the pride which must be felt not only by themselves, but by their wives and friends present.—The prize-winners were:—Judging Competitions: Messrs. Murrell, Lightfoot, Bothe, Earl, Bushby, Roney, Lupton, and Jordan. Young Stock Show: Messrs. Tarrant, Horsey, Earl, Bushby, Taylor, Lupton, and Murrell. Annual Show: Messrs. Tarrant (challenge cup and specials), Bushby (challenge cup and specials), Tosh, Earl, Horsey, and Lightfoot.—The Chairman, in giving the toast of "The Wandsworth Fanciers' Association," congratulated the members upon the fact of having men amongst them who could not only breed winners, but also judge them. He referred to the successes of the members in open competition, making special mention of the winnings of Mr. Tarrant. He also eulogised the excellent management of the association, and wished it a successful future.—Mr. Tarrant, in giving "The Chairman," referred to Mr. House's good work in many branches of the Fancy, and expressed the pleasure the association felt in having his presence that evening.—A most excellent programme was gone through, the artistes being Miss Polly Gorringe, Messrs. Hull, Murrell, Mills, Wall, Turner, Parfitt, George, Blofield, and the gathering was one of the best in the history of the association.

A SIMPLE SEED-SAVER.

Sent by A. Heron, 4 F, Peabody Buildings, Roupell Street, Blackfriars, S.E.

I have had these seed-savers in use in my flight cages for about 18 months, with such satisfaction that I have given up all others. Put together a box about 3½in. by 2½in. by 1in., but making the back 2½in. high instead of 1in. Then cut four strips to form a frame round top, ¾in. wide. Tack these strips on top of box, when they act as a perch, and as a rim to stop seed being thrown out. Make a hole in the back to hang the box up by. I think my sketch will make all clear. I find this size go through the cage door all right.—A. Heron.

TO HOLD YORKSHIRE CAGES TO BREEDING CAGES.

Sent by J. Tennant, 34, Carlton Road, Shelton, Stoke-on-Trent.

Enclosed is a sketch showing a device for hanging Yorkshire show cages to one's breeding or flight cages. The sketch will explain itself. It is made of No. 10 tinned wire, with two bits of tin attached to keep the cage from sliding side-ways. These are very easily made, or cost but a few coppers to get made. I trust the idea will prove as useful to others as it has done to myself.—J. Tennant.

ROBBERY OF BIRDS AT PORTH.

Sir,—It is with regret that I have to announce the great loss which the Challenger Bros., hon. secs of the Porth C.B.S., have sustained through some unscrupulous person or persons breaking into their outdoor aviary and stealing the best of their well-known winning Yorkshire and Norwich Canaries and Goldfinches. It seems to me quite evident that the thieves had been there before, and knew exactly which cages the best birds were in, and we believe we can track the men to earth. For my own part, I have a good idea as to who and where they are. The Challenger Bros. and myself are within an hundred miles of the stolen birds.

Arthur H. C. Legg.

THE JUBILEE PALACE SHOW.

Sir,—Kindly permit me to announce that all liabilities in connection with the above show have been discharged. Should anyone have been overlooked, I should be glad to hear at once. I should like, also, to thank the many correspondents who have written me congratulatory letters. It is impossible to reply to them individually. The next National Show will be held at the Crystal Palace on February 4th, 5th, 7th, and 8th, 1910. I hereby make formal application to all specialist clubs for their support and the holding of their club shows.

J. W. Ramsden, Show Manager.

P.S.—Trower's specials are being sent direct by Messrs. Trower and Co.

THE BARTON CANARY AND BRITISH BIRD CLUB.

Sir,—A successful meeting of Cage Bird fanciers was held in the large club-room, Red Lion Inn, on February 26th, for the purpose of forming a society to encourage and assist fanciers. Several members were enrolled, and we hope to double the number at the next meeting. Mr. G. T. Beach was asked to take the chair, which he kindly did, and in his opening remarks he said that there was great need for a society in our town. He had received several names of fanciers who were unable to be present, but who were anxious that such a society should be formed. On the motion of Mr. G. Pettit, seconded by Mr. E. C. Dunn, it was unanimously agreed to form a society to be called "The Barton Canary and British Bird Club." It was also agreed that the annual subscription be five shillings per member. Mr. H. Chamberlain was appointed secretary, Mr. G. Pettit treasurer, and all persons wishing to join within twelve miles radius of Barton, Lincolnshire only, are requested to forward their names to the Secretary. The next meeting will be held on Monday, March 8th, at 7.30 o'clock, at headquarters, Red Lion Inn.

H. Chamberlain, Hon. Sec.

BRITISH BIRDS ON THE SHOW BENCH.

Sir,—I notice on reading the article in your 1909 Annual dealing with British birds as exhibited during the past season, that the author, after noting the decrease in the number of Waders shown, makes use of the expression "and rightly so." Now, although I have occasionally heard similar views expressed by ordinary fanciers, I have always put it down to the fact that many people are so constituted that they instinctively oppose anything new or unusual without having any logical reason for doing so; but when a recognised authority writing in such a work as Cage Birds Annual makes such a remark, it is time that admirers of such birds took up the point. It seems to me, and to many others with whom I have discussed the point, that in these days, when fanciers are aviculturists and cage bird clubs are ornithological societies, and when our ideas are so wide that every bird of a species that ever was known to set foot on these islands is a British bird, that it would not require a very broad view to include under the heading of "cage birds" every bird whose beauty of plumage, graceful actions and adaptability to domestication render it a suitable inmate of an aviary. If the birds can be tamed sufficiently to be put in small cages for exhibition purposes, the only possible objection to them disappears, and, on the other hand, their interest to the general public (usually simply lovers of Nature and quite unable to appreciate the hairs-breadth differences which interest fanciers) would tend to increase the gate, a feature which could be materially improved at most of our shows. The same applies to any other of our wild birds of reasonable size, and I was sorry to see in one of your reports that a judge had passed a Woodpigeon on such grounds, a bird which your reporter described as a "credit to its owner." It seems to me that in doing so the judge greatly exceeded his duties, for if the society responsible for the show had accepted the entry fee and allowed the owner to go to the expense necessary to stage his bird, then the owner had a right to have his bird judged on its merits as a typical specimen of its kind, and no judge had a right to allow his private opinion to have any weight in a matter that is, at any rate, open to discussion. When such birds as Toucans, Hoopoes, Creepers, Cuckoos, Jays, Magpies, Choughs, and Shrikes may be shown without question, where can the line be drawn other than by unusually large size or objectionable habits? What is really wanted is a better classification, so that species unsuitable to compete with one another, owing to great differences in size and structure, should not be exhibited in the "hotch-potch" that is now usually seen.

CAGES AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE SHOW.

Sir,—In reference to the correspondence on the above in your columns, we beg to state, as manufacturers of long standing, that the class in question being an open one, factors as well as manufacturers are allowed to compete. Therefore, in the case of middlemen exhibiting, the prices marked on the cages at the show have to allow a profit for three people: Firstly, the retailer; secondly, the factors; and thirdly, the manufacturers. Accordingly, some of the prices marked must have left a very small margin of profit, if any, to be divided between the three. Competition we know is very keen, but a living wage must be maintained. Our exhibits were all marked with a retail price which allowed the wholesale man a fair profit, and we are prepared to deliver carriage and packing free to any part of London to any wholesale buyer of goods in any quantity at a fair discount on the retail prices marked at the show.

G. H. Stelling and Son.

HOW WILL THEY MANAGE IT?

Sir,—With reference to the letter published in last week's Cage Birds, signed Woolhouse and Rogers, drawing attention to the fact that the dates of the Dulwich O.S. Pair Show will clash with that of the pair show to be held by the older local Society, and that, therefore, the same judge could not officiate at both functions, I would respectfully submit there is more than one judge of birds in the country. Inferentially, Messrs. Woolhouse and Rogers would have one believe the gentleman they have engaged to place the awards is the only judge procurable, inasmuch as they sarcastically remark, "They (the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S.) must bow to us this time." What a magnanimous spirit pervades some of the Dulwich O.S., to be sure! Why, school lads would blush to find themselves guilty of such palpably mean tactics. No; Messrs. W. and R., there will indeed be no question of "bowing," as you term it, as it will be easily seen that it is Mr. J. Dobson (so well-known in connection with Crystal Palace shows) who has been engaged to judge the Dulwich and Peckham Pair Show, and whose name has been confused with that of Mr. J. Robson, who is apparently to officiate at the fixture of the newly-formed Dulwich O.S.

A Member, D. and P. C.B.S.

A NOTED LINNET.

Sir,—Many thanks for the honour you have done my Linnet, "The Unbeaten," by picturing him in your valuable journal last week. The original sketch you sent me, life-size, is certainly a masterpiece; you are fortunate in having such a skilful artist on your staff. It is as natural as looking at the bird in the cage. He has been at most of the main shows in England and Scotland, and has been seen and commented on by most of the leading fanciers, and does not require more praise from me. Many of the leading judges say he is the best Linnet ever seen on the show bench; he certainly holds a record that will be bad to beat. How many Linnets have run so close for the special for best British bird in the show at such shows as the Scottish National and Crystal Palace? Many thought he was worthy of this honour. I was very sorry to part with him, as I am passionately fond of a Linnet, both for its charming song and as an exhibition bird. But I am going to America next month. I hope to be amongst the winners again in about 2 years. My American friends will be as pleased as I was of my success, as they think a lot of the Great Glasshouse over there. I wish your valuable paper Cage Birds every success. I always have it sent over there to me, and I always look forward to it.

ALTRINCHAM C.B.S. THROWN OPEN TO ALL COMERS.

SIR,—I am instructed on behalf of the Altrincham C.B.S. to inform your readers that at the annual general meeting it was decided to remove the radius of 4 miles, and throw the Society open to all comers. This Society is considered to be one of the most up-to-date, and as an inducement to prospective members it is well to note that throughout the season lectures and interesting items take place, also that the list of specials at the shows is a consideration which should act as an incentive. Subscription, 4s. per annum. Entrance fee, 1s. All intending members should communicate with the Hon. Secretary.

IS THE SCOTCH FANCY CANARY SLIGHTED?

SIR,—Where was the Scotch Fancy Canary at the recent smoker? I expected to hear about it, but it was kept in the background. Facts: That the Scotch Fancy Canary does not get its place; that the ambition to breed a good Scotch Fancy was not evident at the smoker; that big prices are not to be heard of; that I would like to see a member of the Govanhill Club breed a champion; that the members of Govanhill Club will give reputed breeders a hard run next show season; that the Albion Thistle Club has lost its chief supporter; that he has resigned, and given no reason; that the Glasgow Derby is again in swing; that it was a mistake to have eight classes; that the first prize in eight classes will scarcely clear the member's fee; that the Scotch Fancy Canary has lost the back; that a lot of them are plain; that likely breeding birds are advertised in your columns; that it is time the spring cleaning was on; that a prominent member of Glasgow has a nest of Scotch Fancy hatching; that he may hatch and rear a Derby winner is the wish of his friends; that presidents and secretaries should help the Scotch Fancy Canary; that the Scotch Fancy Canary should be preserved.

SCOTCH FANCIER.

THE PROPOSED SOCIETY FOR BOOSBECK, LINGDALE & DIST.

SIR,—I have waited for two weeks hoping someone who possessed greater scholastic attainments than myself would reply through these columns to "Birdy Man," who wrote anent this subject. There is already a society which includes Boosbeck, namely, the Guisborough and District Priory C.B.S. Now, I feel sure I am voicing the opinion of every member of our society when I say to "Birdy Man," come and join us. Perhaps if he had signed his name I should have known him. If not I should be pleased to make his acquaintance. Here is a splendid opportunity, Mr. "Birdy Man." Come to our Pair Show on March 13th, and make yourself known to me when I shall be delighted to meet you and introduce you to some of the jolliest and best-hearted fanciers it has ever been my lot to know during the 30 years I have been connected with the Fancy. You will find any of us glad to help you. Some of our meetings are very instructive, and they are held every month at Wear's Cafe, Church Street, Guisborough. Come to the Pair Show and bring your friends; you will see some good birds, and will be able to spend a pleasant Saturday afternoon, and get any further information you require anent the above society.

J. G. COOK, Chairman.

A BLACKBIRD WHICH DEFEATED A CAT.

SIR,—In a contemporary I have just read this interesting account of a Blackbird and a cat. The writer, Mrs. Watson, states:—"During last spring we remarked a somewhat strange incident. We have a cat that is a terror to all the birds in the neighbourhood. An adept in the art of stealthy approach and sudden pounce, she has brought death to many a warbler of the grove. Yet, at the beginning of May, her haughty, dashing step was changed to an abject, cowardly crawl. She hardly dared venture forth unless accompanied by a member of the family. What had altered her? Merely a bold little Blackbird, that, in defence of home and family, had resolved to 'bell the cat.' The moment 'Mouser' appeared, he would utter a rapid series of shrill cries, and, circling wildly over her, swoop with sudden savageness at her head. Indeed, he left his mark on both her ears. Moreover, not content with attacking her out of doors, he would fly fiercely at the window if he caught sight of her on the table within. Once, when only one person was in the room, at the far end of it, he actually flew in at the open window to hurl defiance at his sleeping foe. That done, he retreated to the tree outside to await the result of this insult. But 'Mouser' evidently considered discretion the better part of valour, and only curled herself round with an exaggerated air of indifference. As soon, however, as the young ones were able to fly, the Blackbird ceased his vindictive attacks, and peace reigned once more in the garden.

Dear Sir,

In testing our "Egg & Biscuit" you should not make the mistake of adding too much water. It must be borne in mind that 50% is actual egg, and therefore not of such an absorbent nature as entire biscuit preparations. Very little water indeed is needed.

There is also another fact which we desire to impress strongly upon you, and that is its strict economy compared to the home-made egg food. There is no waste, and it can be left in the cage for a week without going sour, although it is of course not advisable. The average analysis of an ordinary fowl's egg, as you may be aware, shows from 65% to 70% of moisture, which is of no nutritive value whatever, and this is extracted. Therefore, the whole nutriment of the egg is contained in the 35% of solids, and it will readily be seen how concentrated our "Egg & Biscuit" is (even with the addition of 50% of pure white granulated biscuit) against hard-boiled egg with about 65% of moisture. We claim that our "Egg & Biscuit" is equal in feeding value to hard-boiled egg alone, and should be used with a further quantity of ground biscuit added. The latter is supplied by us in 3½ and 7 lb. bags at 1/- and 1/9 respectively.

If there is any further information you or your friends would like, and you will kindly write us, we shall be glad to write fully. Trusting you will give this Food a fair trial during the forthcoming breeding season, and feeling confident it will be attended with good results, we are,

Yours faithfully,

THE LONDON & PROVINCIAL O.S.

SIR,—It may interest your readers to learn the result of the voting of the members of the above Society on the question of holding an annual show. 130 voting papers were sent out; 25 were in favour of a show confined to members; 23 favoured an open show; 7 papers were non-committal, and were declared void by the appointed scrutineers. Several papers have reached me too late to be counted.

THE EARLY BIRDS.

SIR,—I am a regular reader of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, and I am pleased to say I have made a good commencement this year. I have three young Yorkshire Canaries, which were hatched on February 21st, and all are doing well. Another nest is due on March 1st. I should like to hear in your next issue if other readers have been so successful? The weather is bitterly cold here, but my bird-room never gets below 50 degrees. My Linnets and Canaries are all on full song. I wish your valuable paper every success.

A YORKSHIRE HEN GOING BLIND.

SIR,—I have a 1908 Yorkshire hen which is going blind—one eye is quite sightless, and the other nearly so. There appears to be a light spot forming in the centre of the eye. The bird is in good health otherwise, but I am afraid I shall have to kill it. Could any reader give me an idea as to what it is, and, if so, state if there is a cure for it?

A NEW SOCIETY FOR QUEEN'S PARK, GLASGOW.

SIR,—At a meeting held in Marie Stuart Hall, Langside Road, Queen's Park, Glasgow, on February 24th, a new club was formed, called the Queen's Park (Glasgow) Norwich, Canary, Mule, British and Foreign Bird Club. Mr. John Edwards and Mr. Robt. Jeffrey were elected as president and vice-president respectively. The next meeting is to be held in the same hall at 8 p.m. on the last Friday of March. Anyone desirous of joining the club will oblige by communicating with the secretary.

ALLEGED EXHIBITING OF JUDGE'S BIRDS AT ARBROATH.

SIR,—Owing to business engagements, I have not seen my CAGE BIRDS until to-day. I shall be very pleased to explain to Mr. Milne (of Arbroath Cage Bird Society) in next week's issue.

JAMES STRACHAN.

THE PROGRESS OF THE CINNAMON CANARY.

SIR,—In your last issue of CAGE BIRDS I see a letter, signed "Hugh Riding," is headed "The Progress of the Cinnamon Canary." In this letter it is stated that if all Cinnamon breeders would join the C.C.C., they would benefit very much. Being a breeder of Cinnamons myself, I should be much interested in hearing particulars of the club, with a view to becoming a member.

F. E. RICHARDSON GRIFFITHS.

(We may say that the secretary of the Cinnamon C.C. is Mr. R. J. Pretty, 6, Old Burlington-street, London, W., and he would, no doubt, be very pleased to hear from our correspondent, or from any other reader desirous of joining the club.—EDITOR.)

SOME WILD SEEDS WANTED.

SIR,—Having read in your valuable paper what fine things plantain, charlock and shepherd's purse are for Canaries, I should be grateful if any of your many readers would kindly forward me a sprig or leaf of these plants, as, no doubt, they all grow in this district. But I do not know them by the names mentioned.

A. KING.

PROPOSED SOCIETY FOR DUNFERMLINE AND DISTRICT.

SIR,—A meeting of fanciers favourable to the formation of a Cage Bird Society was held in the Co-operative Hall on February 27th. A large turn-out of fanciers answered the summons, and a good many names were enrolled. The district covered by the Society extends to a radius of eight miles. Mr. J. Rankine was called to the chair, and after a committee had been formed (pro. tem) to look after the drafting of rules, the meeting was adjourned until Saturday, 13th March.

J. RANKINE.

WHAT IS A "NOPE"?

SIR,—In this week's CAGE BIRDS I notice in the "Brevities" an answer by Mr. G. E. Weston, to a correspondent as to what kind of bird a "Nope" is. The reply conveys the answer—Bullfinch. So far as I can remember of my younger days in North Lancashire, we used to call Tits "Nopes." so I should be pleased to hear other fanciers' versions of the names, as to which species of bird it applies, and thereby render to readers of your valuable paper further enlightenment on this small, yet a very interesting subject.

R. GARDNER.

(We have referred to Mr. C. L. Hett's "Bird Dictionary," and find that he, too, gives "Nope" as a local name for the Bullfinch. Frequently, however, one local name will be found to be applied to several distinct species. We shall be pleased to hear from readers on the subject.—EDITOR.)

SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN (OPEN DERBY) O.A.

SIR,—We have pleasure in informing you that during the week there has been circulated a very large number of our membership tickets for session, 1909. Unfortunately, a serious error in Rule No. 2 was not discovered until they were sent out. Instead of reading as therein printed, the rule should read as follows:—"That the object of the association is to hold an Open Derby Show for young "Scotch Fancy and Belgians" on the last Saturday of September each year, and that each member, by paying the sum of three shillings annually, will be entitled to show ten birds, one in each class, but must not exceed two in any of classes one to eight, maximum four in each class nine and ten." We request fanciers who have received a ticket to make a careful perusal of the rule, so as to avoid any misunderstanding in future. In sending out our tickets, should any fanciers have been overlooked, by their making application to any of the undernoted, all information as to the aims and objects of the association will be gladly supplied. Our venture last year met with a great success, so we confidently appeal to members to rejoin us again, and kindly endeavour to get others to join with them. We, the executive, tender our best thanks to all those fanciers who have advanced the interests of the association.

THE ALLEGED STAINED LINNET AT BRISTOL F.A. SHOW.

SIR,—I appreciate Mr. Lythgoe's letter, but there is a grave misunderstanding, for I think if anyone reads the letter they will at once conclude that the protest was to be enclosed with the deposit. This I objected to on the grounds that a personal interview was what I required. Further, with regard to Mr. Lythgoe making a statement to the effect that I could attend the C.B.U. meeting, etc., in person, and bring witnesses, I am really afraid I must have been under the influence of something stronger than coffee, for had I understood such a thing, he can take it from me that I should have been there "like a bird," for that was just what I required, and had that been granted a deal of correspondence would have been saved. The reason I objected to the deposit business so much, is because I couldn't get a proper hearing; at least, I was given to understand so by more than one in the Fancy, that the C.B.U. would not hear you in person, and all protests must be made in writing. With regard to the letter signed by "Bristolian" (another individual who prefers to write under a nom-de-plume rather than sign his own name), I will do my utmost to answer the questions put by him to his satisfaction, and to the best of my ability. (Of course, I can guess who your correspondent is.) In reply to the first question, if your correspondent looks up the dates, I think he will find that the Bristol F.A. show was held some time after the M. and N.C.O.S. With regard to the "pills that want some swallowing," as he states, if they are that difficult to understand, then it only makes my case against the man from whom I purchased the bird far more black than it was before, as what I have stated is what I was told the bird had done, and more on to it. As to whether they are all blind, I hope such is not the case, but if they are blessed with the best of eye sights, they may not have noticed the bird was stained. All good-coloured birds are not stained, you know. As to whether the previous owner has been disqualified for staining, I have heard several tales, but I don't wish to deal with that here. If you give a good hard guess, you will not be far wrong, I don't think. As to the interesting query whether the bird ever had a bath, this I cannot say, for it was not in my possession long enough to see before being disqualified, although it frequently bathed afterwards.

THE TYPE OF PRESENT DAY WINNING NORWICH PLAINHEADS.

SIR,—Much controversy has gone on, and is going on, respecting: What is a Norwich Canary? Opinions differ, and I know a hard and fast line would be bad to draw, but yet something ought to be done, measurements ought to be agreed upon, or we shall very soon be showing because a certain judge is there—not because Norwich classes are provided. To-day, judges vary so much that anyone coming into the Fancy cannot accept the good advice to visit some of the leading shows, and see what kind of bird is winning, and try to breed accordingly. To men like myself who have had so many years' experience, the kind of Norwich that sometimes wins is a puzzle, and one wonders what will become of the beauties that stand cardless. May I draw attention to two Palace winners for alround Norwich?—Mr. N. Cooper's unevenly marked yellow cock, and Mrs. A. Martin's clear yellow cock. Are these birds 6¼ inches long, flat-sided, and long-winged? No, no. I venture to say they do not exceed the measurements I give here:—

HEAD: Round, almost a circle of 1 inch diameter—one inch from top of the head to neck, but a trifle more from front to back. BILL: ⅜in. from point to extreme base, and 1 inch from base of bill to back of the head, 1⅜ inches in all. EYE: Centre 7-16 of an inch from top of the head, and 9-16 from the neck. Eye a trifle forward; not quite in the centre of the head. NECK: 1⅛ inches thick from front to back. CHEST: Should be 1½ inches deep, giving a chest measurement of 4 inches (decidedly not less). WING: 3 inches, measured at an angle with the back; close and well set, meeting nicely on the back. TAIL: 1½ inches long, a trifle raised, compact, not flat and split, or V-shaped. This will give a bird 5½ inches long from top of head to end of tail.

I am enclosing a pen sketch of what I mean. If some of my geometrical friends will carefully point off the various measurements and sketch the bird, joining up each point, they will find a Norwich Canary very much desired, of Bullfinch type, showing any amount of substance, and I make bold to say tip-top quality, as birds much larger than this lose quality of feather and are—with a very few exceptions—very rough. Some beautiful types and qualities have been shown in your paper lately that do much credit to your artists and general staff. Accept best wishes for CAGE BIRDS, and for a good year to all fanciers.

CINNAMON BORDER FANCIES AND THEIR COLOUR.

SIR,—Your correspondent, "Cinnamon Border," apparently starts with the intention of disagreeing with my remarks on the Cinnamon Borders in your report of the Palace Show, yet finally agrees with me that the Cinnamon Borders of to-day are not what they should be in colour! It must be sixteen or seventeen years ago that I saw a Cinnamon Border exhibited at Carlisle, and nine or ten years ago they were often shown at the Border shows of Carlisle, Workington, Wigton, Whitehaven, Kelso, Coldstream, Keswick, etc. "Cinnamon Border" seems to think that because he did not see a Cinnamon Border until four years ago they were not in existence. If he will ask such old fanciers as Messrs. Arnot, Jamieson, Downie, Duncan, Bennet, and a few others, he will soon find that Cinnamon Borders are not of the mushroom growth some folks would have us believe. About eight years ago Mr. M. Jamieson had a yellow which was far superior to any Cinnamon staged in the Border section at the recent Palace Show. I daresay there are others beside myself who can remember this bird. It is said, I see, that classes have only been provided for them for three or four years. People who rush into the press should be sure of their facts. For eight years past "Green or Cinnamon" has appeared in some of our best schedules. I say now, as I said in my report on the Palace Borders, that "Cinnamon is Cinnamon, and not a washed-out greenish-drab." "Cinnamon Border" admits these greenish drab birds exist, and says some judges go for them. The rich clear colour which in the yellows approaches to chocolate, and in the buffs is almost the same tone as the spice known as Cinnamon, is the tone of colour which I like, and this colour is the most beautiful, far exceeding that of the washed-out greenish-drab specimens. A good Cinnamon should be sound and rich in its colour, and not show any approach to green. The Border being now a bird of type and position, colour breeding does not receive the amount of attention it deserves, and this doubtless accounts for the loss of colour. Years ago, when the breed was known as the Cumberland Fancy, or Common Canary, and its highest standard representatives were supposed to bear some resemblance in shape to a man's thumb, things were different, and even in those days birds of Cinnamon hue were in existence.

HOW TO MAKE AND USE AN AVIARY FOUNTAIN.

SIR,—I think "Bird Lover's" fountain, which I have just seen illustrated in CAGE BIRDS, is absurd, and that it will be a pity if fanciers try to make it, for water cannot rise above its own level without other pressure. I thought that a note in next week's issue might save readers trouble for nothing.

T. ROBSON.

SIR,—Some years ago I made a fountain like that illustrated by Mr. Moody, and it is all right, but some little trouble in the blowing-up. Seeing "Bird Lover's" fountain in "C.B." I was struck with the idea that it would not work. I made one and find mine will not play. Can "Bird Lover" prove that his idea is workable? If so he will much oblige.

DEATH OF A WONDERFUL LINNET.

Is It a Record Career?

SIR,—I am writing to inform you of the death of my old champion Linnet, "Joe." The bird was singing incessantly on Sunday last, but on Monday he suddenly fell from his perch in a fit, and had other fits continually for twenty-four hours before he died. He was eight years old, and during the last show season was exhibited six times, standing first each time. This makes sixty first prizes which he had to his credit, including the Crystal Palace twice, besides many seconds and thirds, of which I have not kept a record. He has also taken special for best British bird in show on several occasions. During his whole show career he was only out of the money twice, once at the Crystal Palace in 1905, where he was v.h.c., and once at Dulwich and Peckham, where he stood cardless. He was always fed on the usual Linnet mixtures, with abundance of good hemp, and he did well on it; in fact, I always give my Linnets plenty of best hemp. I have had a good many enquiries about the old bird, especially as I did not enter for the late Crystal Palace show, but the reason I have not shown much this season is that I have been away from home a great deal since September last. I think the old bird's career constitutes a record for any exhibition Linnet, hence my reason for writing.

THE YORKSHIRE C.C. OF IRELAND CHALLENGE CUP.

SIR,—Your correspondent in last week's CAGE BIRDS, who signs himself "William Henry," must be a very charitable sort of a chap, and awfully off-handed, by suggesting that I should give the prize-money I won at Clapham to the Fresh Air Fund. Now, Mr. William Henry, I wonder if you did the same with all the prizes and specials you dreamt of winning with birds you said you bred yourself? Mr. William Henry, you had better keep very quiet, and keep under the nom de plume, or you may hear more than you would like to hear. You are not a resident in Clapham, but you are a disappointed one in Ireland, and you are no great credit when you are afraid to give your name and address. With your permission, Mr. Editor, I will make this man a sporting offer. I will deposit with you a five-pound note, if Mr. "William Henry" does the same, with his proper name and address. When he has the money deposited with you, and you inform me that he has done so, I will answer his questions through CAGE BIRDS, and if I was not eligible to compete in the novice classes at the late Clapham Show, I will forfeit my £5 note and the prize-money I won to the Fresh Air Fund. If I prove to your satisfaction that I was eligible to compete as a novice, he must forfeit his fiver to the Fresh Air Fund, while I have mine returned. Now, Mr. "Henry," I want to see if you are a sportsman, and I want to have your reply in next week's CAGE BIRDS, with your full name and address. If this offer is refused, I will refrain from any further correspondence on the subject.

READ AND PONDER.

All From Last Week's Post-bag.

Kindly thank all who replied to my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. C. Heath (Leeds). I received 37 letters in all.

I must say that replies to my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS are simply pouring in, writes Mr. J. Rogers (Fishguard). There will be no doubt in my mind in future as to which is the best bird paper.

I have tried an advertisement in a contemporary, and up to the present have had not one reply. Am always certain of getting replies in CAGE BIRDS; it has never failed me yet.—W. R. MYERS (Bradford).

I had another answer from my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS last week, after these many weeks, writes Miss Annie Marshall (Winchfield), which shows how your valuable journal is scanned even when it is weeks old.

I am glad to let you know that last time I advertised in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. F. Cockerill (Stockport), I had so many replies that I could not possibly attend to all the applicants. This speaks well for your large circulation.

Owing to breeding so many birds last season, we have had a big lot to sell, writes Mr. W. Downing (Manchester), but every advertisement in CAGE BIRDS brought me customers, even from as far away as Bonnie Scotland, and soon I will be able to sing, "Sold out and drawn the brass."

I enclose herewith advertisement for next issue. I received an order from last issue for £7 (from one cus' ner), which is very encouraging, and I have supplied over 400 Siberian hen Bullfinches. Not so bad, is it? And all through advertisements in CAGE BIRDS.—BERNARD HOLLINS (Hull).

Permit me to thank all who inquired after my birds, which I advertised in your very valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. James Findlay (Glencarse). I have sold them all, as I had no time to look after them. I have had so many inquiries that I could not reply to all, only to those who sent stamps.

Respecting the advertisement of a dog which I sent you, I wish to express my thanks to you for inserting same in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS. A gentleman came on the Monday for same, and bought him, and the dog has gone to a good home. I never dreamed that I should have anyone come so soon. I might say that a cousin of mine showed me CAGE BIRDS, which he has taken for some time. I have given my own newsagent an order to deliver CAGE BIRDS regularly.—T. B. EDWARDS (Cwm., Mon.).

I consider it my duty, writes Mr. De Von, of that well-known firm of importers, the Continental Live-Stock Company (Bethnal Green Road, London), to let you know a few of the results obtained through the medium of CAGE BIRDS. We have recently had several orders from different parts of the world, and have executed several orders from Australia, several from the United States, one last week from Belgium, and to-day I have an order come in from Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies. Of course it goes without saying that this proves the tremendous circulation CAGE BIRDS must have.

Everybody Likes the "Annual."

I always like to have a copy of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL beside me.—WILLIAM WATT (Dunfermline).

I received my copy of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL all right, and I think it is just grand. Long may it prosper.—JAMES FINDLAY (Glencarse).

I think CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL surpasses all previous productions, and should find a place in every fancier's room.—C. DUKES (Stockton Heath).

Allow me to congratulate you upon this year's CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. I cannot understand any fancier or bird breeder failing to secure a copy of same, for it is worth its weight in gold.—J. C. WILMOT (Bedford).

I think your CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL a grand book, and one which ought to be in every fancier's birdroom. It is an exeellent thing for amateurs, and a complete guide to everything in the Fancy.—F. LING (Oulton Broad).

I received CAGE BIRDS ANNUALS alright. The members think the ANNUAL is better than ever, and I personally find it full of information for both old and young fanciers.—W. B. SMART, hon. secretary, Loanhead and Dis. C.B.S.

I am pleased to inform you that I have sold all the CAGE BIRDS ANNUALS I sent for, the members being delighted with them. They say the ANNUAL is a marvellous six-pennyworth.—R. REYNOLDS, secretary, Raunds and Dis. F.S.

I have received one of your CAGE BIRDS ANNUALS for 1909, and also one of your books on "Canary Breeding for Beginners." I can assure you I am very well pleased with them both, for I am sure everything is straight and easy, and I have made two double breeding cages from the sketch which you have so carefully reproduced. I am now putting four pairs of Canaries together, and I am "going by the book" in buying and pairing yellow and buff and in buying as good birds as possible. I hope I shall be a successful breeder. I am only a working man, and hope to have luck. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.—J. CHAMBERLAIN (Manchester).

Nests of birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

TO-DAY (Saturday) the great amalgamated prize distribution and social takes place at the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, and it must be specially noted that ladies are cordially invited to both the social and the dinner. The dinner is very likely to be well attended, forty or fifty at least being expected; in fact close on this number have already sent in their names. For the social provision has been made for some three hundred visitors.

IT has been arranged for the prizes to be distributed in the following order, and as near as possible to times stated:—Open Norwich Plainhead Club 6.45 p.m., British Bird and Mule Club 7.15, Yorkshire Union 8, CAGE BIRDS 8.30, Yorkshire Canary Club 9.15, and Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C. 9.45, the remainder of the evening to be occupied by toasts and songs. The dinner will be served at 4.30 prompt. Mr. D. Sunderland, as general chairman for the day, will occupy the place of honour at the head of the table. Don't forget to come; all are welcome.

BALLOT papers of the Yorkshire Union for the election of officers, revision of rules, etc., are now in the hands of the members, and it is hoped that a far larger number than last year will be returned to the scrutineers. For the office of secretary, Mr. H. Hill is returned unopposed; for vice-presidents there are nine nominations; trustees, two required, four nominations; auditors, two required, four nominations. The vice-president elected will be the president next year, this office falling to each society in turn. The retiring auditors and trustees are eligible for re-election.

WITH regard to the revision of rules, several alterations, additions, and new rules are open to the vote. Firstly, we have proposed "an annual general meeting" to take the place of the "annual ballot." For very many reasons the ballot is by far the best method. The members have more time to study things over, and weigh them in the balance, and for members residing outside it is par excellence. The only things against it are the expense and the meagre number of papers returned. The next item is of minor importance. Should the alteration be carried, it means that the council will be able to employ persons on sub-committees who are not members of the council; in cases of dispute, etc., this would be a distinct advantage.

IN regard to Rule 12, as to the election, etc., of judges, there are three alterations in view, firstly, that the judges be elected by the council, and that one judge shall officiate at two shows, one during each half of the season. This is a reversion to the old order of things, the judges at one time being elected by the council; but the system did not meet with everybody's approval. The latter part, that one judge shall officiate at two shows, must be left to the discretion of the members. The other two suggested alterations to this rule, are only of minor importance, and voters will easily see the benefits of them.

NEXT we have an alteration dealing with members who leave their subscriptions unpaid. The alteration is not a great one, and gives the Union power to expel such defaulting members. —The question of minimum classification is a vexed one, and it is on the board that this rule be abolished. The main point which carried its adoption was to keep the number of classes at a show up to respectable numbers, and not to let dates be used for small exhibitions. However, the general feeling is that those who have to stand the loss should have choice in the matter. Of course, those who are allotted dates at the end of the season are those whom the rule would most seriously affect.

FOLLOWING up last year's attempt, the novices are to vote upon the subject of limit in price. At present birds can be claimed at £5 5s. Of course, it is hard lines if a novice loses a good bird he does not wish to part with, but on the other hand the real object of the limit must not be lost sight of, viz., to prevent or obviate the exhibiting of a professional's birds under the name of a novice.

WATER tins are again to come under consideration. The disadvantages are the cleanliness (or otherwise) of those belonging to the Union. It is a big job for one or two men to clean 500 or 600 tins, whereas if supplied by the exhibitor himself, it is a small matter for him to keep the few tins required in perfect condition. Should exhibitors supply their own, a uniform standard tin will be adopted.—The rule in regard to claiming birds from selling classes is marked for an original alteration. Under the old system, when two or more fanciers were wishful to obtain a certain bird, all the parties had to put in claims for it; then it would go to the highest bidder. Now, should the new rule be carried, the first claimant shall offer the catalogue price, the second claimant 2s. 6d. advance, and all further claims must be made at 2s. 6d. each advance, until the bird gets to a figure such as only one individual will pay. The parties who have brought forward this new rule claim that it will obviate the rush at five o'clock attendant on the appearance of a clipper in selling classes, and do away with auctioneering, this latter method laying one open to prosecution when not performed by a certified auctioneer, and few societies have such a one in their ranks. The remaining additions and new rules will be dealt with next week.

THE Creamery Co., GARSTANG.

THE Morley and Dis. C.B.S. had a lecture on "Pairing" on Saturday last, by Mr. Samuel Dean, the secretary of the Yorkshire Union. The standard of the Yorkshire bird was gone through, the lecturer giving the various points, and the methods to obtain them. A few questions were asked and answered, then came a discussion on the Yorkshire Union, its advantages, rules, etc. The society will now decide the momentous question of joining the ranks of the Union, and no doubt they will do so at no distant date, many of the members being in favour of the project. A hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer closed the proceedings.

GREAT Horton Good Intent O.S. had a splendid members' show on Saturday last, eighty-five birds being staged, and the judge, Mr. W. Cruise, had a lively time sorting out the winners. This was the first show of the series arranged for this season, and it is fully expected the competition will be keen all through, as some good specials are provided.—The Great Horton O.S. also held a members' show on same date, the officiating judge being one of their oldest members, Mr. F. Benn, who had about seventy birds to place, and I hear one of the novices literally "swept the deck." No doubt he will soon be bringing his birds out in open competition.

I HEAR that a fine example of the Snipe was shot on Saturday last at Leaventhorpe, a place within three miles of Bradford Town Hall. Poor thing!

"STRAIGHT-'UN."

TONG AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

At our last members' meeting the secretary moved that the Tong and Dist. C.B.S. offer to Messrs. Ogden Bros. hearty congratulations on their recent successes at the Crystal Palace Show. Mr. O. Atkinson seconded, and Mr. S. Rushforth ably supported. Mr. S. Ogden, on behalf of Ogden Bros., replied, giving a brief sketch of their career in the Fancy.—J. SMITH, Hon. Sec.

COLCHESTER & DISTRICT F.A.

Annual meeting held February 17th at the Shaftesbury Hotel, the Chairman of Committee (Mr. F. Page) presiding over a representative gathering. The secretary's report referred to the success which had attended the exhibitions held in connection with the Essex A.S. and the local show. There was a balance in hand of over £4. With the idea of increasing the membership, the committee decided to extend the radius to 25 miles from the Colchester Town Hall. The chairman (Mr. F. Page) and the vice-chairman (Mr. E. Prime) were re-elected, and a committee was chosen by ballot. The efforts of the hon. sec. (Mr. R. Moger) were recognised by the presentation of a handsome piece of plate, provided by voluntary subscriptions on the part of the members.—Mr. Moger said he had the interest of the Association at heart, and was prepared to do in the future as he had done in the past.—J. BROWN.

GARSTON AND DISTRICT B.B.A.

Meeting and pair show held February 17th, in the Baptist School Room, Earp Street, Garston. A fair number of birds were shown, and a few new members were made. Next meeting to be held March 17th, when a members' British bird show is intended to be held. Time and place later.—J. F. D. ALEXANDER, hon. secretary.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual supper held in the White Lion Hotel. Afterwards we had a few real good songs from Mr. J. G. Allen, and we spent the remainder of the evening discussing the feeds we have used through the breeding season. Various feeds were spoken of, and the results obtained. We heartily invite all fanciers to join us.—A. WIDDOWFIELD, secretary.

DARLINGTON C.B.S.

A smoking concert was held at the Half Moon Hotel, on 17th February, when a good muster of members and friends was present. Mr. R. Todd presided, and a splendid programme was gone through. Mr. H. Nightingale opened the programme with a song. Messrs. Stapleton, T. Reed, W. Underwood, J. Malloy, and J. Pattison also rendered some capital songs. Several selections were given by the pianist, Mr. J. Leeming, and a pleasant evening was brought to a close by singing "Auld Lang Syne."

CARDIFF AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Last monthly meeting held February 18th, at Maskell's Restaurant, Queen Street. Mr. Melhuish presided, our chairman, Mr. F. D. Jones, being unable to be present owing to family bereavement. Several new members were enrolled. The 1909 officers were nominated, and several additions to the committee. Messrs. Smith and Tonkin were elected auditors, and Mr. W. Sampson as C.B.U. delegate. Mr. Thorne gave a brief report of the recent whist drive and dance, and Mr. W. Sampson a few remarks relative to the C.B.U. meeting at the Crystal Palace.—W. S. NEGUS, hon. secretary.

HYDE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Very successful meeting and table show, held on February 20th, there being 82 actual fanciers in attendance, besides many others who are interested in the Fancy. The table show was quite a success, there being 17 entries, comprising 11 British and six Canary. Mr. E. Marlor judged the British. 1, Bardsley; 2, Handford; 3, Foden; 4, Bramwell. Mr. N. Stansfield judged the Canaries. 1, Rowbottom; 2, Foden; 3, Barraclough; 4, Allsop. After this Mr. Allsop was presented with a solid oak inkstand, as an appreciation by the members of his past services as secretary, which office he ably held for three years. Replying, Mr. Allsop said it gave him great pleasure to receive such a beautiful present, but his appreciation would have been greater if he had had the same encouragement that our present secretary had as regards the increased number of members, and the interest taken in the society's business. Mr. Allsop then gave us his promised lecture, in a very able manner. A vote of thanks to him brought the meeting to a close.—F. BARRACLOUGH, secretary.

LANCASHIRE C.A.

Twenty members sat down to a capital dinner (our first), served at the Pioneers' Store, Rochdale. Ample justice was done to it. The dinner over, we went to the rooms of the Rochdale O.C. to hold our meeting and presentation of medals won by members during the season. Our president, Mr. Nadin, presided. We had the honour of welcoming Mr. F. Hamer, of Oldham, as a member. Several suggestions for the popularisation of the Lancashire were made, and during the discussion one of our members, Mr. Butterworth, secretary of the Rochdale O.C., gave us the pleasing information that during the last few months they had made six new members, who were taking up the Lancashire. It was decided that, in addition to the 12 medals already allowed for, and if our funds allow, we should give a few medals for best vhe. birds, for the purpose of encouraging the breeders. Seeing our subscriptions are so small, we hope to make a few more members at our next meeting, to be held March 27th, at the Old Boar's Head, Middleton, when, after the meeting, we intend, if possible, to get Mr. Barrass (Rochdale) to give us a lecture on Lancashires. Anyone, whether a member or not, will be welcome to attend.—WM. ADAMS, hon. secretary.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

The president of the society (Mr. W. W. Theobald) entertained the members to dinner at the Sydney Arms Hotel, on February 17th. In the unavoidable absence of the president, the chair was occupied by Mr. J. H. Boulter, and a company of about 30 sat down. After the loyal toasts, which were submitted from the chair, Mr. Grant proposed the health of the president, the toast being enthusiastically received. The hon. secretary (Mr. A. S. Treasure), in presenting the medals won at the various table shows during the past year, said those shows had been an innovation, and although they had been a success, they had not realised anticipations. He hoped another year a greater number of birds would be shown. He then presented the medals to the successful exhibitors as follows:—Crests, won by Mr. Gerards, with 37 points: Crest-Bred, Mr. Grant, 43 points; Norwich yellow, Mr. Child, 41; buff, Mr. Child, 37; Borders, Mr. Lewis, 28 points; Mules, Mr. Ponnsett, 29; British, Mr. Skinner, 61 points. "The Society" was submitted by the chairman, who mentioned that he had been associated with the Cage Birds Fancy for twelve or fourteen years. Since the resuscitation of the society, some years ago, its membership had steadily increased. Last year's show was one of the largest in the county's history, and he was pleased to see what an excellent show of birds was made. The financial position of the society was satisfactory, and there was a balance in hand to carry forward to next year. Mr. Grant and Mr. Hands, whose names were coupled with the toast, briefly responded. The health of the chairman was proposed by Mr. Treasure, Mr. Boulter suitably acknowledging the compliment. During the evening a capital musical programme was given, the contributors being Messrs. H. Yund, A. Rogers, Sherwood, Gwillim, J. H. Boulter, Arkell, Lewis, and Tibbles. The last mentioned also acted as accompanist.

General meeting held in Free Gardeners' Hall, recently, when there was n good turn-out of cage bird fanciers. The election of office bearers resulted as follows: Chairman, Mr. D. Baird; vice-chairman, Mr. A. Peters; treasurer, Mr. B. Welsh; secretary, John Lawrie, 3, Anderson-lane. It was decided to hold the annual show on November 20th. —JOHN LAWRIE, Secretary.

COWDENBEATH & DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held in Forresters' Hall, February 27th, Mr. D. Duncan in the chair. The election of officers resulted as follows:—President, Mr. D. Duncan; vice-president, Mr. A. Penman; treasurer, Mr. A. Beveridge; secretary, Mr. Jas. Simpson, 34, Park Avenue; assistant secretary, Mr. Jas. Baxter; committee, Messrs. D. Todd, T. McLeod, R. Martin, B. Conway, D. Ewan, J. Reid, and P. Flyn.—JAS. SIMPSON, secretary.

DALZIEL O.S.

Annual social held in the Y.M. Christian Institute, Brandon-st., Motherwell, on Feb. 20th, Mr. Harry Gray; president, presiding over a splendid turnout of members and friends. The manner in which plate after plate was emptied was evidence of the excellence of the supper. Many songs were sung, and some splendid selections on the gramophone were given by Mr. Morton. The time slipped away in a pleasant manner, everyone being delighted. The singing of "God Save the King" brought a most enjoyable occasion to a close.—JAS. MATHIESON, Secretary.

SOUTH MANCHESTER C.B.S.

A very able and instructive lecture was given before members and friends on February 22nd, by Mr. Fryer (Manchester), on the keeping and breeding of Mules and Hybrids. It was a treat to listen to a lecture so full of items of interest. Every point that could be thought of was given, showing that the lecturer had made a study of the subject he had in hand, and it would have taken some of our champion Mule nnd Hybrid breeders all their time to have caught Mr. Fryer "napping," for, although the members were only novices, some of them put questions to the lecturer that wanted thinking over before answering, but Mr. Fryer was always ready with an answer that could be clearly understood by all. A vote of thanks to the lecturer brought a very pleasant evening to a close.—J. C. SPILSBURY, Secretary.

HYSON GREEN (Notts) C.B.S.

Another washing competition for novices only was held on February 16th. The large club room of the Cricket Players' Inn was again "packed" with members and friends, and quite a number of new members were enrolled. This society is going along by leaps and bounds, and bids fair to become one of the strongest societies in the district. Mr. R. Rhodes kindly gave a silver (gold-centred) medal, and Mr. White half-dozen silver-plated tea spoons to be competed for. There were eight competitors who were all bent on having the medal. A start was made with Mr. Rhodes as timekeeper. Evidently some of the competitors will soon, with a little practice and confidence, become competent bird washers. After the birds had been put through their facings, and had got dry, Messrs. J. T. Birch and T. Barker made the awards. 1, Birch; 2, Smith; 3, Elsy. Mr. J. Bertie was then asked to give an exhibition of bird washing, which he kindly consented to do. Shall I wash a Tom Tit or a Jenny Wren, Jimmy asked. ## MORPETH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A very successful supper and social were held at the Black Bull Hotel, on February 20th, when about twenty-five sat down to a hot round of beef and vegetables. It was a keen, frosty night, so our appetites were good. Supper over we gathered round the fire nnd discussed various topics relating to the Fancy, ranging from C.B.U. matters, to the question as to which was the best to use, Dutch or new-laid eggs for rearing young birds. It is surprising what a diversity of opinion there is, even in regard to eggs. Our worthy chairman, in a happy little speech, said that such gatherings served to unite us, and hoped we should have many more. He also referred to the good prospects of our society, and whilst many of the Northern societies had to report a loss on their last show, we were fortunate in being able to carry over between five and six pounds. He thought we might shake hands with each other on our flourishing condition. The following gentlemen contributed to the harmony of the evening: Messrs. Douglas Mayland, Woollett, Seely, sen., Seely junr., and others Mr. Douglas presided at the piano, and altogether a very pleasant evening was spent.—E. COWLING, Hon. Sec.

BRISTOL C.B.S.

Show confined to members held February 27th, at headquarters, City Arms Hotel. The quality all round was excellent, and reflected great credit upon the society. The two classes for matched pairs of Norwich were grand in quality, and were also numerically strong. Mr. C. E. Brown staged a splendid team, and nearly succeeded in capturing the whole of the prizes in both classes. His winners in the yellow cock and buff hen class were nicely balanced, the cock being a capital all-round unflighted clear; he had for a mate a very nice ticked eyed buff, good in shape and feather. In the buff cock and yellow hen class the same exhibitor was well to the fore with his well-known "Cherry Blossom," looking well, matched to a very typical and beautifully-feathered young clear yellow hen. Special for best Norwich fell to a neck and wing-marked buff of Messrs. Tristem and Tayler's; it was greatly admired by all. Special for best Yorkshire went to the winner in the yellow class, the property of Mr. A. J. Martin—a very smart and stylish bird, grand in quality, beautifully staged. Mrs. Garland won in both matched pair classes. The Goldfinch class found that old Goldie enthusiast, Mr. F. Buckland, to the fore with a smart exhibit. Special for best Britisher was captured by Mr. W. H. Manley with a capital feathered Hawfinch, good in bib and nicely marked. Mr. Maggs took special for best Mule with a nice Cannry-Bullie of capital colour and feather. The exhibits were nicely staged, and were closely scrutinised. The genial hon. sec., Mr. W. H. Manley had everything in smooth working order, and all passed off as smoothly as possible. The awards were made by Mr. J. H. Payne.

WIDNES O.S.

Just before giving a lecture on British Birds, on February 18th, Mr. C. Houlton judged a pair show of Norwich, etc. There was a good attendance, particularly of young fanciers. All seemed highly pleased with the lecture, and the discussion after, as well as with the placings of the awards.

YORKS. PAIRS (2): 1, Lightfoot, slim type, yell., and a Cinn. variegd. buff, both good in condition and carriage; 2, Andrews, both nice length, flue yell. buff, just short of wing and tail carriage to win. NOR. PAIRS: 1, Bloor, Cinn. tick wing, yell., and a cl. buff, both grand shape and quality, evenly balanced; 2, 3, vhc, Vose, three good pairs, the first two being well up to size, right for breeding show stock from, all in good feather, 2nd ticked head, buff, fine size, and a nearly green yell, tight feather, 3rd big, thick-set variegd. yell., and a neat cl. buff, good type and quality; hc, Beech, good cl. yell., and a buff. NOR. GREEN: 1, Bloor, both cobby type and good feather. HYB. PAIRS: 1, Lightfoot, pretty tight-feathered yell. Greenfinch, and a smart-feathered, medium-sized Hen Bullfinch, well matched.

GORSEINON.

First open show held at the Institute, on February 25th. The room proved to be rather too small, and much surprise was expressed because the larger and more commodious room upstairs was not utilised. It was somewhat uncomfortably overcrowded all day, and toward the evening one could not get around to see the exhibits properly. But this was the first show, and such was hardly avoidable. The entries came up well in most classes, and the quality in most cases was far above the average. Goldfinches, Linnets, and Mules were the strong classes, and Yorks in the Canary section. The cup for best bird at show went to Mr. Ward's Redpoll-Bullfic, best British Miss Bowen's Yellowhammer. The society have every reason to be well pleased with the success as far as entries and attendance go, and they would do well to increase the classification to a marked extent in future. Mr. G. Gabe looked after the cage birds, and was ably assisted by a few hard-working attendants. The judges were Messrs. R. W. Jones (Canaries), and T. Gamage (Mules, British, etc.). The awards appeared to give general satisfaction.

If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

IF YOU MULTIPLY

my prices by two, you get nearer the real value of my birds. The reason for this is that I import them direct, and by taking very large quantities every week for spot cash, am enabled to retail them at prices which ordinary retailers cannot touch. For years past I have asked all intending purchasers to have a Roller from me on a week's trial, and compare it with one from elsewhere at a higher price than mine, test them side by side for a week, and if my bird is not far superior, to return it, and I would refund the whole of their money. This offer has repeatedly been taken up, and I frequently receive letters from purchasers saying that my Rollers have beaten birds costing twice, and even three times the amount of money I charge. I claim to be the largest retailer of Rollers in United Kingdom, and only importer of Hans Weber Leipzig Rollers, and this enormous trade has been built up solely by the merits of the birds. At present moment I have 1,250 Leipzig Rollers in stock, all 1908 birds, and cocks in full song, day and gaslight, with long, hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, waterbubble runs, soft roulades, piccolo trills, jug-jug of Nightingale, deep bass rolls, bell, harp, and flute notes, etc., etc., and guaranteed entirely free from Titlark or other objectionable notes whatever. Price, 6/6, 7/6 each. Special Bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, 10/- and 12/6 each. Pure Roller hens, 3/- each, 5/- couple. I have also just received my last consignment of the season of the real Seifert contest Rollers. Price, cocks, 15/-, 17/6 and 21/- each. Seifert hens, 4/- each. These are not merely Seifert because I call them so, but I guarantee them to be of the original "Seifert" blood, and can produce my invoice as proof, if necessary. I only have a limited quantity, so order early, please. Also in stock, 750 real Hartz cocks, every bird in full, loud, free song, price 4/6 each, seven for 28/-. Hartz hens, 2/- each, two 3/6, six 10/-, or 18/- dozen. Please notice some of the testimonials given below, give you an idea of the quality of these Hartz cocks. Singing box cages, 1/-, 1/2, 1/4, 1/6, 1/9 and 2/- each. Special Roller song cabinets, with folding doors, 2/6 each. Notice dates of following unsolicited letters, all in same strain as those published by me for years past. They tell you why my Leipzig Rollers lead the way, and cannot be approached by others. "Ardsley, near Wakefield, March 3rd. Sir,—Received Bandmaster in pink of health, he is a fine bird, and beautiful singer. Please note that all birds are sent on full week's trial, safely and warmly packed, and no matter how long the journey, or cold the weather, I send birds immediately on receipt of cash, or deposit system of CAGE BIRDS and unless birds prove entirely satisfactory, the whole of your money is refunded. No birds are sent unless fully tested to be in full song, and I take all risk during time you have them on approval. Even if you have no idea of purchasing, but would like to hear one sing, I shall be pleased to send one to you for a week, if you will deposit cash with Editor. ## IT'S THE VALUE FOR MONEY THAT TELLS,

And that is where I "tell" right through.

You can read all the claims, and you may or you may not believe them; but if you will allow me to send One or One Pair of mine on approval against any others advertised, at any of the following prices, I shall feel obliged. That's making it actions in place of words.

AMBLER'S.

AMBLERS' strain of Yorkshires is not of a few weeks' standing like many of the advertisers of today, but is the study of a lifetime, and for thirty years has been acknowledged the finest strain on earth. This is proved by the noted champions we have bred, sold, and exhibited during that period. We have not gone in for any Yorkshire competitions, but this last season our team of Yorkshires have won more first prizes than any team of Yorkshires in the Fancy at the number of shows exhibited at. Owing to serious illness, have not been able to offer our birds for sale, so have an extra choice lot of Yorkshires to dispose of. Cocks of wonderful length, correct shape, and full of quality; hens long-sided, full of breed, and teeming with quality. These are the sort to breed champions, and are guaranteed to give satisfaction. Pairs from 20/- to 60/-, hens 10/- to 30/-; also a few winners for sale, approval.—Messrs. Amblers (late of Bradford), 138, Westminster-rd., Morecambe.

Who has the (oftentimes told) best stock in Yorkshire. Having done what no other fancier has done, winning the championship in both Y.C.C. At Crystal Palace my birds have won first prize in every Yorkshire class (except Greens), in three years combined. I also won at Crystal Palace in two successive years more firsts, medals, and special prizes than all other exhibitors put together during the same period. I state facts that can be easily verified, and not wild exaggerated bounce to catch the inexperienced fancier.

My birds come to the front year after year as regularly as the day dawns, which is ample proof that this is the most pure and reliable strain of the present day. The chief characteristics of my strain are length, position, style, length of leg, and superlative quality of feather, combined with plenty of nerve, which is such an essential quality in a really high-class Yorkshire.

To those who wish to breed their own winners, now is your opportunity, as all birds are in perfect health and condition and cold room bred. Three days' approval. Stamped address for particulars.

CLUB REPORTS

GRIMSBY AND DISTRICT O.S.

Meeting held at the Hall of Science, on March 1st, Mr. W. H. Moore presiding. Mr. R. Robinson gave an exhibition of washing Canaries for the show bench, and he very quickly put three through the process, and they looked very smart when dried. Only two competitors entered for the washing competition, namely, Messrs. Angliss and Geo. Good, who took the prizes.—H. Harding, treasurer.

SANDY LANE & DISTRICT C.B.A.

A lecture on pairing and breeding was delivered on February 23rd by Mr. H. J. Cbittenden (Bolton Woods). It was greatly enjoyed by the large number of members and friends present. A great many questions were asked and were answered readily enough by the speaker. Taken altogether, it was a very pleasant evening. On March 16th, Mr. S. Dean, Secretary of the Yorkshire Union, will be the lecturer, and we hope to again have a good turn-up. The chair will be taken at 8 o'clock.—B. Buckle, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual meeting held March 6th, at Fawcett-street Cafe. There was a very good attendance, presided over hy the vice-chairman, Mr. W. F. Swan. A letter in respect to advertising our show was read from the Editor of Cage Birds, and was received with the utmost satisfaction by our members. The election of Messrs. T. Heath and J. Stanger as judges for our annual open show, November 19th and 20th, was confirmed. Two new members, Messrs. W. S. Cockerill (Ryhope) and P. Hunter (Bombay, India) were proposed and admitted. The application of the latter gentleman, from far-off India, to become a member is an honour which, I believe, very few societies receive. The washing exhibition, postponed from last meeting, will take place at next meeting, March 20th, at 7.30 p.m.; fanciers and friends are invited. We were very pleased to receive a visit from Mr. Cockerill, senior, of Seaham Harbour, the well-known Border Fancy enthusiast. We hope that when he again visits us he will bring as many of his friends with him as possible.—Wm. Reid, Hon. Secretary.

UDDINGSTON AND DIST. O.S.

Meeting held March 5th. Mr. J. Kilpatrick presided. The balance-sheet for last show was read, showing a balauce of £3 3s. 1d., which was considered very satisfactory. The advisability of having an open show in December was then considered and agreed upon. Office-bearers were appointed as follows:—President, Mr. Hugh Anderson; vice-president, Mr. J. Kilpatrick; secretary, Mr. A. W. Forrester, Tower View, Uddingston; and same committee as last year. Arrangements for hall left with the secretary.—A. W. Forrester, secretary.

BRISTOL C.B.S.

At Matched Pair Show held on Feb. 28th, at the City Hotel, Mr. J. H. Payne (Gloster), who judged, also gave an instructive lecture, after which Mr. Tristem proposed a hearty vote of thanks, which was seconded and carried with acclamation. Mr. Payne suitably replied, and remarked what a pleasure it always had given him to bo amongst the members. Further efforts will be made to reduce the adverse balance made upon the last open show. Will members kindly return all unsold tickets to the Secretary, together with cash (if any) in order to pay out cash in hand to members?—W. H. Manley, Sec.

FROME C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held March 4th. It was decided to hold the next open show on October 28th, and that the society, by dropping the words "and district," be known in future as the Frome Cage Bird Society; this was adopted in order that our society should not be confused with another society in the neighbourhood catering for dogs, poultry, etc. The balance-sheet for last year shows a cash balance of £2 10s. 10½d. in hand. This result was considered very satisfactory, especially taking into our account it was the first year, and also the far-reaching opposition we have had to contend with.—W. Minty, hon. secretary.

CARLISLE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A well-attended meeting was held on February 25th to discuss the suggestion to raise our yearly subscription to 5s. It was decided that same remain as at present, viz., 2s. 6d. It was also decided to hold some nest feather shows during the breeding season, classification and judge to be decided at our next meeting. It was further decided to have a washing exhibition on March 25th, when Messrs. T. Jones and F. F. Lawson will show us how to manipulate the bird, also the washing utensils. There were nine new members proposed and accepted, and judging by the enthusiasm shown by our old members and the new ones, we are expecting great things in the future. We start with a balance in hand this year, which is more than we have done for a few years past. The judges engaged for our show are as follows:—Messrs. T. McCreadie, J. Stanger, J. Maddison, and G. Goulden.—W. H. Wright, secretary.

METROPOLITAN C.B.A.

At the meeting held at headquarters on February 25th a valuable tea service was accepted by the members, which may be won by the lady member making most points in shows held by the club during the year. It was decided, on the motion of Mr. Saytch, seconded by Mr. Burgess, to hold two young bird shows this year, the first on June 10th, the second on July 8th, 15 classes being provided, viz., two Norwich Plainhead champion, two do. novice, two Yorkshire champion, two do. novice, two Lizard, one Border, one A.O.V. Canary, one A.V. Mule or Hybrid, one A.V. Britisher, one A.V. Foreigner. Mr. E. Box was appointed hon. secretary, Mr. Dear undertaking the show secretarial work, which is expected to be very heavy this year, the club having made such remarkable headway recently. Mr. Tibbs, Mr. and Mrs. Denham, and Mrs. Harwood were elected members. Mr. W. Brook was proposed for membership.—E. A. G. Box, hon. secretary.

SOUTHAMPTON O.S.

An intermediate meeting was held at headquarters, 273, Shirley-rd., on Feb. 24th, and although the weather was very cold, a goodly number turned up, it being a table Bullfinch show. There were ten exhibits, and some grand specimens were amongst them. Mr. P. Carter, who had promised to judge, was unable to come, and Mr. Fellowes acted in that capacity; although he had an entry which might have been in the running he very kindly withdrew it. He gave every satisfaction. Mr. S. Hoddy showed a very nice house moulted bird, which would have shown to more advantage had it been in a show cage. 1st prize, Hulbert; 2, Flintoff; 3, Boyce—all three of splendid type and colour. Mr. Hoddy, who had come from Gosport to attend the meeting, informed us that Captain Darby, a well-known fancier, was indisposed, and it was decided that Mr. Hoddy be asked to convey the sympathy of the society to him. Four new members were added, one of them being a lady fancier.—Charles Parmiter, Hon. Sec.

WALLASEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held in St. Mary's Schools, Liscard, March 4th, Mr Woodman in the chair. The season's specials were paid out, and two new members elected. Mr. S. Hadwin opened a very interesting discussion on pairing, commencing with the getting of birds into condition, also dealing at some length with the selection of stock birds of different varieties. Several of the members took part in the discussion. Mr. T. Edwards moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Hadwin; it was seconded by Mr. Young, and carried.—Wm. Mallinson, Secretary.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES & DIS. C.B.S.

Annual dinner held at the Leeds Hotel on March 4th, when upwards of thirty members and friends sat down to do justice to a splendid dinner supplied by the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lees. A smoker and concert were held afterwards, to which Mr. Armstrong, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, contributed greatly with songs and recitations. Songs were also sung by Messrs. Lees, Swan, Grigg, Marwood, Saunders, and Tait. Mr. C. Ingram ably officiated at the piano. Mr. A. Burton occupied the chair, and kept things going merrily. A vote of thanks to the host and hostess brought the evening to a close.—J. W. Lowes, Sec.

CHESTER C.B.F.A.

Monthly meeting, held March 2nd, in the club-room, Nag's Head Cocoa House. Owing to the inclement weather, there was only a moderate attendance, Mr. T. Wright presiding. The chief item was a paper by Mr. W. R. Morris, describing his visit to the Crystal Palace Show. He spoke very tersely of the impression he had received, and a description of the room, the exhibits, and the staging thereof. Several questions were asked by the members, to all of which he gave a satisfactory answer. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to him. Afterwards a discussion on non-feeding hens and the treatment of same took place, in which all present took part, and the novices imparted to the old ones a few tips in connection therewith.—Jas. Swindley, hon. secretary.

HYDE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

We held a very successful meeting on March 6th, a good number of members being present. Our table show of Canaries and British Birds was again a grand success, resulting in 1st Rowbottom, 2nd Hopwood, 3rd Bardsley, 4th Rowbottom in the former, and 1st Diggins, 2nd Webber, 3rd Gavin, 4th Bardsley in the latter. Mr. H. Fodeu was judge, and gave every satisfaction. Usual monthly business was gone through, and another member was made, which brings the total of new members this year to 15. I might mention that as our next meeting is to be devoted to questions, will questioners please have theirs clearly written on paper, so that each can be clearly understood, and separately answered? Everybody will be welcome.—F Barraclough, Secretary

Tringham, hon. secretary L. and P.O.S., and on Thursday next, March 18th, at 8 p.m., at "The Raglan," Aldersgate Street, E.C., is giving us his lecture on "Colour Feeding." It will be revised and brought up to date, and be followed by a debate on the same subject.

The balance-sheet of the West London F.A. shows a balance in the treasurer's hands of £4 15s. 1½d., which is an advance of £2 1s. 3½d. on that of the previous year. The secretary, Mr. J. Dewhurst, who is to be congratulated on this excellent result, writes: "This year we are going to create a record, both as regards entries at shows and the meetings. Some very good lecturers have promised to bo present at our meetings."

At a general meeting held in the Trades' Hall Buildings, on March 5th, writes Mr. J. Bryson, hon. secretary of the Aberdeen O.S., a proposal to have a pigeon section at our annual show was discussed, and it was decided that the matter be left over for a year. The annual show was fixed to be held in the ball-room, Music Hall Buildings, on December 17th and 18th. A few well-known Scotch judges were nominated.

We fanciers at York are now going on very well indeed, writes Mr. A. Richardson. At the last meeting we made 7 new members, and we have four more for our next meeting; not bad for York. In fact, everything looks nice and rosy. I have got a grand helping committee, and a secretary second to none, in Mr. Waud. So I see nothing to stop our having a really good year. What we want is a good entry at our annual show, and the help of CAGE BIRDS, when I feel sure we shall finish up the year well.

We are having a tea and dance on March 20th, when fanciers and friends are invited, writes Mr. Jas. Irlam, secretary of the Sale Open O.S. Tickets can be had on application to me at 86, Harley Road. Prices for single tickets 1s. 6d., for double 3s. Tea is at 5.30, and dancing from 7 to 11. The function is being held at the Masonic Hall, Tatton Road, Sale. As this is our first attempt we should like to make it a success. Cars, I may say, run almost past the door, from Manchester and district.

The Leith Jubilee O.S. at their monthly meeting on March 1, only elected one new member, writes Mr. J. Sinclair, the secretary. But I expect to have a few more names proposed at the forthcoming April meeting. That is the last opportunity of joining. I also expect that there will be a good turn out of members to book up their hens for the fast approaching breeding season. I have removed from Brunswick Street, Edinburgh, to 151, Easter Road, Leith. All communications for the society should be sent there in future.

The team of Greens owned by Mr. Tom Harrison, of Altrincham, and exhibited at our show of February 27th, writes Mr. Jas. Irlam, hon. secretary of the Sale Open O.S., drew a good number of visitors to the show, especially CAGE BIRDS "plate" bird. I may say that I have watched these birds from the nest, and sincerely hope that he may add many more laurels to his name as an exhibitor and breeder of Greens. The following are a few of the places this team has won at: Widnes, Manchester, Warrington, Altrincham, Scottish National, Wigan, Liverpool, Swansea, Leeds, and last, but not least, Salo and Crystal Palace.

We hear that the farmers in the Banchory district (Scotland), have decided to commence war on the rats by systematic use of Danysz Virus in the neighbourhood.

Messrs. W. P. Barnes and J. Maddison have been chosen to judge at our open show on November 27th, 1909, writes Mr. W. Underwood, assistant secretary of the Darlington C.B.S.

Messrs. J. Robson and W. Vardy have been appointed judges for our annual show, to be held on November 3rd, writes Mr. A. S. Treasure, hon. secretary of the Cheltenham C.B.S.

We have received a copy of the revised rules of the Preston O.S. They are very neatly printed on a three-fold pocket card, and include a members' subscription certificate. The secretary, Mr. R. Taylor, Lime Kiln Inn, Preston, will be glad to forward any necessary particulars to intending members.

The Open Norwich Plainhead Club's balance-sheet shows a sum of £1 3s. 6d. on the right side, a satisfactory result of a year's hard work, in which the shows have been well patronised. The hon. secretary, Mr. O. Mitchell (13, Lodge Terrace, Bowling, Bradford), will be glad to send particulars of this specialist club to intending members. A report of the year's work is given in another column.

We have appointed the following as judges for our show to be held on November 27th, writes Mr. David Kay, hon. secretary of the Musselburgh O.S.:—For Scotch and Border Fancies, Mr. T. Todd (Edin); for Norwich, Crests, and A.O.V., Mr. Ferguson (Glasgow); for British and foreign birds, Mr. P. Pettigrew (Glasgow). Our membership now totals 51, and if any fanciers desire to join, they should do so at once, as our books close at our April meeting. Members will receive their new rules at next meeting, held on March 27th.

Please accept my thanks for the copy of CAGE BIRDS received this morning. I have taken it for a long time. I really do not remember when I first took it. In an old ledger I have pasted the sketches of birds, etc., for this year, with any remarks, articles, advice, etc., relating to the Fancy. This I find is a neat way of saving, and having handy anything I require. I may say I cut out every other (or alternate) leaf of the ledger so that only one half of it remains. Pasting the cuttings in to the remaining leaves fills up the book, and yet the backs fold correctly.—E. FLOYD (Ashington).

Early Cuckoos.

Two Cuckoos are reported to have been seen in Anglesey on March 4th. If the birds on further evidence should prove to be Cuckoos (which is evidently doubtful), and not Sparrow Hawks, which they very closely resemble, their appearance would be an earliest on record.

Southern Norwich P.C.

Will members who have changed their address kindly notify me, so that I may get same inserted correctly in the 1909 rule book. Also, will all members who are in arrears be so kind as to forward same, as only members that have paid up to 1908 will have their names inserted in 1909 rule book.—F. S. MATTHES, hon. sec.

An Acknowledgement.

We expect to issue our balance-sheet very shortly, writes Mr. W. Reid, hon. secretary, Sunderland C.B.A., and it will probably show a small balance on the right side, thanks principally to the levy which our members imposed upon themselves. I believe that our next annual show will be the most successful one we have ever held, for instead of having to pay off our previous debts with this year's contributions (which has been the usual custom), we shall probably have all the money in hand. The members of the association desire to publicly thank Dr. C. D. O'Neal, of Fulwell, for the grand financial assistance he has given them in their efforts to clear off the liabilities. As president of the Fulwell Amateur Dramatic Society, Dr. O'Neal very kindly organised a dramatic entertainment on our behalf, with the result that we have benefited to the extent of £4. As Dr. O'Neal has already returned all prize money won by him at our late show, besides giving us a subscription, it will be seen at once that in Dr. O'Neal we have a grand supporter and a thorough fancier.

Our Frontispiece.

I am glad your artist has sketched my two even-marked Borders, writes Mr. J. Patterson, the well-known judge and breeder, of Chirnside, for one never knows how soon they may depart this life, and it may be years before I have two such nice hens of this variety to look at again. It had been my intention not to send "Perfection" up to the Palace Show, seeing she had been so many times out this season, but my "Chirsit's Pride" (a young hen I have) got half her tail knocked out at the last moment, so that I had to wash "Perfection" on the Tuesday and pack her off on the Wednesday, and I was glad to see her add another first to her long list. I may say that my boys have named the birds, "Chirsit" being the Scottish form of Chirnside. "Perfection" has won this season first prizes at the Crystal Palace, Newcastle, Gateshead, Dundee, Metropolitan (London), second at the Scottish National, etc., while at Glasgow she got as low as "highly commended." The Cinnamon-marked hen, "Prudence," has won firsts at Kirkcaldy, Broxburn, City of Glasgow, seconds at Berwick, Glasgow and West of Scotland, thirds at Newcastle, Crystal Palace, Scottish National, etc.

Hybrid Breeding for Exhibition Purposes.

By JAMES OVENSTONE.

Hybrid-breeding, I consider the most tantalising, and yet, withal, the most fascinating branch of aviculture. Once you have fairly started it, you seem to be held, as in some magic spell, the disappointments and failures of the one year only making you the more eager for the experiments of the next year with their hopes and possibilities.

I propose to treat this subject under two headings. I will deal first with that part of the Hybrid-breeding in which one of the parents is the domesticated Canary; secondly, that part in which both parents are wild birds.

Canary and Finch Breeding.

In breeding with the Canary and Finch, the course most usually adopted, and that which I believe achieves the best results, is the pairing of the male Finch with the female Canary. The great reason for this is, that the hen Canary is more reliable than its wild relation, which does away at once with the use for foster parents. Of course, there are exceptions to the rule, but, generally speaking, this will be found the most successful way of mating. The Canary-Bullfinch, for instance, is an exception; in this case the only authenticated results have been obtained by pairing the cock Canary with the hen Bullfinch.

In breeding Canary Hybrids, we may get clear, dark and variegated Hybrids. Of these the most valuable are the clears, the darks coming next, and the variegated last. The value of the last-mentioned depends greatly on the markings.

Light and Dark Canary Hybrids.

To produce the coveted light Hybrid, or Mule, as it as commonly, but to my mind, erroneously called, is the goal of the Hybrid-breeder's ambition. Many different theories have been advanced as to how to breed them, but I think with all there is a great element of chance. Personally I believe Sib.-breeding is the correct way, but you must have the right material to start with, or no matter how long you Sib.-breed, you will only be disappointed in the end. If you can procure a cock and a few hen Canaries from a proved light Hybrid-breeding strain, you have the right stuff already to hand; but failing this, I should procure a few Lancashire Plainhead hens, these having less green blood in them than any other kind of Canary. I should mate these with stout Norwich cocks, bred from birds which have a tendency to throw clears. I should pair the progeny of these with their parents, and there should then be a good chance of some of them breeding Hybrids with variegated plumage.

Test all the hens you breed each year, and any which throw Hybrids with light coloured plumage, don't be tempted to part with. Try and always keep up the size of your strain, for although clear Hybrids are wanted, size is also very desirable. Of course, when trying to breed clears, the different forms of variegation will crop up.

To produce dark Canary Hybrids, get as large and shapely and rich-coloured a Finch, of whatever kind you intend to experiment with, as possible. It need not be an exhibition bird, but one possessing these qualities is likely to transmit them to its offspring. Let the hen Canary be a yellow of the Norwich type, preferably; get it as large as possible. A Crestbred hen makes a very desirable Hybrid-breeder, these being usually larger than the Norwich Plainhead. Get as rich-coloured a bird as possible; a yellow-green makes an ideal match, such a bird being full of colour so to speak.

Some breeders prefer buff hens, owing to the fact of their possessing greater size; but there is no getting away from the fact that birds bred yellow are greatly superior in colour, and all other points being equal, these are bound to have the preference.

Some Bullfinch Hybrids.

I will now deal with that part of Hybrid breeding in which both parents are wild birds. Of these crosses those which have the Bullfinch as one of the parents are the most beautiful and valuable. A few very desirable crosses are: Siskin-Bullfinch, Redpoll-Bullfinch, Canary-Bullfinch, Goldfinch-Bullfinch, Greenfinch-Bullfinch and Linnet-Bullfinch.

In breeding any of these crosses, let the parents be as large and well coloured as possible. When selecting Bullfinch hens, undoubtedly Siberians are the best, as Hybrids bred from these possess rare size and colour. Failing this, I prefer a large Britisher. Some fanciers pin their faith to German hand-reared hens. Undoubtedly these are very good, being nice and steady; but it is doubtful if they are any larger than the Britishers, and, considering the extreme docility of Bullies, and the quickness with which they adapt themselves to cage-life, I believe the Britishers are the more desirable, as I believe they are possessed of more vitality, being reared in the open.

There are many other crosses which make very desirable exhibition birds. Some of these are the Goldfinch-Greenfinch, Siskin-Greenfinch, Redpoll-Greenfinch, Goldfinch-Siskin, Goldfinch-Redpoll, Siskin-Linnet, the Bramblefinch-Chaffinch, and others too numerous to mention.

On Feeding and Treatment.

Let us now suppose we have got the birds we intend to experiment with, the first thing we have to do is to cater for their wants. If we can let the birds all fly together during the winter and early spring months, this will be found very beneficial to their health. Failing this, cage each pair separately in large and roomy cages. Give facilities for bathing on all suitable occasions. As a staple food, supply Canary seed, sunflower (this latter is better slightly cracked), teazle, and German summer rape; and give occasionally as a change, hemp, maw, inga, gold of pleasure, and linseed.

Some will perhaps think this too generous a diet for Canaries. This danger if it exists, can be obviated by using a two-compartment breeding cage, with a wire division in it. The Canary can then be given a plainer diet, while the Finch can be fed as directed. If the birds will eat it, a supply of egg-food once a week will be found beneficial, but many wild birds will not touch it. I consider a supply of high-class insectivorous food better, once you can get the birds on to it; but certainly neither of these is as good as live insect food. Give as many spiders, tiny caterpillars and green fly blight as you can get. You will be surprised at the avidity with which they will eat them.

With regard to green food, supply this in abundance, and in as great a variety as possible. Dandelion heads, shepherd's purse, mouse-ears, chickweed, groundsel, plantain stalks, dock, sorrel, hardheads, and the various kinds of thistles, and other weeds which Dame Nature in her bounty has supplied, will be found very acceptable as well as beneficial.

PREPARING FOR AND TREATMENT DURING THE BREEDING SEASON.

A report of a lecture delivered before the Newcastle C.B.S. on March 4.

At the last meeting of the Newcastle C.B.S. Mr. James Shepherd delivered a lecture on preparing for and treatment during the breeding season. He said that it was a great pleasure to him to see so many fanciers present. For a large number of years he had been an ardent fancier in what he thought was the most fascinating of all hobbies.

During the winter months he turned all his hens into the flight. The cocks he tried to keep in single cages. To the hens he gave a mixture composed of one part Inga, 1 part hemp, ½ part each of rape and linseed, once or twice a week all through the winter, and occasionally a little egg food; he did not give the cocks as much for he had always found the cocks came into condition much sooner than hens. He always used Osborne biscuits, and in mixing his egg-food used equal parts. This method he maintained until the beginning of March, when he commenced to increase the egg-food to both cocks and hens, more especially to those that were a little backward. He had made it a practice to try and pair up the first week in April, when he increased his stimulants all round. When the hens commenced to lay, he always took out their eggs until they had laid the third, when he set them. He also tried to set as many hens as possible at the same time, so that when the young were hatched, if there should be any bad feeders about he had more opportunities to save their young. During the time hens were sitting he always gave them a little egg-food, as well as plain Canary seed.

Disturb hens, more especially young hens, as little as possible when sitting, he said, as it had a tendency to spoil them. If a young hen should be sitting and he chanced to discover that her eggs were not fertile, he always let her sit her full time, for he had discovered that if you took the eggs away from them about the seventh or eighth day, they never seemed to care about sitting the full time afterwards. On the evening of the 13th day, he gave those that were due to hatch a little yolk of egg only, and so on until the 4th day when he commenced to give egg and biscuit in equal parts. He had great faith in salt baths, and scalded rape seed. He had also used Epsom salts for hens that had slacked off feeding, with good results. About the 15th day he gave egg-food one day and milk sop the next. He never removed the young ones, he said, before the 28th or 30th day. He then transferred them to a nursery cage where he let the cock bird finish them off. When they started to feed themselves, he weaned them off egg-food and fed them on bread and milk; this treatment had been most beneficial. He seldom lost any. He also believed in crushing a little hemp, German rape, and plain Canary seed until such time as they could crack the seed themselves.

Questions were then asked of Mr. Shepherd. Mr. Potts: What sort of green food does Mr. Shepherd favour?—Dandelion at first, then chickweed, which he thought was the best of all; he had also found that some birds liked a bit of cold potato, which was a grand substitute for green food. Mr. Curry: Can you suggest a cure for sweating hens?—I believe in the old-time method, viz., a cork fastened into the nest with a screw nail, pairing the cock as young birds got older. Mr. Atkinson: Do you believe in putting birds direct together, or in letting them make each other's acquaintance through a wire slide?—I prefer double breeders with wire slides, for novices especially, as old fanciers are better able to tell when birds are ready. Mr. Scott: How do you assist hens that are sticking in the moult?—I have found tincture of gentian and rhubarb to be very good.

Mr. Currah said that last year was the most successful one he had ever had, having bred over 90 young ones. He had always found equal parts of egg and biscuit good until last year, when he used nothing but Spratt's puppy biscuits to fresh eggs; he usually soaked the dog biscuits overnight. He also approved of double breeders. As a green food last year, he used nothing but watercress.

Mr. Maddison: Do you think it necessary to always use fresh eggs?—Certainly, if they can be obtained. Mr. Robson: What seeds do you soak for Britishers?—German rape and sunflower. I have found nothing better than sprouting rape for Chaffinches. Mr. Scott: What method have you for preparing milk and bread? Do you prefer scalding the bread with water first?—I soak the bread with boiled milk and add a little maw seed. Mr. Robson said that he remembered some time ago reading an article by Dr. Forbes Winslow on the feeding of children, who said that no doubt many a child had died through bread being scalded with water first, as it took the nutriment out of the bread. It was advisable for mothers to pour the boiling milk on to the bread. So he (Mr. Robson) thought that what was good for children should be good for birds. He also thought it as well to add a little sugar to the milk and bread.

Mr. Crawhall was invited to make a few remarks. He said that he was on his way to a concert, but knowing that it was our meeting night he had missed the concert to join us. He had really enjoyed the meeting. No one knew what pleasure he derived from his birds. It was only three years ago when he first started to keep birds. His first season was bad; his second one a champion; his third moderate. Having heard how our chairman had spoken of Spratt's puppy biscuits, he thought he would take the advice, as one was never too old to learn, and he would feed his birds upon the same food as "Newcastle Limited" intended feeding theirs. Mr. Crawhall advised fanciers not to start the season with rocky hens. Sometimes a change of nests saved young. A little gentian added to water prevented young birds from drinking too much. He had found Epsom salts very good for lagging hens.

Mr. David Scott: Have birds the sense of taste?—Mr. Crawhall could not definitely say, but he thought they had, having found salts, gentian, and coal tar were repugnant to some birds. Mr. Vanner said he was sure birds had the sense of taste. Having tried all sorts of concoctions and decoctions in the drinking water, he found that they did not partake so freely of the drinking water as when it was pure. Mr. Robson said he agreed with Mr. Vanner, for he had found that British birds show a great aversion to a certain kind of larvae, whilst of another kind they would eat quite freely. Mr. Lowery contended that birds had taste. Mr. Currah likewise remembered giving chlorodyne in a bird's water once; the birds went for 14 or 15 hours and would not drink, and as soon as he changed the water they drank too freely. Mr. D. Scott said that Mr. Shepherd had told us what to do, but he had not told us what we ought not to do. Mr. Shepherd gave the following "dont's":—Don't neglect fresh air, don't neglect to keep everything clean, don't interfere too much, don't have too many visitors during breeding season. Mr. Waugh then made a few remarks, having succeeded in rearing over 200 young birds last year. He said he believed in plenty of fresh air, plenty of good, clean hemp and German rape, as well as good Spanish Canary seed. Last year he had a hen which laid 9 eggs in one nest; the next she laid 11. He set 5 under a Border Fancy hen and left 6 under the mother, and he managed to rear 9 out of the 11, which he thought was a record.

Some Popular and Desirable British Birds

By CHAS. HOULTON.

Being the substance of lectures delivered before the Liverpool and Widnes O. S.

Some Insect Foods.

I used to get bakers, gardeners, and others who used beetle traps to save the insects for me. I instructed them to scald and spread them out and dry them for me, and then let me have them. These would keep well in a dry place, and would always be ready for use. I had glass globe fly-catchers in the shop, for ours was a butcher's business, and in the summer we had plenty of flies. I put beer in this vessel, and the flies were soon attracted there, and when a large stock had got inebriated with and drowned in beer, I would empty them out on to a piece of wire sieve, scald them, and then dry them.

Gentles or flesh maggots of the fly and wasp grubs are grand food, and should be procured in season and stocked, so as to be able to tide your birds over the winter and spring until these appear again in the warm weather. The flesh maggots should be buried in about two feet of sand in the ground if possible; or they may be put at the bottom of a deep box, barrel, old iron boiler, or large tea chest (to be had from large grocers), and covered with slightly damp sand to the depth of a couple of feet, or at the least a foot. They will keep alive and fresh and white in this manner, and may be unearthed when wanted. I have kept millions of flesh maggots in this way for months and even a whole year. People used to bring me wasp nests in scores in the late summer and autumn, and I would bake these in a hot oven, carefully watching that they did not get too hard, dry them on a large tray on top of the stove, and then store them in wicker baskets hung up where there was plenty of ventilation. This saves them from damp and green mould, which would otherwise spoil them.

Foods for the Smaller Species.

The smaller insectivorous species are a very large and varied group. These must not be given so much farinaceous foods, that is, meals from grain. Ripe fruit, dried fruit, dried flies and other insects, ants' eggs, and particularly the flies, fly maggots and wasp grubs must be given ad libitum. Indeed, if a sufficient quantity of bluebottle and house flies could be got, they would practically keep the most delicate small insectivorous Britisher in good health.

I am not an advocate for egg-food for British insectivorous cage birds; I prefer the foods such as they feed upon in their natural, wild state when enjoying their absolute freedom in the open. I have already quoted most of these foods, and if any of you desire to become successful with insectivorous birds, you must first see your way to procure the natural insects and flies I have already referred to. Some fanciers use egg flake and ordinary hard-boiled egg and sweet biscuit, but I am not a strong advocate for egg-food of this sort for small insectivorous British cage birds. I always kept mine in good health and show form on these natural insects and foods. These methods of feeding I have successfully made use of for the greater part of the last 30 years. I have kept such birds as the Nightingale, Redstart, Blackcap, Whinchat, Wheatear, Pipit, various Warblers, Robin, etc., and most of these have thrived for even nine and ten years. I have had the Nightingale keep in good health and song in this manner.

Many years ago when Mr. J. Frostick resided at Workington, in Cumberland, his native home, he was making a journey to Liverpool on business one Monday morning early, when he broke his journey at St. Helens and called upon me. He came, made himself known (I then only knew him as a fancier and exhibitor, but had never before seen him). I had my old 'Gale in the kitchen in front of me, where I was busy with the shop books, and I had just fed him and put him right for the day. Mr. Frostick and I sat awhile, when the 'Gale began to sing, and he treated friend John to a fine melody for some length of time. I shall never forget the surprise and interest he took when he saw my methods of feeding; particularly the manner in which I secured the flies for my birds. It was made a good joke of that the 'Gale might well sing when he was fed so liberally with flies which had been drowned in beer.

My birds did sing well, and were kept in fine health and condition, too. Anyone who can secure large quantities of flies, fly maggots, wasp grubs, beetles and crickets need have little fear of not being able to keep the most delicate insectivorous British birds.

Breeding and Storing Mealworms.

With regard to mealworms, these are so well known and extensively bred and advertised that little need be said by me. Of course, almost any British cage bird will devour a mealworm; but there is no necessity to give these to the seed eaters proper. Part seed eaters may have them freely. Insectivorous birds, both large and small, may also have them, but for the smaller species, the worms should first be rendered hors-de-combat, so to speak, by wounding them behind the head, just over where its legs are, and then when the bird swallows the worm there is no internal danger to the crop, as there might be if the worm were swallowed alive and whole. The flesh maggots of the fly are better killed by scalding just before being given to the birds—just enough for a one-day meal at a time.

My method of breeding mealworms was as follows: I procured two very large boxes or tea chests, about 2 feet 6 inches square, and 3 feet high. I had close fitting lids to these, and in the centre of the lid was a piece cut out about four inches square, and a piece of perforated brass plate, or brass wire gauze fastened over. This was for ventilation. At the bottom of the box I placed a false bottom inside, about an inch less all round in dimensions. This false bottom had two ribs nailed across it underneath about an inch thick, which left a space between it and the box bottom proper. On this I would spread a piece of old flour sack, cut to size, flat all over it. A thick piece of brown paper formed the next layer. Then I would put in some crushed oats, bran, and meal, about an inch thick. Another piece of sack, and a piece of brown paper saturated with black treacle and brewers' ale I put next. This should be soaked and left to dry in pretty well before being put in the box. Another piece of sack is put on this soaked paper, and on top of this some more crushed oats, bran, and meal.

Don't, when doing this, put any flesh, meat, or dead birds in. I put in another piece of sack and brown paper next, and some more oats, bran, meal, and on top of these I placed a piece of sack which had been soaked with black treacle and beer. I took care not to put too much treacle and beer, but just enough to allow of its being well absorbed into the dry sack. I always had a good supply of mealworms after I had established this method. I used out of one at a time, allowing the other time to regenerate a stock. If kept in warm places, the worms will rapidly thrive and increase.

The Housing and Treatment of Foreign Birds in Captivity

S. bicolor.—Adult male: Upper surface, black; cheeks and under surface, white; white wing-patches at the base of the middle primaries and secondaries, and also white spots at the ends of the median and greater coverts and tail-feathers. Total length 5½ins., tail 2⅛ins. Habitat: Bolivia.

Practically the whole of the above species are hardy (that is, of course, speaking of those which have been imported), and excepting the White-throated Finch, are amiable and may safely be trusted in a mixed series of small birds. Many of the rarer kinds are decidedly handsome birds; and in spite of the lack of brilliant colours, there are but few of them to which the designation plain can be applied. Add to this the fact that, so far, only S. albigularis has been bred in this country, their great interest to aviculturists will be at once apparent. In conclusion, I must state my indebtedness under this head to the British Museum Catalogue and also to Sclater and Hudson's Argentine Ornithology.

The Jacarini Finch (Volatinia jacarini).—This handsome bird, after being off the market for some years, has recently come to hand in fair numbers, but males only. It is very similar in colour to the Combasou, but is a much more graceful bird, of fine contour and a longish tail, which is widest at the end.

The adult male is glossy blue black, with purplish reflections on the neck in some lights; the shoulders and wing-coverts are silky snow-white. The male when out of colour (if one may use that term, for it has no seasonal change of plumage in the same sense that the Combasou has), is always glossy black, and always retains the white shoulder with a very variable quantity of greenish-buffish brown markings, principally on the breast, imparting to it quite a speckled appearance on the underparts. The female is brown, Mr. R. A. Todd describing it as resembling the female Indigo Finch. Since July, 1907, I have possessed a female of this species. It was brought over for me by my esteemed friend, Mr. E. W. Harper, and I believe it to be the only one at present in this country. It is a very pretty though plainly clad little bird; its garment is umber brown, lighter on the under parts, and as regularly striated as the English Twite. Owing to my aviary being overcrowded, I have not succeeded in breeding them, though all through the season they have been attempting to build, but they would not take to a nest box, and their open cup-shaped nests in the bushes were destroyed almost as soon as made.

Habitat, Central America and South America to Brazil, Peru, and Bolivia; specimens from the different localities are said to vary considerably in colour.

This bird appears to have been first imported in 1894. Mr. Fillmer who had one about that time found it at first peaceable, then later it took to chasing its fellow captives about; Mr. R. A. Todd who possessed a pair in 1895, found them eager for insects; the late Mr. Erskine Allon, who also had a pair or pairs, described the female as very similar to the hen Combasou, and his birds were eager for insects. Mr. Fillmer's bird, on the contrary, would eat nothing but seed.

In demeanour and also in shape my male strongly resembles a Waxbill, in fact as to size and shape it comes very near to the Aurora Finch, a pair of which are occupants of the same aviary; but the bill is stouter. It has a very sweet and fairly strong Waxbill-like trill, and, like the Waxbills, is scarcely ever still, the tail, except when the owner is asleep, being a very fair example of perpetual motion. When feeding, they do not permit any other birds to approach the seed dish, but otherwise are quite peaceable, and when they have satisfied their appetites, the other birds are allowed to do the same without interference. They are very eager for insects, viz., mealworms, earwigs, and spiders. Their diet consists of Canary, white, and spray millet, green food, and a little insectile mixture. They help themselves freely to all the above, and appear to thrive on the same.

After getting over the hardships of importation, my birds proved very robust and but little trouble to keep in condition. Mr. R. A. Todd found his birds of a retiring disposition, keeping mostly among cover. This is certainly true of the female, but the male is always in evidence with his cheery little lay; he is of a very bold and confiding disposition, and will feed with anyone (even a stranger), in close proximity. This fearless behaviour, coupled with his vivacity and sweet little song, constitutes his greatest charm. They are a really handsome species, and should be in all collections of small birds.

This brings to a conclusion what has been a very pleasing task, and though the foregoing series has not been anything like so complete as the writer desired, yet by its aid the veriest tyro should not be at fault, either in recognising the group to which his birds belong or the manner in which to treat them.

*A Great Surprise.

I have two Canaries. One of them is very tame and comes out, while I clean its cage out. Its favourite place is on top of the other bird's cage. One morning it flew out of the window, which had been left open. A few hours after I was surprised to hear it singing, and when I looked up I saw it in its usual place.—Sent by Arthur Rider (age 14), 30, Terminus Road, Brighton, Sussex.

*The Young Cuckoo.

One day last summer, as I was going across the common, I found a bird's nest under a gorse bush on the ground. It contained a young Cuckoo. I took it home a distance of a mile, and put it in a cage outside the back kitchen. Some time after I went to see if it was all right, when I saw two Meadow Pipits flitting about with insects in their bills. So I hid myself from view of them. They fled down to the cage and began to feed the Cuckoo and continued to feed it for three weeks; then I moved it to another cage, but the birds refused to feed it any more, and so it died.—Sent by Harold Edmunds (age 14), Berry Hill, near Coleford, Glos.

*The Infirmary Sparrow.

Some years ago a wonderful thing was to be seen in the Devonport Infirmary. A Sparrow came down the chimney into the old women's ward, and made its nest on the shoulder of one of the inmates. He chose his position wisely, for the poor old woman had been a sufferer from rheumatism for 20 years, and could not move in bed. As it was plain from the first that the Sparrow meant to stay in the strange quarters he had chosen, one of the nurses made a cardboard nest, lined it with flannel, and about the time birds generally go to bed, the cardboard box was put on the old woman's shoulder. If ever the nurse was late in putting out the box, the Sparrow would go and give her a little peck, as if to say, "It is bed-time, make my bed, please!" If strangers visited the ward the bird would fly out of the window, only returning when they had left.—Sent by Aline Lycett (age 8), Apedale View, Chesterton, Staffs.

CANARY BREEDING: SOME DIFFICULTIES OF BEGINNERS DISCUSSED.

By MISS BARROWS.

Concerning the Eggs.

Three or four days before hatching it is a good thing to place the eggs in warm water for a minute or two; this is of great assistance in softening the shell. If the eggs are late you can continue to do so until the fifteenth day. This season (at the time of writing), for the first time, I have ventured to release young birds from the eggs, but it is most difficult to prick the shell. You need to begin where the beak is, at the thick end of the egg. In one instance, the beak was just showing, but it could get no further. The skull seemed to adhere firmly to the skin. A spot of oil helps; but by the time I had finished, the bird was cold and too weak to raise its head to be fed. Otherwise, I released several young birds.

You can tell if the eggs are full, by holding them up to the light on the eighth day, when they will be opaque. When you are preparing the hen to sit, you must see that she has not shuffled any eggs under the nest, and built on the top of them. Even if you remove the eggs, it deceives you, as you think she has missed a day.

Four or five eggs are a usual clutch, but one often gets six, and on one occasion I had a hen lay a double egg, joined at the thick ends. This she laid on the floor of the cage, but I think it caused inflammation, as she did not sit again, and died later on.

When the momentous day of hatching draws near, I provide yolk of egg only, with bread crumbs in equal parts; a very small quantity at a time; and I also start giving hemp. I do not give green stuff until the third day. The great thing is frequent and fresh food, four times a day when the hens have young. I am not like the early bird myself at 4 a.m., but when I go to bed I wash the pans and put fresh food overnight where there are young. This lasts till breakfast; then at mid-day I arrive with fresh-gathered green, and place water in the cage, and feed again an hour before they go to roost.

Where to be Careful.

Here again one has to be careful after feeding, as the minute the hen thinks you are well out of the way, out she pops in a hurry, and the chances are she drags a youngster with her.

For the first few days it is as well to return half an hour after feeding, as you can resuscitate one that may have fallen out by blowing on it in front of the fire and replacing it in the nest. I have had one or two young birds paralysed in the legs, and am inclined to think they get injured like this in their early days.

I must tell my readers of a mistake I made the first year. When the birds were two days off a fortnight old the hen came off the nest. Great was my dismay at night! I tried to put her on again, and even tried to induce the cock to cover them! So it is well for a beginner to know the exact time, also to remember that the young are "out walking," as I call it, a day or two before three weeks is up.

Once the youngsters are on the perch, it is time to be careful. No sour egg or dead or fouled green-stuff must be left in the cage, or this they will surely pick up, with disastrous results. When they are about twelve days old, you must keep an eye on the hen, as if she is alone and wants to nest again, she may leave the young, and you will find them dead in the morning.

I always try the cock's behaviour at ten days, unless the hen is doing well alone. I had a hen who lost her mate when the young were a fortnight old. She was a small hen, and there were six of them, and she reared them all. They were grand birds. One took a first prize, another a second. I was a beginner then, and sold that hen for five shillings. I did not exhibit the young until the following autumn.

When the hen wants to nest again, she must have fresh nesting material and feathers, or she will pluck the young; and, if possible, let her have the same place by putting the young in a clean nest in a different part of the cage. Hens are very conservative. I had one once who always turned the young out into the new box, and tidivated up the old one. How she moved her babies, she only knows, but knowing her wishes, I did it for her afterwards.

On Feeding the Young.

It is best to hang the young in a nursery cage in front of the breeding cage, where they cannot be plucked, but it is a pity, as they like to return to the mother's nest at times. You must put crushed Canary and hemp in the nursery cage, and fresh egg-food and very little water—only a few drops. I always keep a little fine sand on purpose for the young; either sea-sand or road-sand, for now is a dangerous time.

When the young are first weaned they over-eat if they get the chance, and inflammation of the bowels sets in, and they are soon with their heads under their wings. At first I lost a good few through this. Letting them bathe too soon causes a chill, especially if they have been at all plucked. Last season I lost none, and the following is the treatment adopted. But it takes three weeks. One is apt to be in too great a hurry, and expect a cure in three or four days.

You begin by giving them a few spots of warm salid oil direct into the beak, also giving bread and milk or arrowroot soaked in milk. They should have no seed for a few days. The milk-sop seems to purge them less if the bread and biscuit be used cold and strained off. You must use judgment; if the sop suits them, scald it, as it keeps better. Then into the water put five drops of laudanum—not a spot more. Give this for a week, and if they no longer bury their heads and seem lively, you can leave the laudanum and give five spots each of gentian and taraxicum juice. You can buy small quantities of the latter for a penny.

Do this for a week or ten days, continuing the arrowroot biscuit in milk, with the addition of Canary seed only. You then finish up with Parrish's chemical food only in the water for two or three weeks, making it just pink, continuing the plain diet until they start moulting.

When there is inflammation, the vent is red and swollen with dark veins. In bad cases a little turpentine may be applied, but you can, of course, overdo it. I nearly killed a bird the first time. It should be the tiniest brush that is used, and get off the bulk of the turpentine; use the brush just nicely moist and apply it on the reddest part. Do not smear the vent all over. If you do it thus, you may do it two or three days, once daily.

WILD BIRD LIFE.

The natural history books tell us that "The Hawfinch feeds largely on berries, seeds, and the kernels of stone-fruit, which it is able to crush with its strong bill, rejecting the fruit itself and eating only the kernel. In this way Hawfinches do some damage to plum-trees." Now, I have recently seen it stated that these birds are not able to crack the stones of the cherry, and I must confess that although I have offered them to captive birds, which have been in my possession from timo to time, I have never yet had one to crack them. So when Mr. G. S. Gregory, of Clement's Farm, Chorley Wood, sont me the body of a dead bird, together with a letter, in which was the following paragraph, I promptly wrote him for further particulars:—"I shot one by mistake. I saw about a dozen feeding like Starlings together under a cherry-tree, where they cracked the stones which had got buried from last year's crop. I thought they were Redwings at first, and never dreamt they were Hawfinches, not having heard of or seen them feeding in numbers." In reply to my letter, he sent me some of the stones, both whole and cracked, together with a hazel nut. The sketch shows the cracked cherry stones, split quite down the centre as clean as it could be done by any instrument. The hazel nut was equally well done. Mr. Gregory pertinently remarks "The stones get rotten and soft lying on the ground and among the leaves for so long a time, so that it makes it easy for the hawfinch." And no doubt this is the explanation of their not cracking them when in captivity. Other food is plentiful, and they do not care to undertake the task. One sometimes wonders how such a nice feeding bird as is the Hawfinch can manage to find sufficient food during the winter. The wood nuts are no doubt plentiful, but hard to find, and the Hawfinch would have to share them with the squirrels and mice, the latter taking their portion of the cherry stones, some of which show evidence of having been nibbled. In spite of the severe weather, the bird sent me was fat and in grand condition, a proof that they fare well even during hard winters. All our Finches are supposed to be subject to migratory movements, but although I have from time to time examined lists of birds captured or killed at lighthouses, I have never yet seen the Hawfinch included among the number. Does he migrate?

Ptarmigan in the Snow.

It is said that the Ptarmigan when disturbed will fly some distance and purposely settle upon the snow, when in consequenee of its winter plumage, it is hardly discernible.

A Heron and a Weasel.

Herons have been known to swallow some extraordinary catches, but the strangest of all is reported in a Yorkshire contemporary. In the wooded district of Hexham there is a colony of these birds, and a few days ago one was shot which had in its gullet a full-grown weasel. The animal was in perfect condition, having apparently just been killed and swallowed whole. When one considers the savage nature of the weasel, this is a further proof of the power of the Heron.

Boldness of Grey Crows.

During the autumn great numbers of Crows find their way across the seas to the east coast, where, upon the foreshore and marshes, they manage to exist during the winter. Nothing comes amiss to them in the way of either fish, flesh, or fowl, and a wounded bird or maimed animal will soon be destroyed and its bones picked clean, where these dusky scavengers are at all plentiful. To the wildfowler, they are a constant source of annoyance, killing and carrying off wounded birds before they can be gathered, or clearing the flight nets if the owner is not at once able to attend to the captures.

REIGATE F.A.

The cage bird section held their pair stock show at Mutton's Temperance Hotel, Redhill, on 1st March, after which mine host laid a sumptuous dinner, which was done justice to by some 30 members. Mr. Martin Creest judged, and gave general satisfaction. Mr. Kilby took the chair, and made a very able speech upholding the virtues of the Norwich Canary, and was supported by their worthy secretary Mr. Bacon, who made a few remarks on their progress during the year. Mr. M. Creest also made a few remarks on the exhibits. After several toasts, Mr. E. S. Lugg responded to that of "The Visitors," mentioning how pleasiug it was to see so many ladies present. Mr. Kilby won the cup for most points with his Norwich; Mr. Bacon three specials, principally with a very nice team of Borders; Messrs. Roser and Whitmore special for a grand pair of Yorkshires.

A good attendance of members and their friends watched the proceedings with great interest. Mr. W. H. Cawley proved himself a highly competent judge, his awards without exception satisfying the most critical. After the placing of the cards, the judge invited questions, and members were not slow in responding. Several new members were enrolled. The meetiug terminated with a hearty vote of thanks to the judge.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD & DISTRICT C.B.S.

First show of pairs matched for breeding held at head quarters, Spencer Hall, Dartmouth Park Hill, N.W., on Feb. 27th, bringing together the second largest show of pairs in London, with a total of 127 pairs in 18 classes. In addition, there were some grand Rollers exhibited by Mr. W. G. Dickson, who also had on show the challenge trophy he is giving to the member making most points in Roller classes at the next young stock and annual shows. Roller fanciers will please note this. The largest classes in show were the novice Norwich and Yorkshires, and so keen was the competition that two or three sets of winners could easily have been picked out of same. The Chairman, Mr. Geo. Gardner, presented the prize money and specials, and in doing so, spoke a few encouraging words. When we considered that the Society was celebrating its first birthday that day, he said, to see such a fine show of pairs spoke well for the Society. He also extended an invitation to fanciers to become members, and several names were handed in. Mrs. Giddy, Messrs. W. Knight, Pile, Neal, Jones, Ward, and Walmsley, came in for a fair share of the specials. The attendance was good, although the weather was bad, and everything points to the balance coming out on the right side.

Annual pair show took place on March 4th, at headquarters. The display of birds was not quite so good as last year's. Messrs. H. Jenkins and G. Balsh acted as stewards, and seemed to have everything spick and span and ready for judging. The judges were Messrs. Kirby, Love, and Jenkins. The awards seemed to give every satisfaction.

TIBSHELF.

The first annual open show of the Tibshelf F.A. was held on February 27th, in the Coronation Hall, which is well ventilated and in every way a suitable one for the purpose. The secretary, Mr. Joseph Hill, had everything in first-class order, and the management was all that could be desired. Only two of the cage bird classes stood, viz., the Yorkshires and British birds. Mr. W. Vardy judged, and gave every satisfaction.

YORKS. UNFLI (10): 1, Cooper, cl. yell., grand length, well up on leg, the best of quality, wins well; 2, hc, Goucher, another cl., good length and quality, well up on leg; 3, vhc, c, Athey, nice length, good stand. BRIT. ## DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

The sixth annual pair and British Bird Show, held March 4th, at the Peckham Public Hall, proved one of the most successful yet promoted by this enterprising society, both from the point of view of entries and from the number of visitors who put in an appearance. This is the oldest cage bird society in Dulwich, and although it has lately experienced some slight ups and downs, its future is now particularly bright. The secret of this success lies in the new management, and the worth of Mr. W. Hodson, the secretary, can hardly be expressed in terms that are too eulogistic. He is deservedly popular. There was a capital entry of seventy-eight. The members had all agreed to return their prize-money to the society for the benefit of its funds. Messrs. Fox Bros. also distributed amougst the prize-winners a dozen large tins of their now well-known egg-and-biscuit preparation. The quality of the exhibits was very good throughout. The exhibits were well arranged, being benched on new and up-to-date staging. Messrs. H. E. Tringham (chairman), who was heartily congratulated upon his appointment to the hôu. secretaryship of the L. and P.O.S., E. S. Lugg, L. J. Richardson, F. Johnson, A. R. Jay (the new assistant hon. secretary), F. Cole, H. S. Stephens, and J. W. Norris lent valuable help. Mr. J. Dobson judged, and his awards provoked very little adverse criticism. Mr. Cole, we may add, deserved a "distinguished service" medal for the very smart manner in which he had the catalogues, with awards, on sale.

LONDON AND COUNTIES O.A.

The fourth spring show of British birds, Hybrids, and foreign birds was held, on March 6th, at "The Bay Malton," Great Portland Street, W. Classes were provided for both cage and field-moulted birds, which resulted in an entry of close upon 100 exhibits. Many well-known winners in open competition brought further laurels to their lucky owners. Mr. Quantrell sent a strong team from Watford, and was most successful, capturing many of the specials. Mr. Adamthwaite also had a good team out, likewise Mr. G. A. Morrison and that enthusiastic lady, Mrs. Morrison, all of whom did very well. The president, Mr. Thorpe, seemed very satisfied with his favourite Bullie hen adding another first prize to her record. Among other members who did well were Messrs. G. T. Pile, G. Ogle, O. Heine, etc. Mr. W. Gilbert, the new secretary, carried out his duties in a very creditable manner, considering it was his first show. He was ably assisted and instructed by Messrs. Quantrell, O. Heine, and P. Adamthwaite. He is a hard worker, and an enthusiastic fancier, and it is to be hoped the members will ably support him. Mr. Allen Silver judged.

ILLUSTRATED IDEAS

Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

TO DISPOSE OF WASTE WATER.

Sent by A. H. Nickelson, 34, Bicester Road, Aylesbury, Bucks.

I enclose you a sketch of a novel idea (which I have in use at present in my bird-room) to dispose of waste water where a large number of birds are kept. The idea is to cut a small hole in the frame of the window, and pass a piece of lead piping through, on to an outhouse; or with a longer piece to a sink if necessary. The funnel is inserted into the end within the room. As most bird-rooms are upstairs, in the rear of the house, I think the idea is worthy of the consideration of fanciers. I keep 80 to 100 birds, and find it a great help.—A. H. NICKELSON.

THE "CATCH ALL" TRAP CAGE.

Sent by G. W. Palmer, 1, Eldon Row, Dolgelly.

The sketch is of a simple and easily made "catch all" trap cage, of ½in. mesh wire. Get the frame whatever size you require (according to what you are about to catch). On one side, in the wire, you will make a little wire tunnel (like A), say, 9in. inwards.

A "Catch-all" Trap Cage.

Make a hole big enough for a Blackbird, or larger, according to the birds you are catching. Also make a door, as B. The cage is covered with ½in. mesh wire, and is then ready for use. All you have to do is to put it on the ground, put some feed in and a call bird, and leave it all day if you like, for the birds will never get out. I have found it an A 1 trap for catching Linnets, Chaffinches, Greenfinches and Yellowhammers—in fact, nearly every sort (even squirrels). —G. W. PALMER.

LOWESTOFT & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held March 1st, at "Fox and Hounds," London-road. There was a good attendance of fanciers to hear Mr. Greeves, of Wrentham, tell what he knew about Canaries. Although it was snowing heavily at Wrentham at the time of leaving, Mr. Greeves did not want to disappoint us, and came through it all (a distance of about seven miles). Mr. Greeves, in his opening remarks, said that he thought more could be learned by the asking of questions than by the reading of a paper as members could not remember all that was read to them. He spoke of the time when he first entered the Fancy and of the different types of birds then and at the present day. He invited questions, which he answered in a satisfactory way. He attributed the death of so many young birds at the age of about six weeks to the giving of so much hemp seed; instead of this he advised the use of plenty of milk sop. Mr. Greeves was accorded a hearty vote of thanks. Mr. A. Cooper was chairman.—W. LANG, jun., Hon. Sec.

GUISBORO' & DIS. "Priory" C.B.S.

Annual supper held Feb. 24th at headquarters, Wear's Cafe, Church-st., and proved a great success, everyone doing justice to the excellent catering of Mr. Wear. Mr. Cook presided, and there were also present Messrs. F. Jones (vice-chairman), A. W. Knaggs (treasurer), G. Atkinson and J. T. Wilson (secretaries), G. Jobling, H. Hood, R. Mays, R. White, C. Jackson, E. Blackburn, etc. After supper the open show date was fixed for New Year's Day, 1910 (as last year). The judges for same were proposed. Business over, Messrs. Cook, Hood, Knaggs, Jones, and Atkinson contributed to the musical part of the evening, which was greatly enjoyed. Mr. Cook favoured us with a very amusing dialogue in the Yorkshire dialect, at which he is an adept; next he gave us an account of his visit to some famous bird breeders in Bradford, including Messrs. Holroyd Bros., W. Mundell, W. A. Cowgill, J. W. Denhurst, and Jonas Knight. To all these gentlemen Mr. Cook is very grateful for their kind reception. He related to us what he had seen and learned, and the successes of those he had visited were very encouraging. This concluded a most enjoyable evening.—G. ATKINSON, Hon. Sec.

OPEN NORWICH P.C.

Second annual general meeting, held at the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, on March 6th, Mr. D. Sunderland (chairman) occupying the chair. Balance-sheet for 1908-9 was voted as very satisfactory. Mr. Percy Illingworth, M.P., was again elected president, Mr. Fred Hammond unanimously elected chairman for ensuing year, vice-presidents to be elected by committee, secretary and treasurer O. Mitchell, 13, Lodge Terrace, Bowling, Bradford. A grant of £1 1s. was made to the secretary for services rendered during the past year. The auditors elected were Messrs. H. Simonette, and J. Wilcock, jun. Alteration to by-law 5, to read as follows:—"That the seven highest awards in each class count for points for any trophy or specials provided by the O.N.P.C.; should there be less than seven entries in the class, the lowest award to count one, and so on." Addition to rules of competition: "That all members will be required to mark O.N.P.C. on entry forms, or will be considered not competing for club specials, and points gained cannot be counted in competition." The "Percy Illingworth Cup" is to be competed for in unflighted classes, for most points throughout the season, the three highest birds to count. Ballot papers are to be sent out to all members to elect committee. It was decided that a first prize in a £5 limit show shall not count against a novice member. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to all retiring officials, and this brought the meeting to a close.—O. MITCHELL, hon. secretary. (Kindly note that your letter came unstamped.—ED.)

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Usual meeting held Feb. 23rd, at 6, The Broadway. In addition to the "mere men" who were in attendance, a goodly number of the fair sex braved the elements and were present. Mr. W. H. Stoakley presided. One new member was elected, and two ladies and one gentleman were nominated. A vote of thanks was heartily accorded the auditors, Messrs. S. Wright and F. P. Pound. The Secretary reported that all the prize money in connection with the pair show had been paid and the specials handed over. He then read letters from the C.B.U. and the Federation of London C.B.S. With regard to the latter, the Federation asked for assistance to defray the initial expenses of forming the Federation, in addition to the compulsory levy of 1d. per member, and it was decided to forward a sum of 10s. 6d., including the compulsory levy. It was also decided to instruct the delegates to the Federation to vote against novices or amateurs in members' shows returning to novice section after once having taken prizes in the champion section. It was suggested that the annual show be for members only, and that it take place some time in November, but no definite decision was arrived at, and it was left to the Committee to make the necessary arrangements. At the April meeting there will be a judging competition, either of Mules or British birds. A judging competition then took place, Mr. A. W. Curtis being the final judge. Points were as follows:—Mr. G. W. Baker, 11; Mr. A. W. Reade, 10; Mr. S. Wright, 7; Mrs. E. M. Allan, 6; Mr. A. Hare and Mr. T. Brown, 5 each; Mr H. Smith and Mr. F. P. Pound, 4 each; Mr. A. H. Dyke and Miss E. Peachey, 1 each; Mrs. Thynne, Mrs. M. C. Hadley, Mrs. Griffiths, Mr. P. Rorke, Mr. J. Cross, and Mr G. Griffiths, nil. Mr. Curtis very kindly explained his method of feeding when pairing up, and also gave hints as to the feeding and rearing of young, and a most interesting demonstration of the preparation of egg food. He was accorded a very hearty vote of thanks.—H. SMITH, Hon. Sec.

CANARY QUERIES.

A Persistent Mouiter.

Anxious.—As you seem quite satisfied that the bird cannot be exposed to any draught, I think it is not unlikely, assuming that the room is not subject to great variations between the day and night temperature, that the bird was accustomed to a warmer room than yours before you had it. But even in this case the treatment you have been giving should have set matters right. Try the following treatment for three or four weeks, and if not considerably improved in, say, a month, write again and say what condition of body the bird is in; whether plump and fat or emaciated. Also refer to this reply. Keep in a comfortable temperature, not overheated, nor yet chilly, but quite free from draughts and great fluctuations from heat to cold. Feed on staple of plain Canary only; give half a teaspoonful of dry summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with two drops of sherry and one of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it. Twice a week give a pinch of hemp, and three or four times a spray of green food, or a bit of banana as a substitute. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts for two consecutive days as will cover a sixpence, and afterwards twenty drops of Chemical Food every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days twenty drops of the following mixture: Get a pennyworth of citrate of iron and quinine from a chemist and dissolve it in one ounce of port wine. Use as above directed. Limit the bird's diet and treatment solely to what is here named for a month or so.

Sham Breeding.

"Rita."—Am glad to hear bird is better. If you persevere with the treatment it should soon be quite restored. As regards present queries: (1) Am afraid you cannot put a healthy and vigorous pair together with any certainty that they will simply play at breeding and not go further than nest building; I fancy it is only when one is very anxious to rear young that they stick at this point and refuse to go further. Jesting apart, your best plan will be to treat the pair in the ordinary way and let Nature take its course, and if eggs are produced you may either throw them out at once, remove the nest-box for a few days, and then let them start afresh, or you may substitute a dummy egg or two for the hen to sit on for a week or a fortnight, and then let them start over again; (2 and 3) The size would be immaterial, but it should not be less than 20in. long, 11in. deep, and 16in. high; this is the usual measurement of a single breeding cage. You may have one as much larger as you like. A nest-box or pan must be hung securely on the back or end, and a nest bag and a piece of cuttlefish also provided; (4) It is usual to separate the sexes again each autumn, but as this is chiefly to stop them breeding at unseasonable times, perhaps you may prefer to leave yours together. So long as the hen did not exhaust her energies by excessive egg-laying there would be no objection to your doing so; (5) As a rule, the cock does not sing so much nor so well when mated as when living alone. He is apt to put too much "go" and "spirit" into his song. Apart from this, and the risk of overtaxing a very productive specimen, there is practically no danger to the health at all; (6) Gold of pleasure is highly stimulating and specially useful for bringing backward birds into song and good breeding condition. Most large dealers in birds' foods now stock it, but all do not; (7) Yes, you can grow seeds as you suggest, and use the seedlings for green food. It is a very good method of providing green food above suspicion in winter.

Eyes Affected.

J. Jack.—Am afraid your management is badly at fault, or you would not, in the first place, have had the birds mated yet, and the system of using artificial heat only during frosty weather is an absolutely "rotten" one. The birds would be far better without any heat at all. If they have not yet showed any signs of beginning to nest I would advise you to separate them until the end of the month and only mate them then providing they are both in good fresh condition, and ready to begin nesting. Feed as frequently advised in these columns, and see there is no direct draught about the cages. Keep cages, and especially perches, scrupulously clean. Bathe the eye daily with a lukewarm solution of horacic acid—a small teaspoonful of acid to a teacupful of water. After bathing a few minutes shake off surplus moisture from head, and drop on each eye one drop of rose water with five grains of sulphate of zinc and five drops of tincture of opium in each ounce. A chemist will mix you this.

Doubtful Points.

"Tail Out."—(1) Do not mate until end of first week in April at least, and if the weather is at all unfavourable it would be best to wait a week or so longer. By this time the tail will be almost entirely reproduced, and not affect his chances of breeding successfully in any way. Unless the birds are very forward, you would do well to consider the weather conditions rather than mate up the birds upon a prescribed date fixed weeks beforehand; (2) In mating two hens with one cock it is absolutely necessary to have the hens in separate compartments. Mate the cock with the hen that is the freshest (not, of course, until the cock is ready himself), and when she has gone to nest and commenced to sit, remove him and mate with the other hen, leaving the first hen to hatch and rear by herself. When the second hen commences to sit, remove him again, and keep in a cage by himself until the first hen is ready for mating again, when you will repeat the process.

Two Troublesome Cock Birds.

Temple.—(1) As you seem quite sure there are no draughts to which the bird is exposed, I am afraid it is in a room where the temperature varies a good deal, or, possibly it gets chills from bathing. If you have been giving cold baths, discontinue them until the weather is milder. Keep the bird where the heat is as regular as possible night and day, though it need not be higher than you say it now is. Continue to feed as you are now doing, and give as much Epsom salts in the water for two days as will cover a sixpence. After this give linseed tea to drink instead of water every second day in alternate weeks for a month, and on the alternate days for the first fortnight twenty drops of whiskey, six each of syrup of squills, and tincture of lobella, and two of oil of eucalyptus well shaken together. Prepare the linseed tea by putting a small teaspoonful of linseed, a piece of liquorice the size of a large pea, and half a chlorate of potash lozenge in a teacup. Fill three-fourths full of boiling water, stir until all is dissolved, allow to stand until cold, strain, and give in the drinker instead of water; (2) Feed and treat this bird the same as advised to "Anxious." The remarks regarding temperature concerning the other bird also applies to this.

A Trio.

Sykes.—(1) Give the cock that has just concluded his second moult a pinch of Epsom salts in his water every second day for a week, and for a fortnight afterwards, twenty drops of whiskey, six each of syrup of squills and tincture of tolu, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day; and on the alternate days give two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel. If he recovers his health and activity and comes in song he will be quite fit to breed with, but do not mate him for another month yet; (2) You will be able to know when the pair in the two compartments of breeding cage are properly mated by the hen responding promptly to calls of the cock and flying to the wire partition to be fed by him, and by his frequent calls to her, singing at her through the wires, and feeding her; (3) Canaries bred last year will be quite fit for breeding this year. It is advisable, however, to mate them with one over a year old, and not to mate up very late hatched birds early in this season.

Cause and Effect.

Miss F. Palmer.—The bird's condition is undoubtedly due to the recent exposure to draught, which should have been treated at once. Keep him now in a comfortable temperature, without any suspicion of chilliness, but not necessarily over-heated. Avoid above all else the possibility of draughts, or great variations between day and night temperature. Feed on a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape as a staple diet, and give in addition half a teaspoonful of hemp twice each week, and every second day until the moulting is stopped give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it. Give a little green food when obtainable quite free from frost three or four times a week, and when not obtainable substitute a bit of banana. In the drinking water give ten drops of glycerine, six each of syrup of squills and tincture of tolu, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day, for a fortnight, or it may be continued longer if necessary, to quite cure the breathing symptoms; and on the alternate days give twenty drops of the following mixture, viz., get a pennyworth of citrate of iron and quinine from a chemist and dissolve it in two tablespoonfuls of port wine. Continue giving this until the moulting is quite stopped. Do not give cold baths until the bird is better.

Moulting Again.

Benj. Bordoll.—No, this certainly is not the proper season for moulting. The proper season is from August to November. Your bird has doubtless been exposed to draughts or to great fluctuations of heat in the living-room. Either or both of these conditions must be removed, and the bird kept, in a box-cage preferably, in a position well away from the fire, where the temperature is of the most equable nature, and also quite free from all draughts. Feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one of summer rape seed as a staple. Give in addition half a teaspoonful of hemp twice a week, and every second day for the next fortnight half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of sherry and one drop of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it. Continue to give green-food as at present. Get a pennyworth of citrate of iron and quinine from a chemist and dissolve this in two tablespoonfuls of port wine, and give twenty drops of this mixture in the drinking water daily for a week, and every second day after, until the feathers have ceased dropping out. When this effect is obtained decrease the frequency of sponge cake to once or twice a week, and omit the additions to it. You may also give a teaspoonful of the seed mixture you have been using as an occasional change in place of the usual supply of hemp as mentioned above.

Term Defined, etc.

Novice, Fishguard.—The meaning of the term "unflighted" is a yearling bird which has not had its flights (i.e., the long quill feathers in its wings) extracted at its first moult. Young Canaries do not naturally shed these feathers at the first moult, and it was formerly a common practice to pull them out, and also the tail, so that the new feathers could be influenced by the colour-food and make the whole bird of a more uniform colour. The practice is not nearly so common now, and a bird which has not been subjected to this treatment is termed an "unflighted" one. Certainly, unflighted birds are quite fit to breed with, just as much so as a flighted specimen. Mate the Green Crest with either a clear Buff, or a Buff lightly ticked on wings, or marked on crown. The Crest-bred variegated with a clear body dark crest of the opposite colour; that is, if your Crest-bred is a Buff, let the hen be a Yellow, and vice versa. These pairs, of course, must balance each other as nearly as possible in typical points. Thus, if the Crest fails in size, the Crest-bred must be a good, large, stout bird; if the Crest is small, or badly shaped, particular attention must be paid to selecting a Crest-bred with a well-furnished and nice dome-shaped head, and, if bred from parents not having faulty crests, so much the better. Mate the Buff cinnamon with a Yellow cinnamon to breed pure self cinnamons.

Aviary; and Sore Feet.

B.B.B.—The aviary will accommodate at its full capacity about thirty birds, not allowing for breeding to be carried on. For breeding nine hens and three cocks would be amply sufficient to begin with, and even then if you had good luck with the first broods it would be advisable to remove the first round of young a few weeks after leaving the nests, to avoid overcrowding at the latter end of the season. The perches need not all be arranged in ugly rows from back to front. Put a few in in this way: secure a few natural spars and bushes to the walls, and put in an improvised stand or two, made by planting a stout spar in a large flower-pot full of soil well pressed in, and then nail perches on to this spar of varying length and at intervals all the way up. The spar may be six or seven feet high. Another way would be to fasten the spar to a substantial wood base to hold it securely in the upright position. The nest boxes should be made separately and hung up in various positions singly. Have at least a dozen or fifteen boxes for nine hens to prevent quarrelling. It will not be necessary to remove the eggs as laid. Interfere as little as possible. For the sore feet catch the bird gently each day for a week and hold the feet a few minutes in a luke-warm strong solution of boric acid, bathing them very gently until quite clean, then dry on a bit of soft rag, and anoint them with a little boracic acid ointment. Keep the cage and perches scrupulously clean, and if feet are very bad, fasten a bit of wash leather around perches until the soreness has healed.

Brevities.

Will They Die? (Balloon).—No, I do not think there is the slightest risk of killing your British cock Finches with envy by allowing them to remain in view of the Norwich Canaries whilst the latter are breeding; so you need not suffer any qualms for not providing a few hens for the Finches. Neither will the Finches be at all likely to disturb the Canaries in their family cares, seeing that the latter are caged by themselves.

Egg-Bound. (E.M.W.).—You mated the bird much too early and this, combined with the terrible weather we have had, is the cause of the trouble. Give her twenty drops of good gin and ten of glycerine in the water for a few days, and add a pinch of inga seed to her diet every second day for a week or two, and continue afterwards giving it three times a week until the next clutch of eggs are laid. If she does not appear like laying again immediately, I would advise you to separate her until the end of the second week in April.

Hen Biting Off Toes (Constant Reader).—Sorry I do not know of any reliable cure for a hen which has a fancy for biting off the toes of young as they are hatched. Try her again this season, and when the young are hatched provide a few mealworms for her, or fasten a scrap of lean raw beef or mutton to the cage wires, and see if that will supply her natural want. If she bites the toes of the young when thus provided for, your best method of retaliation will be to bite her head off—or, rather, let us say, give her a good dose of chloroform, or get your chemist to give her one. This is the only "cure" which I care to give any warranty with.

Clucking Noise. (Broadway).—The cock seems to have ruptured a small blood vessel in his vocal effort, and the excitement of breeding will not be without a certain risk of similar troubles arising in an aggravated form. If a valuable bird it would be wiser not to run these risks more than is necessary this year. It would be better to keep the bird by itself away from others for a few weeks and give four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid each day for a week, and every alternate day for another week after. Feed plainly, but well, and keep bowels free by a liberal use of green food, or a pinch of Epsom salts in the water occasionally when suitable green food is not obtainable.

Crouches on Perch (C.M.).—Your feeding is at fault, and the bird is doubtless in an overfed condition. Feed on plain Canary only as a staple, and three times a week give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape. Once a week only give a small teaspoonful of egg food on crushed sponge cake, and a spray of green food three or four times a week. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three consecutive days, and every second day for the remainder of the week. In the second week give four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day, and twenty drops of Chemical Food on the alternate days, continuing the latter for three weeks, and in the third week alternate with it two drops each of tincture of steel and tincture of gentian

Made a Start. ("Ernie.").—The fact of having the birds in a warm kitchen may make all the difference between success and failure. Anyway, now the birds have gone so far your best course is to let them go on, and try to avoid getting the kitchen overheated by day, and to keep the temperature up in the early hours of the morning; then you will probably succeed. Sorry I have forgotten whether you described the bird in your last note, so cannot say what they are likely to breed. But this you will soon know if this brood comes off successfully. You should have taken the dummy nest egg away on the evening when the third egg was laid, and replaced the three eggs, and from this time you should interfere as little as possible. Feed on a plain diet until the thirteenth day of incubation, and then to begin to give a small quantity of egg food, and go on from this point as you will find given in full detail in the handbook you have obtained. If there is any point you do not quite understand, do not hesitate to write at once.

Solution Wanted. (One in Doubt.)—If you do not want the birds to breed you must certainly keep them caged separately, though it is not really necessary to keep the cages in separate rooms. The cock would most likely cease singing to a great extent when mated. As a staple diet, give plain Canary only, and in addition, and separately, half a teaspoonful of summer rape per bird twice a week, the same quantity of hemp about as often, and a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake or egg food once a week. Give a spray of green food three or four times a week. Occasionally you may give a teaspoonful of the seed mixture you are now using as a staple diet, instead of the hemp, by way of a treat.

Bare Round Neck. (Scotch Fancy).—The birds are probably not very young, and I rather doubt your being able to cure the bareness. In any case you will probably find no material improvement until the next moult takes place. Keep the birds in a comfortable and equable temperature and feed as advised to "Anxious," except that you should slightly dust the egg food or sponge cake twice a week with a mixture of two parts flower of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash, omitting any other additions to the soft food on the days when you are giving this. Give twenty drops of Chemical Food in the water every second day for a month. You may also try the effect of adding a few crystals of permanganate of potash to the bathing water when you give a bath—enough to make the water a light pink colour.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Canary-Bullies.

Hope R.—You don't want to be over-sure, or the disappointment comes all the more severe should no good result. It is much better to remove the Bullie eggs to a Canary foster-mother than to chance the hen Bullie hatching them; it is such a remote chance. The hen Canary, if a good feeder, will rear the young without any trouble on the usual foods supplied to hens having young Canaries under them—i.e., egg food, crushed hemp, soaked summer rape, young leaves of chickweed, shepherd's-purse, lettuce, etc. One word of caution: Don't get messing and fussing about the cage to an utterly unnecessary extent, or you may quite likely put her off her duties. Should she unfortunately neglect them, remember that the hand-rearing of Bullfinch Hybrids offers but little difficulty, even when it has to be undertaken at quite a tender age; the chief things to observe are frequency and regularity of feeding, and giving but a little at a time—not overstuffing them.

Mice in the Room.

Perplexed.—Mice are an awful nuisance once they get on the track of one's Canary seed. They must be cleared out. Fill up the runs with broken glass and plaster of Paris. Ordinary poison is not nice, though Battle's Vermin Killer is highly effective, and must be carefully used. If you give plenty of good Canary seed for a few nights as a "bait" then leave them a supper of dressed seed; the havoc it plays among the little pests is astonishing. But the best way to deal with mice is to exterminate them—easily accomplished by the aid of a tube of Mice Virus (or Danysz Virus), which any chemist would obtain for you. Birds will not thrive when mice are continually entering the cages, and fouling the seed, etc. To prevent the little pests climbing up the legs of cage-racks, the best thing is a sheet of tin (say, a biscuit-tin lid), fitted round the leg. Cut out a hole in the centre for the leg to fit through, arranging to leave a sort of flange for tacking to the wood. Mice cannot get round this; but it is astonishing what they will do to get at canary seed—climb walls, drop off ceilings, and perform all sorts of extraordinary feats.

A Blackbird.

C. Morgan.—Your method of feeding has brought the trouble about. No Blackbird will thrive for any length of time on soaked bread and crushed hemp soed. The "seurvy" you speak of, or bareness round about the eyes, may not disappear until after the next moult. Some vegetable ingredients in the soft food are essential, while Blackbirds are passionately fond of ripe fruit. Feed the bird on the following lines (any good corn dealer would mix you the stock food). Stock mixture (store it in tins): Finely ground Chicken or Game (or Pheasant or Partridge) meal, six parts; ground silkworm pupae, meat meal, good ants' eggs and dried flies, one part each, by measure. Get the Game (or other) meal without grit. If you have any difficulty in doing so, finely crushed puppy cakes (or puppy meal) makes an excellent substitute; or the "broken" biscuit obtainable from the grocer. If the latter be used, add an extra part of meat meal and silkworm pupae. Damp quantity required for daily use with grated raw carrot, or finely chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season, or cold boiled potato. Vary them frequently, and add a teaspoonful of preserved egg flake, or half a hard-boiled egg, finely minced up, occasionally. Give some mealworms daily, and any other insects you can lay hands on, also ripe fruit and berries frequently, and according to season. A bath "every three weeks" is no use at all.

Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids.

Verax.—I think the Goldie-Bullie cross is as pretty as any we have, and certainly they are very pleasing Hybrids, being so amiable, as it were, in disposition. They are great favourites with me. The matter of Hybrid breeding is a lengthy subject, quite impossible to deal with in these query columns, which are intended to help fanciers in doubt on some particular point or other. Several excellent articles on Mule and Hybrid breeding have appeared lately in CAGE BIRDS (you should also see the ANNUAL), and readers should follow the advice therein. You should also read and be guided by the excellent article by Mr. C. Houlton now running in our columns, which is chockful of sound, practical advice on feeding British birds. Both Goldfinches and Bullfinches come into breeding condition in due course if correctly fed. Follow the lines laid down in my recent answers. Both species should have plenty of young dandelion leaves, likewise the flowering and seeding heads of dandelion and groundsel, shepherd's-purse and chickweed. Give good feeds of niger and maw seeds to both birds daily, and do not stint the Goldie of hemp nor the Bullie of sunflower, while the latter may have a taste of egg food every day if she shows any liking for it. Some fanciers believe in transferring the eggs to hen Canaries, and some (but very few) give the hen Britishers a chance to hatch them and rear the young. When the couples are in cages, the former invariably proves the most certain method, especially with hen Bullies, whom I never find any too reliable. Should you get young offer all of the above-mentioned seeding green foods freely, egg food (or rich insectivorous food, if the hen Bullie likes it), small mealworms, live ants' eggs, and sprays off rose or fruit bushes which are infested with smother fly (aphides).

Feeding a Bramblefinch.

W. Lycett.—A Bramblefinch should be fed in almost precisely the same way as a Chaffinch. They have practically the same likes and dislikes. I have always found, however, they could be allowed hemp-seed rather more freely. As a staple seed mixture give the following; Canary and teazle four parts each, summer rape, charlock, and linseed one part each, sunflower and safflower half-part each, maw a quarter part. Smashed walnuts (and other nuts, such as the shelled nuts sold by many fruiterers), are greatly relished also, and should be given occasionally in the light of a special treat, a teaspoonful of hemp might be given every other day. Give a mealworm or two every day or so, varying same with flies, smooth caterpillars, grubs, earwigs, spiders, aphides, gentles, wasp grubs, etc, as obtainable. Bramblefinches will sample most kinds of live food. These birds are not particularly keen on green food, but will nibble a sprig of shepherd's purse, chickweed, groundsel, dandelion, etc. Radish, turnip, and summer rape seedlings, are usually eagerly devoured, however, when just sprouting, which they soon begin to do when soaked in cold water.

A Muling Goldfinch.

Tommy Burns.—As I have remarked in another answer, Goldfinches will come into breeding condition in due course, if well fed. Most fanciers seem to forget that the Goldie is naturally a late breeder, May being the month he selects to "keep house" in. Feed your bird on the following lines: This is the seed mixture I am using at present for my own Goldies; Teazle four parts, Canary and hemp three parts each, linseed one part, safflower, summer rape, and charlock half-part each. In addition I have two other mixtures, of which I give a small teaspoonful daily—one, one day, the other the next day, and so on. They are (1) niger three parts, and maw one part; (2) thistle three parts, dandelion and sesame two parts each, lettuce, gold of pleasure and cornflower one part each. All are mixed by measure. These seeds are those I have found by long experience the Goldfinch is particularly partial to, and as "tit-bits" they help to bring them into song and condition quicker than anything else I know. Plenty of dandelion, young tender leaves, and flowering and seeding heads, are essential also, to bring them along into breeding condition.

Linnet and Goldfinch for Muling.

Started.—The Goldie's food is given in reply to "Tommy Burns" this week. The feeding of the Linnet I have often dealt with, and can only repeat that this is how I feed my own, with the best of results, both as regards song, muling and exhibition. Stock seed mixture: Canary, three pints, teazle two pints, summer rape, charlock, and linseed one pint each. In the winter (if the birds are in a cold room) and during the moult, about one pint of hemp should be added to the stock mixture. A feed of maw and niger, and a good wild seed mixture can be given frequently (varied) by way of a change. Let them have a little green food, especially rape seedlings, in the winter, and ripe seeding shepherd's purse, chickweed, plantain and groundsel freely in the summer. Many good makers put up a special Linnet (or Finch) mixture in packets, and a feed of this occasionally makes an acceptable variation from the ordinary stock mixture. To bring them on to song and in condition quickly after the moult, the great "secret" is to give them plenty of the best old hemp, and crack it lightly, so that they feed well off it. Also put in the "side-pan," or "tit-bit" drawer, daily a teaspoonful of the following mixture; Two ounces each of gold of pleasure, niger, sesame, and thistle, one ounce each of mustard (the golden-yellow seed), dandelion, maw, cornflower and lettuce. It is the finest "tit-bit" or "refresher" (call it what you will) that I know, and there is no waste. This treatment will bring any bird into breeding condition at the earliest possible moment.

A Siskin-Canary Couple.

Peter Piper.—Cock Siskins give unmistakable signs when in breeding condition. They sing vigorously, "bounce" about the cage, and "feed" their feet, or the cage wires, or the perch ends (if a hen is with them they will try to feed her). When a hen Canary is really in breeding condition she always "plays about" with bits of nesting material, and calls out very loudly at frequent intervals, and when she calls out then the cock birds show excitement if they, too, are in high condition. It is no use pairing birds that are not "fit"; nor when one only is ready. It takes two to make a hargain in this as in all things; if hen birds are not ready it is useless to put male birds with them, no matter how forward they may be. At the same time, I believe the proximity of a "rank" cock bird helps to bring a hen forward. Feed up the hen with a little egg food, and a pinch of hemp and niger daily. You must offer the one thing above all things which helps to bring birds into breeding condition—I refer to dandelion. You should certainly let the couple have a liberal supply of this daily, both young, tender leaves, and the flowering and seeding heads, as soon as they are to be obtained. I saw dandelion in plenty when out this last week-end. All muling and hybridising couples ought to have dandelion; not forgetting seeding groundsel, shepherd's-purse and chickweed. I don't think you will find it any advantage to leave the cock Siskin with the hen Canary after she has gone to nest. You can try it, if you like, but he may prove only mischievous. A likely cause of unfertile eggs with a Siskin lies in the pairing of him to an over-large hen—rendering it more or less a physical impossibility for him to fertilise her eggs. I like shortish, chubby, Norwich type hen as mates for Siskins.

Brevities.

In a Scullery (Anxious Learner).—Exposure to the steam caused by washing operations will almost certainly result in injury to your birds, especially if at all "thick." You will be well advised to remove the birds from the scullery when washing day comes round.

Two Points (One in Doubt).—You certainly cannot be "summoned" for keeping a performing Redpoll, unless, of course, cruelty is practised. The use of bird-lime has not been stopped, that is to say, its use is not illegal providing that the birds taken by its means are not protected species.

A Bullfinch (H. Moulton).—It is not cayenne pepper which is used, but a "bird pepper," termed red-feed by fanciers. You could give a little mixed amongst crushed seed when the Bullie is moulting, if you choose. Bullfinches are in full swing nestling, etc., in a natural state, in the month of May. They make a commencement earlier, of course.

Hard Swelling on Body (W. S. P.).—I am afraid the Thrush is troubled with something incurable. The best remedy you can try will be to shake together half a teaspoonful of glycerine and a teaspoonful of colourless tincture of iodine. Take a tiny camel-hair pencil-brush, and paint the place twice daily (morning and evening), with this mixture. Don't let it go on the surrounding parts; use it sparingly.

In a Cage (T. E. P.).—I must confess that I do not know anyone who "breeds Skylarks in a cage." I know that some were bred in a large outdoor cage, a kind of hutch; and they have been bred in an outdoor aviary. But an ordinary cage (which I presume is what you mean) is a very different kind of proposition.

A Cock Chaffinch (Sandy).—I do not know anyone who has bred Hybrids from a cock Chaffinch, except by the Chaffinch-Bramblefinch mating. It would be a pure experiment trying either Chaffinch-Bullfinch (what a fine Hybrid this would surely make), or Chaffinch-Canary mating, though I believe good eggs have resulted from the latter, but no young have been reared. The fact that it was not house-moulted would not necessarily prevent a cock Chaffinch from breeding in a cage if a steady bird.

Bullfinches in a Cage (A. B.).—It might be possible to get Bullfinches to breed in a good large cage, but the trouble would be to get the eggs incubated and the youngsters (if any) fed, the hen Bullie being very unreliable in this respect in captivity. Note other replies this week; in them your Canary-Bullie question is also answered. The best mating is cock Canary to hen Bullie; the other way round is not a success. June, July, and August, are the great months for Hybrid pairs.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Treatment for a Red-breast.

A. J. H.—(1) I presume you mean the Virginian Cardinal; if not, you must give me further particulars. Give the following seeds:—Canary, white and spray millet, oats, hemp, and sunflower; also ripe fruit ad lib., several mealworms, or other insects, daily, with the usual greenfood, grit, cuttlefish, and water for drinking and bathing. I should also try it with a little of some good soft food mixture. (2) There is no separate book on Cardiual birds, but my booklet, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s. 1d. post free from this office, tells you how to treat Grey Cardinals, Cowbirds, etc., and the treatment is the same. In the booklet you will find much useful information on foods and general treatment of seed and insect-eating birds.

Books on Birds.

Rex.—I cannot tell you what you require re Gould's straight away; he has several, and those with coloured plates are costly indeed. His smaller works have only figures in the text. Butler's "Foreign Birds in Captivity"—a cheaper edition is now being sold under the name of "Beautiful Foreign Finches," obtainable from the Manager, CAGE BIRDS, who would send you a prospectus on application. There are from twenty to thirty plates, which figure, perhaps, half as many species again. The cheap edition is either a guinea or 24s., while the original edition, with hand-coloured plates, costs four guineas or more. I forget what my copy cost me now. If I can help you further, repeat query.

An Outdoor Aviary.

D. C. K.—I should advise 9ft. of this to be roofed in, and a good-sized shallow bath fixed under the end of open roof; 4ft. of its frontage should be formed into a well-lighted shed, or this included in addition to the space you name. Three-quarter mesh would confine the birds, but would not protect them against cats so well as the ½-inch. Stanley Parrakeets or Barnards would make a very nice addition to those you name, but two additional pairs will be ample. I am not allowed to recommend any advertisers; if you watch the advertisement columns for a few weeks, you should get what you want. Do not get all your Budgerigars from one source; each pair should come from a different place.

What Bird Again.

Park.—It is an Alexandrine Parrakeet, and probably a youngish bird. It should make a fair talker if you keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation; also teach it by repetition of short phrases and words. Diet: Canary seed, oats, wheat, dari, hemp, maize, and sunflower seeds in equal parts; well mix, and let this form your staple diet. Also supply such ripe fruit as is will eat, nuts and plain biscuits; with regular suppplies of cuttlefish, grit, and water. Keep it out of draught, but yet it must have fresh air. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food.

About an Outdoor Aviary.

G. A. B.—Your small aviary appears to be well arranged, and I should certainly hang up several seed hoppers in different parts of the aviary; it is less wasteful, and much more tidy than scattering seed on floor. Keep the floor well covered with sandy grit. Put the drinking fountain on the floor in some position where its contents cannot be readily fouled. You are pretty full up as it is, but you might add one pair each Zebra Finches and Gold-breasted Waxbills; some of them will undoubtedly breed, and they are an attractive series. Hang up double the number of husks and nest boxes that you have pairs of birds. In such an aviary do not entertain the idea of mixing Budgerigars with your Finches; it will only lead to disaster. Yes, the same as are given to horses, supply them both whole and crushed, and let the birds choose. Diet Canary, white and spray millet seeds, oats, paddy rice (rice in the husk), greenfood, and when procurable let them have as much grass in flower as they care to take; lettuce, non-poisonous garden and hedgerow weeds all make excellent greenfood, as also does a little ripe apple or other fruit; grit and cuttlefish must also be regularly supplied. When they are feeding young, a little of some good soft food mixture must be supplied daily (consult our advertisement columns).

Parrakeets for Outdoor Aviary.

R. E.—When I penned your first reply I concluded you were only keeping Parrakeets in your aviary, and my reply was couched from that standpoint. I cannot recommend the inclusion of more Parrakeets in a mixed series, and I very much doubt the demeanour of the Parrakeets in the breeding season. I have found Cockatiels, Red Rosellas, and Varied Lorikeets quite safe with Finches, Buntings, and Grosbeaks, but others, including Budgerigars, most unsafe, and sooner or later end in disaster. For months I kept a pair of Red-collared Lorikeets in my mixed aviary, and they did no harm; then all at once they slaughtered for me several very uncommon birds, and though they are very rare, I felt like wringing their necks. And yet they are so tame that it is "almost uncanny." If you wish to increase the Parrakeets, confine it to Rosellas, and if you can get then a pair of Varied Lorikeets, both are amiable and hardy. Black-faced Lovebirds could be introduced, but they would want carefully hardening off. Also I think Barnard's would be safe, but I have not had actual experience with this species. Many colours also would do, providing the larger species you have did not kill them. If I have not covered your need, please repeat query.

Parrot Pulling Feathers.

F. H. B.—Use the following mixture:—Two parts each canary seed and oats, and one part each wheat, dari, hemp, and sunflower seeds; well mix and keep a continuous supply in cage. As soon as it has got accustomed to the mixture, I should gradually wean it from the maize; supply it in gradually diminishing quantities till you cease its use. Baked potato will do no harm so long as it is not seasoned with fats, etc. The following items will suffice to keep up a varied dietary:—Ripe fruit, plain biscuits, nuts in variety, greenfood, also cuttlefish and grit. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scaps, or any kind of animal food. Give the bird three or four doses of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful in an ounce of water), with an interval of three days between each dose, letting the above take the place of the drinking water for the respective days. Twice a week spray the bird with quassia solution, choosing a genial sunny day for the purpose, and protecting carefully against draught till dry.

Another Feather Puller.

"J.H.G."—Such cases are very difficult of treatment, and when of lengthy standing, are almost hopeless. In the majority of cases it is the result of improper feeding, and if taken in time, a correction of the diet will bring about gradual recovery of condition. In some cases it is vice pure and simple, and then little or nothing can be done. I should advise one or two doses of Dinneford's Magnesia, see reply to "F.H.B." Continue to spray with quassia, and diet as under: Seed mixture, two parts each canary and oats, and one part each wheat, dari, hemp and sunflower seed, well mix, and keep a continuous supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuits, nuts, cuttlefish, grit and water. Note—Tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, and any kind of animal food must not be given. Keep bird out of draught, yet where it will get plenty of fresh air. Keep its bowels freely moving, but the voidings should not be watery. Also keep it occupied and amused with cotton reels, or a piece of branch, and also keep it in your regular room, so that it will get plenty of company.

What Bird is it?

"Edina."—It is always, even with common birds, very difficult to "name" from an incomplete description; however, I have little doubt, but what you have a pair or two Bronze Mannikins, which is a contraction of Bronze-wing Mannikins from the metallic spot of green on each wing. Spermestes cucullata is their classical name, and their habitat is Africa. The sexual distinctions are infinitesimal, but I have found the metallic wing spot of small area, and not as lustrous in the female as in the male. If you have a true pair, you will readily be able to see the slight distinctions referred to—while if you are still in doubt, the demeanour of the two birds, if quietly watched for a short period from a little distance, should soon determine. They are not free breeders under any conditions, but I have heard of a brood being reared in a large box cage; put a nest box in one corner, with plenty of twiggy branches in front of it, supply hay, long grass, etc., and leave the birds to themselves. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet, greenfood, cuttlefish, grit, and a little of such ripe fruit as they will take—when they have young to feed, a little of some good soft food mixture should be given. At any time when you can procure them a small insect or any kind of plant lice will be greatly enjoyed, and are very beneficial for the birds.

Parrakeets for Outdoors.

R. E.—Barnard's, Barraband's, Scaly-breasted, Mealy Rosella, Stanley, and Yellow-rump Parrakeets would, I think, agree all together in your aviary; but I am doubtful of the Pennants agreeing with the others in the breeding season. I know of more than one case in which Pennants have slaughtered other Broadtails in the breeding season, though previously all had agreed well together. As a matter of fact, Parrakeets are not really safe together while breeding, and on this account I do not advise more than three pairs, at the outside—say, Barnard's, Stanley, and Scaly-breasted, which would form a beautiful and interesting trio. Again, some Parrakeets will slaughter their young when desirous of nesting again, and you really need a general flight as well as a breeding aviary to be quite safe, into which all young birds could be put as soon as they could look after themselves. You must fix up at least double the number of logs you have nesting pairs. The outward sexual distinctions of Pennants is almost infinitesimal; with adult birds choose a rich-coloured bold bird, and one less lustrous in plumage and with effeminate demeanour. The female is also said to have less green in its tail, but I cannot say whether this is constant. None of the birds are more noisy than the Pennant, and will, I think, agree well together in your aviary; but the Pennants will want watching. Two males will agree together as odd birds, but if you introduce a hen, then they will fight, and it will be a case of the survival of the fittest. Have plenty of nesting logs about, and as far from one another as possible, and I do not think you need anticipate trouble. However, all mixed collections need watching, as occasionally a bird that has been amiable for quite a lengthy period will become savage, and need caging for a time.

Brevities.

A Feather Puller ("Anxious").—I should change the seed mixture. Supply that advised to "F.H.B."; also give one or two doses of Dinneford's Magnesia, as advised to "Constant Reader." Spray its plumage twice or thrice weekly with quassia solution, keeping the bird carefully out of draught till dry. Otherwise at present I can only suggest that you keep it occupied as much as possible, and leave it alone as little as possible, and if it can be trusted and is not too destructive, an hour roaming about the room would be very beneficial. The powdery dust is quite natural to all Greys.

Nine Queries ("Erasmus").—(1) A few oats and a little hemp at this season may be advantageously given, and greenfood ad lib. as soon as frost disappears. (2) The female Orange Weaver is very similar to the English Corn Bunting; the male can be told by his gorgeous dress in the breeding season. The hen Java has a narrower, less arched, and more pointed beak than the male. (3) Java Sparrows often breed, the White variety more frequently than the Grey. Weavers very seldom make any attempt to reproduce their kind in captivity. (4 and 5) Your Budgerigars are about normal; the weather is largely responsible for their being a trifle erratic. (6) The variableness of individual pairs. They will settle down shortly. Do not give them much encouragement to breed for a month yet. (7) Very nice and comfortable; these birds don't want heat. (8) It will inconvenience it very little, but it should be cut back, but you must not cut back to the small vein to be found there. (9) Nothing extra, save, perhaps, a few oats and a stale crust of bread, though quite probably they will not touch the latter.

Foreign With British (Delta).—You give me an almost impossible task, owing to your not saying what species of British you are keeping. Providing you have not heavy pugnacious species and you do not overcrowd, you could include the following:—Zebra, Ribbon, Spice and Chestnut-breasted Finches, Grey, Gold-breasted, Orange-cheek and St. Helena Waxbill, Common and Green Avadavats, Grey and Green Singing Finches, with, say, an Orange and Madagascar Weaver thrown in for colour. Supply white and spray millet, in addition to the Britisher's dietary.

What Parrot? (H.M.).—It is a Roseate Cockatoo, an Australian bird, the great majority of which do not do much in the talking line; nevertheless, they have talking capacity, and if you keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, have plenty of company, yet not get continually scared, and repeat to it again and again short phrases and words, it should ultimately talk to some extent. Diet and treat as advised to "F. H. B." omitting the boiled maize. These birds are often to be procured for 7s. 6d. each when newly imported.

Will It Talk? (W.B.).—Amazon Parrots have a good talking capacity. Keep yours where it will hear plenty of conversation, and it should ultimately prove a talker. Diet as advised to "F.H.B.," but continue to give a little boiled maize every other day. I should also spray it with quassia solution, as advised "F.H.B.," and after the magnesia treatment, put it on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food by making the drinking water the colour of pale port wine with the chemical food. If the bird should lose ground at all, repeat query at once.

Amazon Pulling Its Feathers ("Constant Reader").—Feed your bird on the seed mixture advised to "F.H.B.," and also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts, with a little boiled maize daily; this latter only keeps fresh one day, and the food vessel must be kept strictly clean. It must be boiled till soft, but the grains should be left whole. Take the water away over-night, and in the morning give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in one ounce of water, and for the one day do not supply other water till this has been consumed. Give three doses so, with a two days' interval between such. Afterwards put sufficient Parrish's Chemical Food in the drinking water to make it the colour of pale port wine. Do not give any sops or slops. Spray its plumage twice a week with quassia solution, keeping out of draught till dry.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Chestnut Finch (E. W. Ingram).—Chronic enlargement of liver, feverishness involving lungs. More exercise and less food is indicated.

Buff Canary (M.W.).—Bird fever.

Budgerigar (S. J. Coles).—Chronic softening of liver, recent inflammation in which lungs became involved. An hereditary weakness, or an infectious condition of the stock from which it came is suspected.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

Judging Extraordinary (A.E.).—It is against our rules to allow criticism of a judge's awards when it is merely a case of one man liking one bird and another man another bird. After all, everybody is entitled to have his own opinion. And the judge's decision is final in any case. The only thing one can do is to accept his awards in a sportsmanlike spirit.

The Judges' Lunch (F. J. Wotton).—Photos of the judges' lunch at the Palace may be had from Messrs. Russell, The Studios, Crystal Palace, London, price 2/6 each.

Messrs. Cobbett and Co. (John Dick).—We find there are four firms of timber merchants of the name of Cobbett in London. Can you not supply further particulars, so that we may decide which of them is the firm you want?

Coloured Plates (A Regular Reader).—We issued a plate of Border Fancies some two years ago, which will go nicely with the one given with the last Birthday Number. We shall hope to portray the other birds mentioned in due course. The Bullfinch we have already issued, and the Linnet will be found in our ANNUAL for 1909. Thanks for your letter. We are afraid, however, you have no idea of the enormous amount of money coloured plates cost to produce.

"Poetry" (We Are Seven).—If you have anything sensible to say on the subject, we shall be only too willing to print it, but "poetry" we cannot stand, especially when it is of a more-or-less insulting character.

The British Bird Manual (W. J. Lewis).—Since we received your order, we have had some copies bound in cloth (the two parts together), post free 2/3. We shall be glad to exchange if the parts you have are unsoiled.

Our Thanks to A. N. Booker, J.B.W., A. Richardson, W.P., and others, for photographs, interesting news items, cuttings, etc.

The Lizard (J. Rukin).—We find it difficult to get a representative of every variety in each year, but will not overlook the claims of the Lizard in the next issue. Thanks for your kind remarks.

Annual for 1908. (W.G.).—We have but two or three copies left of the ANNUAL for 1908, with slightly soiled covers; we can send you one of these post free for 8d.

Photos (W. Brooks).—We shall be glad to receive the photographs you mention. We are afraid that the one which has just come to hand, is not large and clear enough for the pages of CAGE BIRDS. The result of the "Black Canary Puzzle" was given on page 177 of issue dated February 20th.

Biscuit, or Another (G. Wood).—We cannot take it upon ourselves to recommend any particular food or foods; fanciers must decide for themselves. We will say this much, however, that you can with safety use either biscuit or the prepared food mentioned for mixing with the hard-boiled egg. Which is best, we leave to you.

A Photo (Henry Smith).—We are very much obliged to you, but the photograph you send is not sharp (clear) enough for reproduction in our ordinary issues. We wish you good luck during the coming season.

Egg Food Substitute (W. Moroney).—We make it a rule never to recommend any one particular advertiser; obviously it would be unfair on our part if we did so. There are some good egg food substitutes offered for sale in our advertisement columns, and we recommend you to obtain samples and select the one you most fancy.

IS IT A CHAFFINCH RECORD?

SIR,—Can any of your numerous readers inform me whether or not it is a record for a Chaffinch to have lived in a cage for over fifteen years? If they will let me know through the medium of CAGE BIRDS, I shall feel greatly indebted to them.

J. CLARKE.

LIVERPOOL AMALGAMATED SHOW.

SIR,—A little while ago the new secretary of Carston B.B.A. promised to put the above matter before his society, and get a reason for not holding the show this year. The Birkenhead Society, who were the founders of this show, feel very keenly on the Garston Society allowing the matter to drop. No doubt Bootle will revive the very popular and much-looked-forward-to event, but still the other societies are entitled to an explanation from Garston, and I take the present opportunity of asking the Garston Secretary what his society are doing in the matter?

EARLY CRYSTAL PALACE CAGE BIRD SHOWS.

SIR,—Anent the above and Mr. Verrall's doubt as to whether any Hybrids were exhibited at the Crystal Palace before 1880, I can verify the accuracy of your editorial footnote as to Mr. Sandell being in possession of several hybrids in the year 1875, for in that year there was a capital bird show in the Corn Exchange in this town (Reading). And I can remember seeing Mr. Sandell enter the show in the company of the late Mr. W. A. Blakeston, who was about to judge the birds. I am under the impression that Mr. Sandell was on the staff of "The Journal of Horticulture," the only paper which at that time made any business of the reporting of bird shows. Mr. Sandell kindly staged several Hybrids "not for competition," and so far as I can remember they were all in one cage. These would most likely be the identical specimens shown at the Palace.

A MEMBER FROM FAR-OFF INDIA.

SIR,—Will you kindly note in your valuable paper that Mr. P. Hunter, the well-known Canary breeder, of Bombay, India, has become a member of the Sunderland Cage Bird Association. Surely this is an honour that is seldom conferred upon a provincial society, and our members greatly appreciate it, for it shows in what high esteem this association is held by fanciers both near and far. I might add that this is the gentleman to whom I forwarded the consignment of Crests and Norwich early in December, although all the birds were not for him alone, some of them being for two other gentlemen. Mr. Hunter informs me in his letter that he is this season putting up nine pairs for Crest breeding, two pairs of Norwich, one pair of Lizards, one pair Goldfinch and Canary, one pair Greenfinch and Canary, one pair Nepaul Goldfinch and English Goldfinch, one pair Redpoll and Canary, and that he intends trying a nest off a Bullfinch and Afghan Goldfinch. It is the wish of all our members that he may have a most successful breeding season. I might add that Mr. Hunter spoke very highly in his letter of the grand report of our late show which appeared in CAGE BIRDS. Should this paragraph catch the eye of any other of our colonial friends who desire to join us, I shall be very pleased to forward to them all particulars.

W. REID, Hon. Sec.

THE STAINED CANARY AT HERTFORD SHOW.

SIR,—Having read the paragraph in "Twitterings," referring to my suspension from the Hertford Fanciers' Association, for dyeing a Canary, I beg to be allowed a little of your valuable space to explain my side, and ask the opinion of your numerous readers. First, I admit dyeing the bird, but not to win or to defraud the other members. This is proved by the fact that I dyed the worst cross-bred bird I could find, and I invited several members of the committee and members of the Association to come and see the bird before sending it to the show. Secondly, the matter would never have become public, or anything have been said about it in the Society, if I had not exposed the bird myself after the show was over. Now my reason, and only reason, for doing that—which I admit is a very wrong thing to do, especially if done to win, was that I considered on a previous occasion the judge did not carefully judge the members' classes, and I put this bird in to see if he took the trouble to look at them. The result was he gave the bird 3rd prize, when there were two Mules without cards in the same class. His excuse to the committee is that the class was small (only five entries), and there were only two birds worth looking at, and he did not trouble to look at the others. (How did he know what they were like if he admits not handling them?) The bird is not carefully dyed. Any amateur who has ever taken the trouble to look at a fed bird would immediately exclaim what a colour, and what breed do you call it? I should like your readers' opinion of a judge who passes such a bird and the action of a society who suspends a member because he tries to find out a fault in the interest of its members.

W. J. SMITH.

CAGE CLASSES AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE SHOW.

SIR,—Re the correspondence on the above subject, we beg to state that we ordered some cages, 20in. single breeders, as exhibited at the Palace Show by Messrs. Palmer and Sons, and that they were all up to sample, and gave the greatest satisfaction, the packing being especially commendable.

WHAT IS A NOPE?

SIR,—In this week's CAGE BIRDS I see a correspondent asking: What is a Nope? I have been a catcher of Bullfinches for thirty years, and in this district we always call Bullie the "Nope." If one catcher meets another and asks: "What are you after?" "I have been 'Noping,'" is the reply, if he has been Bullfinch catching.

A NOTED LINNET.

SIR,—While Mr. R. D. Parlett can congratulate himself on the success of his Linnet, it is right to point out to him that it is not the case, as he mentions in his letter, that his Linnet ran so close for the special for the best British bird at the Scottish National Show, the fact being that it was never taken out to compete for the special. The three birds which were taken out were the first prize Fieldfare, the Yellowhammer, and the Bullfinch cock, and the last-mentioned got it.

THE EARLY BIRDS.

SIR,—In your last issue I read with interest the remarks under the heading of "The Early Birds," by Mr. E. Adams, of Scarborough. It will not fail to interest this gentleman and other of your readers to know that I have four young Norwich Canaries looking well after themselves, which were hatched on February 2nd. The mother of same is sitting on the second nest of five eggs, due to hatch March 10th.

Wimbledon. A. HARE.

SIR,—Seeing the account of some early birds in last Friday's CAGE BIRDS, I thought I would let you know that I have some young birds out. I have had eight hatch out since the 23rd of February up to March 3rd. I expect some more by March 10th. The young are doing well and the heat of the room has not been below 50 degrees. I have also a Linnet in full song and a hen Goldfinch, in the same room as my Canaries. It has been very cold here, with plenty of snow, but I hope we shall have it a bit milder soon. I look for CAGE BIRDS to come round on Fridays. I think it a very nice paper, and wish you every success with it.

MRS. SANDELLS.

SIR,—As a reader is making inquiries as to "early birds," I am glad to say I also have three young Yorkshire Canaries which hatched February 19th, and all are strong birds, doing well. I am in hopes of another five on March 10th. For years I have been a regular reader of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS.

HARDY CANARIES.

SIR,—I have four Canaries, which I keep amongst several Finches in the yard. They have an open outside flight, and they hop about amongst the snow, and bathe regularly in cold water. One of them has been perching outside in the open flight all night during this frosty weather. Two of them are housebred, and two came from another outside aviary. The Canaries have used the outside flight far more than the Finches during the recent stormy weather.

GOLDFINCHES BREEDING IN A CAGE.

SIR,—Kindly allow me a small space in your valuable paper to relate my experience with the breeding of the Goldfinch in captivity. In the month of July, 1908, I placed a breeding cage in the open. In one end of it I fixed a strong branch from an elderberry tree. The latter, I have noticed, is a great favourite with the Goldie when nesting. I then placed the birds, cock and hen, inside. In a few days a cosy nest was built. Six eggs were laid and hatched. The second time five eggs were laid. The third time four were laid. All were hatched and the young ones reared. The preceding year eight Hybrids were reared by the same Goldie hen mated to a Greenfinch.

ALLEGED EXHIBITING OF JUDGE'S BIRDS AT ARBROATH.

SIR,—Mr. Milne accuses me of seeking notoriety through your valuable paper; well, I fail to see where the notoriety comes in. He cannot, he says, understand how I could exhibit the judge's birds, not being an exhibitor. I don't require Mr. Milne to tell me that, but I am charged with showing the judge's birds, and have been asked by two of our best supporters if the case is true. I don't think it was fair of Mr. Milne to give away my trump card while I was wanting my friends who charged me to explain. I want to know if it is true that anything of the kind was done. Mr. Milne is stumping Arbroath district. He said to one of our trusted officials, that the whole lot were one as bad as the other—that they were "frauds." I am afraid Mr. Milne is out of the "noo," hence his bad temper against his brother fanciers. He also charges me with giving my birds a rough passage home from the show. I presume by his statement he means that I had had too much "hot feed," and therefore killed my birds. This is another false statement. Neither he nor any other person ever saw me making a "rough passage" from any bar. I could give him a "Roland for his Oliver," but that does not edify the Fancy. I admit my birds have always been the last to leave the show. A Mr. Sheriff and I carried them home (about three minutes' walk), and Mr. Sheriff opened one box and I the other. We did not run the birds out into single cages, but put 14 birds in five cages, and they were alright. The birds were all on the perches, so that the "passage" was not very rough. I was not ten minutes out of the hall before I was back again, and did a good hour's work removing staging and putting the hall in order. The birds appeared all right, but they would have been far better if the boxes had not been opened, because the poisonous matter was placed in each cage—as much of it as would have poisoned all the members of Arbroath Society. So, sir, your information has come from the party who never wished to see anything good, but what he had himself. All the information I could get I gave to the Chief of the Police, with certain names, and with all the particulars I received from a Dundee gentleman, who also received one bird poisoned at a district show a few weeks before. For the benefit of readers I can only give the suspects' names to the Chief of Police (I cannot mention them here), but, nevertheless, the birds were villainously poisoned. Does Mr. Milne know that each postmortem costs £1 1s.? The police expert, and one of the ablest firms of solicitors in Arbroath, worked all the evidence up, and proved up to the hilt that the birds were poisoned, and I am certain I know the party. I cannot name him here, but he is the party who told me what he saw everybody doing but himself. Mr. Milne says this is the fourth season of the society, and it has had a hard struggle to live. I may tell your readers it is the healthiest society that ever was in Arbroath, and has cash in the bank, thanks to Mr. John Napier, our secretary. I do not wish to "kick it out of existence," but I want all fraudulent practices purged out of it. I may tell you, sir, I had the live kick at it, and hatched it into life. The same party who made a similar attack on my dogs as on my birds, trying to poison them, poisoned my neighbour's (Mr. Sheriff's). Mr. Milne also says that I try to make the readers of your valuable paper believe I am a sporting man. I am a sporting man all through, and a suit of knickers just fits my calling, as good as a suit of corduroy fits his. I wish to let the readers of CAGE BIRDS understand what I mean by a "sporting spirit." Any fancier winning a prize at Arbroath show, I shall do my level best to see he gets it. That is my sporting spirit. I could show up Mr. Milne's "sporting spirit" over an incident two years ago, when Arbroath show was held in the small Victoria Hall. Since an incident which happened then, I have got nothing but abuse, and language not fit enough for printing. Putting down dishonourable tactics is the reason for attacking my birds and dogs. Since Mr. Milne has let my friends know that I was not an exhibitor at Arbroath show, every fancier knows it was absurd to blame me. I am wondering if Mr. Milne was the party who showed the birds at Arbroath. Or has the story come from the same party who gave the poison, to try and make the judges as bad as themselves? I would like to see the judges at the last Arbroath show make a public denial, as I believe myself the story has arisen from a disappointed exhibitor.

JAMES STRACHAN.

[We have to express our regret to Mr. Strachan that we permitted a somewhat dubious paragraph to appear in our issue of February 27th, over the signature of James Milne. It is quite possible to read into this paragraph the interpretation that Mr. Strachan was the worse for alcohol when taking his birds home from Arbroath Show; and while it may be open to argument as to whether it was Mr. Milne's intention that the paragraph should bear that interpretation, we, on our part, desire to unhesitatingly disassociate ourselves from that statement, and to express our regret to Mr. Strachan that anything calculated to so injure his reputation should have appeared in our pages.—EDITOR.]

Testimonial to Mr. J. Tyson.

SIR,—Having accepted the position of hon. secretary to the above-named specialist club, will you kindly grant me space in your columns to appeal to all the members thereof, and fanciers who are not members, but who are interested in the Crested Canary. I shall, in the near future, be placing several matters affecting the welfare of the club before the committee, and I should much like to have a record batch of new members for election. Now, then, old members, some recruits, please. To those whose interest has flagged, and who have dropped out of the club, I would like to say, write at once asking to be re-instated. To any lady or gentleman who takes a delight in seeing Crests well represented at our shows, I would say, help by becoming a member of the C.C.C. It is no use thinking that because the shows are over there is no need to do anything at the present moment. Help now! Doing nothing now means doing a lot of grumbling at lack of classification, etc., later on. Given a large membership (paying members, of course), the C.C.C. will be enabled by a spirited and generous policy to induce the various societies applying for the club's support, to provide a classification equally generous.

P.S.—I am much pleased with the way C.C.C. members responded to my last appeal. This is the final appeal, and I trust the well-known names, not yet on the list, will be there before it closes. ## THE SISKIN IN SCOTLAND.

SIR,—In the "Wild Bird Life" column last week it is stated that the Siskin breeds very sparingly in Scotland. This is a fallacy, as they breed in hundreds on Spey side, especially about Delfur Lodge and other similar places. Before winter comes on you can see a great many old and young ones up there.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION.

SIR,—The winners of the C.B.U. medals, which will be sent on in a few days, are as follows: District No. 1, Mr. W. Reid, Sunderland; No. 2, J. Davies, Millom; No. 3, E. Godley, Rishton; No. 5, A. J. Coffey and S. Hadwin, Liverpool; No. 7, A. E. Brooks, Cambridge; No. 9, W. H. Tottle, Plymouth, and T. J. Keegan, Bristol; No. 10, D. A. S. Longden, Swansea. I also wish to point out that meetings of delegates are being arranged in the respective districts, to fix up show dates, and I should be glad if those societies who have not already done so would furnish me with the names and addresses of their secretary, delegate and date of show, along with the affiliation fee, 5s. I would remind them that societies not doing so have no right of voting on the question of show dates. If there is no clashing of show dates, a meeting may not be called.

MIDLAND YORKSHIRE CANARY CLUB.

SIR,—Referring to my letter in your issue of February 20th, anent the above, I am pleased to be able to report that my efforts have been rewarded, inasmuch as it was unanimously decided to form the club at a meeting of Yorkshire fanciers, held on March 3rd, at the Crown Hotel, Station-street, Birmingham. May I call the attention of Midland "Yorkie" men to the fact, and request them to kindly attend a general meeting which it was decided to hold at the above-mentioned hotel on Thursday, March 18th, at 7.30 p.m., when nomination of officers, framing of rules, fixing of radius, etc., will be gone into? Should any fanciers who are unable to attend have any suggestions to make, I trust they will be good enough to communicate with me prior to that date. Before closing my remarks I would like to thank those gentlemen who replied to my previous letter, also to solicit the favour of replies from those fanciers I communicated with direct on February 26th and 27th.

THE YORKSHIRE CANARY CLUB OF IRELAND CHALLENGE CUP.

SIR,—It certainly gives me much pleasure in granting Mr. Devins' request by replying to his communication which appeared in your last issue. Perhaps it will be interesting to Mr. Devins to know that I am not an Irishman, neither am I a disappointed Irish exhibitor (as I have not yet sent birds across). Neither have I ever written under a nom de plume, or exhibited under it. I think that if any man was a disappointed exhibitor it was my friend Mr. Devins, when he found he could not sweep the decks, as I presume he had anticipated doing, at Clapham against the novices. There is just one clause in your letter which I must take exception to, Mr. D., and that is your query: "I wonder if you did the same (hand over to F.A.F.), all the prizes and specials you dreamt of winning with birds you said you bred yourself." I am not a dreamer, and I have never stated I bred winners. I can say one thing, that I bred winners and exhibited them long before you had any idea of taking up the hobby. So far as your threat, "to keep quiet," is concerned, I fear nothing from any man, as my character will bear clear daylight and strict investigation, and it will be found that, although W. Henry is only a workman, he is respected and honoured. I would advise that no person should throw stones in case they rebound and hurt. Now, Mr. Editor, I regret through lack of funds I am not in a position to accept Mr. Devin's challenge, otherwise I would certainly take him up without fear; but only being an honest hard-working man, I cannot put my hand on a "fiver" easily. However, Mr. Editor, I did not ask Mr. Devins to prove whether or not he was eligible to compete in novice classes. I merely asked a straight question, as I was interested in Clapham show, as some birds I sold (through lack of employment) were, I believe, exhibited there. Mr. Devins was the only Irish exhibitor who sent exhibits and as I know Mr. Devins by sight (having at one time worked in Sligo), I was naturally interested, and enquired, and found that he had been a novice exhibitor in Ireland during the year 1907, and was fortunate in having won more than three firsts in open novice classes. Even though there were only two and three exhibits in a class, a first prize counts as a first, and, according to the rules of the Union, "a novice is one who has not won more than three first prizes in open novice classes." Hence, a novice, having won three firsts, goes up to champion (or amateur where such classes are provided). Yet my friend sends over, and now claims he was entitled to compete at Clapham in the following year as a novice. In Ireland he has to compete in the open competition. It is a pity he did not send to the Palace as a novice; but I suppose the Clapham results put that out of the question. Perhaps the Secretary of the Clapham Show will decide if a novice who has won six firsts in the open novice classes in 1907, can exhibit the following year at an open show in novice classes. Then Mr. Devins will not run the risk of losing his £5.

WM. HENRY.

THE NESTING OF THE GOLDFINCH

SIR,—Allow me through your valuable paper to answer Mr. Clark, re the nesting of Goldfinches and the number of eggs laid per nest. I do not dispute the fact that Mr. Clark may have seen three nests with five in each, and clutches of six in four nests; but I also say that I have seen scores of nests with eggs in my time, and I still stand by my average. I would remind him that there never yet was a rule without an exception, and never will be. In our own families we think of an increase of one at a time; yet some folk have three. But that does not alter the fact that the general rule is one; and enough, too, in these hard times! I would also like to remind him that there are other things under the sun that I did not mention besides sycamore trees, and simply because I was not writing a serial story for a magazine. My space was limited, and I was trying to write a short chatty article that I hoped would find favour with my brother fanciers.

W. LLOYD.

THE TYPE OF PRESENT DAY WINNING NORWICH PLAINHEADS.

SIR,—I greatly appreciate the sketch drawn by our friend, Mr. E. Floyd, in your last week's issue. It is just what we want to aim at, and is our whole ambition, especially just now, wondering which are the best hens to mate up to such male birds. Mr. Floyd says that my clear yellow shown at the Jubilee Palace Show is not above standard length, but is an all-round Norwich. Mr. Floyd is not the only one who has commented on it as just what we want. I hope to breed a few more this season. I wish your valuable paper every success.

SIR,—Respecting my sketch that you so kindly published last week, may I offer you first my sincere thanks, and if it is of the slightest help to any fancier, I am repaid for the trouble (if anything can be a "trouble" in the cage bird fancy, and I think not, as all fanciers work free and heartily). May I point out, though, that the copy taken from my sketch rather makes the head too dome-shaped, it being slightly over ⅛in. from eye centre, instead of 7-16in., and the chest being 1½in. deep gives a circular measurement of 4.7 inches, instead of 4 inches. This, I think, is a printer's error.

EDWARD FLOYD.

BARTON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

SIR,—I notice a letter in the last issue, re the formation of the "Barton Canary and British Bird Club." As this letter may mislead some fanciers who are not conversant with the true facts, we take this opportunity of stating that the Society just mentioned is in no way connected with our own, which is the "original," (although only two months old). At our meeting on March 4th it was unanimously decided to extend the limits of membership, and instead of a six-mile limit, as originally agreed to, our club is now open to any fancier residing in the Lindsey Division of Lincolnshire. The date of our first members' show was agreed upon. The fixing of the date for our open show was deferred until our next meeting, although I may say that we practically decided to have our show included in the "Show Dates fixed" column in CAGE BIRDS. Several of our members have left us owing to an unfortunate dispute regarding our meeting-place, but I am glad to say their absence has not affected the welfare of our society; our membership is increasing, and we have every prospect of a prosperous year. Our President is Sir B. C. D. Sheffield, Bart., M.P., our vice-presidents are Messrs. O. Wass, C.C., and F. Hopper, J.P., and our funds are swelling, with evident satisfaction to our worthy treasurer. With careful management, hard work and good support from our friends the public, there is no reason why we should not have as good a year as any society which has been longer established.

CINNAMON BORDER FANCIES AND THEIR COLOUR.

SIR,—I am glad to see "Your Reporter" has replied to my letter, re his remarks anent the colour of the Cinnamon Borders at the recent Palace Show. In his attempt to back up his remarks I think your readers will agree with me that he has got a bit mixed, and has failed entirely to prove his statements. I find that "Your Reporter" has thought fit to misquote me. If he reads my letter again he will see that I did not say I had not seen a Cinnamon Border till four years ago. What I said was, that it was only some four years ago since I saw a Self Cinnamon cock. I may say I did not breed Border Fancies when they were known as the Cumberland Fancy, but one thing I know, that prior to six years ago there wasn't a Self Cinnamon Border cock on the show bench that could claim to conform to the club's standard. In those days "Your Reporter" speaks about, the Cinnamon Borders were all hens, and were only sports from the Green, and were not anything like the colour he advocates. He also tells me to ask some of the old fanciers; well, I may tell him that I am pleased to say I am well acquainted with more than one of those he names, and have heard them say that the Cinnamon Border of to-day is streets ahead of anything ever seen before. I can also remember the yellow Cinnamon "Your Reporter" refers to, belonging to Mr. M. Jamieson. I say for type and quality she was a good one, but for colour she failed to what we have to-day, simply because she was bred from the green. I agree with "Your Reporter" that we want them as rich in colour as possible, but I think he is making a mistake when he says that Mr. Jamieson's bird was far superior to any Cinnamon staged in the Border section at the recent Palace Show. I also think "Your Reporter" cannot be serious when he states that colour breeding does not receive the attention it deserves. I know more than one breeder and exhibitor who have birds (natural colour) that they dare not show, as in nine cases out of ten they would be disqualified for "colour feeding." I say we are improving every year since colour feed was barred; now one has to breed (not feed) for colour. I said in my last letter that in my opinion if other types of Canaries were moulted out a natural colour the Border would compare very favourably with them as regards colour. I still hold to what I said, and I claim to know a little about what I have said. I should like to hear some disinterested parties' version of the colour of Cinnamon Borders.

CINNAMON BORDER.

(We have had to delete from the above letter several sentences of a purely personal nature. We are glad to allow correspondents to discuss the colour of Cinnamon Borders; but they must keep to the point. Every fancier is entitled to his own opinion.—EDITOR.)

---

SIR,—I would very much like to know through your valuable paper what the Cinnamon Club Norwich Fanciers would term the correct colour of Cinnamon? They would greatly help us out of the difficulty, I am sure, and would prevent one's taking a step in the wrong direction, now the breeding season is commencing.

LEICESTER CAGE BIRD SOCIETY'S OPEN SHOW.

SIR,—I was very pleased indeed to read last week in "Twitterings" that the members of the Leicester Cage Bird Society were going to hold an open show on December 4th and 6th. It seems a long time since they had an open show, luck apparently having been against them in the last two shows they held. Although the society lost money, I am pleased to say the old, well-known fanciers have stuck together and kept the society going. Although not in a position to hold an open show, they did what very few All England Societies do—they made all the meetings as attractive as they possibly could for all the members, and any fanciers who might drop in, by getting experienced fanciers and exhibitors to come and judge their table shows, give lectures, and washing exhibitions, and what was more, a fancier could always go to the meetings and enjoy himself. The members were always pleased to see fanciers from other societies at their meetings, and gave them a hearty welcome. The old fanciers—men who in their day have risen to the highest rung of the ladder—Messrs. Judd, Ride, Lander, Stevens, Exton, and many more, were always ready to give advice to the novice. I am proud to say that the Leicester C.B. Society was the one that brought me out as an exhibitor, and a great deal of my success on the show bench is due to the advice given to me by the above fanciers. Leicester was always noted for British birds; some of the very best that have ever graced a show bench were caught and moulted in Leicester. I could mention several birds that were exhibited by Leicester fanciers, and their equals have not been seen since. I well remember the last show but one that was held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, about seven years ago. What a collection! Undoubtedly that was one of the best shows of British Birds which has ever been held in the Midlands. If the Leicester Society engage a specialist British judge, and give a good classification, I would be willing to guarantee a few of the classes against loss, or I would be willing to join three or four British exhibitors and guarantee the whole of the British classes against loss. And if exhibitors who are interested in the other sections of the show will do the same, then I feel confident that the Society will go ahead, and take its place amongst the leading societies in England.

THE BORDER FANCY CANARY IN THE SOUTH.

SIR,—I am writing this letter in the hope of starting a little discussion on the type of the Borders we see winning in this (the Southern) part of the country. Most of the judges down here seem to me (a novice) to want a thick-necked, stout-chested type of bird. The coloured plate with the Birthday Number of CAGE BIRDS shows us two lovely Borders if we could manage to breed them as good. I believe, however, they would not do much winning in the South; they would be too small and thin-necked. In the grand article for novices in the same number, we are advised by Mr. Patterson to return all "bull-necked" birds as useless. They appear to me to be just the ones we want down here. Now, I should like to know which we are to do: breed true to type, or to try and satisfy our judges? I noticed at the Palace all the other sections had a specialist judge except "Wee Gems." I am sure we should not see so many chubby shaped ones in the cards if we had some of the North country Border judges down this way. Another thing I noticed at the Palace was the absence of Border novice classes. What is the reason? All other varieties of Canaries had them.

IN THE COURTS.

WELL-KNOWN FANCIERS AT LAW.

A case of considerable interest to fanciers was heard by His Honour Judge Bacon, in the Bloomshury County Court (London), on Friday, March 5th. Mr. G. E. Weston, of 45, Clevedon Mansions, London, N.W., the well-known journalist and judge, sued Dr. O'Neal, of Fulwell, near Sunderland, who has recently been very successful at north country shows as an exhibitor of Yorkshires, for "£5 4s., the price, keep, and care of two birds, a Linnet and a Twite, sold and delivered." The case was originally set down for hearing on February 5th, but owing to Mr. Weston being due to judge at the Crystal Palace Show on that day, he applied for an adjournment. This was opposed by Dr. O'Neal, but consented to by the judge.

The plaintiff's ground of action, as revealed by the evidence, was that he sent a Linnet and a Twite on approval to the defendant. The birds were returned, but the plaintiff alleged that while in the possession of the defendant they had been "dressed" with some preparation, consequently he declined to accept them, and sued for their value and keep. Mr. Warden Gowing appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Marris for the defendant.

The appended account of the case is supplied by a reporter attached to the London "Daily Telegraph."

The Plaintiff in the Box.

The Judge declined to hear any opening statement from the plaintiff's solicitor, and Mr. Weston at once went into the witness box.

Mr. Gowing: During the month of September did the defendant write you the following letter? (The various letters were admitted and handed to His Honour for perusal).

Dear Sir,—Sometime ago I wrote asking you if you had any really first-class exhibition Hardbills. . . . . if you have anything which you can recommend, send it on, on approval, along with price, and I will forward cheque if satisfactory.

C. Duncan O'Neal.

Plaintiff: Yes.—Did you on October 12th write the defendant this letter?

Dear Sir,—I have a Linnet and Twite ready now, grand specimens, and really fit for keenest competitiou, price £4 4s. the two. . . I am not unwilling to send on 48 hours' approval. . . .

G. E. Weston.

Plaintiff: Yes.—On October 13th Dr. O'Neal replied:—

Thanks for your letter offering me the Linnet and Twite. I shall be very glad if you will send them to me on approval to-morrow, Wednesday night. Address them. . . .

C. Duncan O'Neal.

P.S.—Try and send them to-morrow night, as it will suit me much better.

Plaintiff: Yes.—What did you do then?—I took the two birds down to business with me that Wednesday morning, and forwarded them to Dr. O'Neal the same night.—Did you at the same time write this letter?

Dear Sir,—The two birds shall leave this evening (Wednesday), per G.N.R. Co. . . . Please return Friday night if not approved. You must remember that the season is early yet, and that both birds are not, of course, up in full bloom; they are improving daily. I have not touched them—even to spray them with glycerine. The Twite, I notice, has still an odd quill feather here and there.

G. E. Weston.

Plaintiff: Yes.—On October 17 did you receive this letter from Dr. O'Neal?

I am returning the two birds to-night, as they are not suitable.

C. Duncan O'Neal.

Plaintiff: I did.—The birds arrived back again after you had left home for business?—Yes.—In what condition did you find them when you saw them?—I found that they had been "dressed" with some preparation and completely spoiled, their feathers, especially about the neck, being all matted together.—What did you do? I immediately wired Dr. O'Neal.

Mr. Gowing: This is the telegram, your Honour: "Am absolutely astounded at condition of birds; disgraceful thing.—Weston." What did you do then? I followed up my wire with a letter.—The letter was read by His Honour.

Oct. 17, 1908.

Sir,—I have to confirm my telegram of this evening, saying that I am absolutely astounded at the condition in which you have returned the birds, and that it is a disgraceful piece of business. . . I cannot conceive how anyone in your position could have two birds "dressed," and after they have been spoiled in the process, coolly pack them off back again. . . . However, luckily I have a well-known fancier friend who saw the birds just previous to them being sent along to you, and I will see what steps can be taken to redress the balance between yourself and myself. . . . It is unthinkable that other people's property can with impunity be served in the way you have served these two birds (or someone on your behalf).

G. E. Weston.

Mr. Gowing: On October 19th did you receive this letter from defendant?

Sir,—I am at a loss to understand the singular vehemence of both your telegram and letter. Your birds were very much inferior to your description of them, and I looked carefully after them, packed them myself, and returned them (insured) by a fast train on Friday night, as you desired.

C. Duncan O'Neal.

Plaintiff: Yes.—Mr. Gowing here handed the Judge plaintiff's reply, but His Honour, who had previously had difficulty in deciphering Mr. Weston's letters, exclaimed: "What a dreadful hand this man writes," and handed the letter back to the solicitor with a request for him to read it "if he could."

Sir,—I have no objection to your considering the Linnet and Twite "much inferior" to my description (that is a matter of opinion), and returning them on that ground—they were sent for your approval. All I ask, and have a right to expect, is that they should be returned to me in the same condition as they were sent, and not "dressed" and "faked" as I found them to be on their arrival here. . . . I notice you carefully refrain from committing yourself to the statement that the two birds were returned in the same condition as received. Fortunately, I can prove to the hilt that they actually were not. . . . I decline to accept the birds back seeing that they have been tampered with while on approval, which, fortunately, I am, I think, in a position to establish to the satisfaction of any judge . . . much though I regret having recourse to law.

G. E. Weston.

Two further letters were then read, the defendant's reply and the plaintiff's rejoinder:—

Sir,—Your last letter has left me as much perplexed as did the preceding one, as I cannot understand what could have happened to the birds. My maid and myself were the only two people who saw the birds, which were only twice touched. . . . When they came the bath was put in for them, which they took and seemed to enjoy. Of the art of faking and "dressing," I am entirely ignorant, although one has heard a good deal of it. I am extremely sorry that anything should have happened to your birds, and am writing you thus (at length) to see whether the difficulties cannot be explained. . . . If the legal measures (which you refer to) seem to you the best, then I am prepared to defend the case.

C. Duncan O'Neal.

Oct. 23rd.

Sir,—I make no charge of "fraud" against you, nor of "faking," using that word in its worst sense. I take my stand on the fact that the Linnet and Twite were not returned to me in the same conditiou as they were sent to you (vide my previous letters). They have been dressed (or "prepared for show") in a way well understood in the North, and "dressed" so badly that they have been spoiled, hence my complaint, for I could not offer them for sale to another possible customer. Unless it were intended to keep the birds, they ought not to have been treated in this way. I must leave the matter entirely in your own hands. I believe myself quite justified in the course I have taken, though I regret the necessity.

G. E. Weston.

In reply to further questions, Plaintiff said that the birds were seen on the Wednesday before they left, by a Mr. Turnher, and on the following Monday by a Mr. House, and afterwards by Mr. Turnber again.

Mr. Marris, in cross-examination, asked: You are sure the birds you received back were the birds you sent to Dr. O'Neal? Yes.—Where were they on the Wednesday? At my office.—Who took them to the railway station? I packed them, took them, and insured them myself.—In your first letter you say the birds are splendid specimens, with all the good points, then in your second letter you point out that they have faults.—Oh, no; I only point out that they are not at their best.—I put it to you that you had never seen the birds at all when you first wrote Dr. O'Neal? It is absolutely untrue.—I suggest that you were selling these birds on commission? I have never sold birds on commission in the whole of my career.—How did you come into possession of them? The Linnet I bought and moulted myself. The Twite I bought from Mr. Turnber a week or two before writing Dr. O'Neal.—Where did you keep them? In a large flight cage.—With other Linnets and Twites? With other Linnets, but this was the only Twite.—You are well acquainted with the various methods of "touching up" birds for exhibition? Certainly; it is necessary, as a judge, that I should be.—Did you do anything of this nature to this Linnet and Twite? Nothing whatever.—In your letter you mention the spraying of birds with glycerine. Do you use glycerine on your birds? Yes; it is a common practice with fanciers who exhibit.—What do you suggest was used on these birds? I should say glycerine, with probably the addition of some spirit. But they were badly overdone, quite spoiled.

What Were They Dressed With?

Mr. Frank Turnber said that he had been a fancier and exhibitor for many years, also had judged, and was at present aviary-keeper for the Duke of Bedford. He called at Mr. Weston's office, and on his desk saw a Linnet and a Twite. It was on a Wednesday, and he remembered the occasion because it was Battersea Show, and he called about reporting it.—Mr. Gowing asked: What was the condition of the two birds then?

The witness caused much laughter by stating that they looked as though they were "gummed up" and spoiled, and by repeating this assertion after the question had been put to him a second time. He seemed surprised at the sensation caused by his replies. After some trouble, and with the assistance of Judge Bacon, who addressed some heated observations to the witness, he was made to understand that the Court wanted to "begin at the beginning." Mr. Turnher explained that he thought the question referred to the second time he saw the birds. He said that on the first occasion they were in perfect condition. They were very good birds. Later, Mr. Weston sent for him, and when he again saw the Linnet and Twite they were "gummed up." They looked as though an attempt had been made to "dress" them, but the result had been to mess them up. The feathers were all sticky and matted.—He thought glycerine in some form had been used.

In cross-examination by Mr. Marris, witness said the second time he saw the birds they were at Mr. Weston's house in his birdroom.—Had Mr. Weston other Linnets and Twites there? He had some Linnets, but I did not see any Twites.—Were they in a flight? Some of them. Were the Linnet and Twite you called to see in this flight? No, they were in separate cages.—How could you tell they were the same birds that you saw previously? It is easy for fanciers to remember birds. The Twite I could have told anywhere.—His Honour: The shepherd knows his sheep (laughter).—The witness placed the date of Battersea Show as October 15th, and Mr. Marris at once pointed out that this was Thursday, when the birds were already in Sunderland.—Mr. Gowing said the witness had already stated it was on a Wednesday when he first saw the birds, and pointed out that Battersea Show was held on two days, October 14th and 15th.

Before the Bench.

The Linnet and Twite were produced in Court, in company with a bird whose feathers had not been "dressed," and were closely examined by the Judge. He drew a smile from the fanciers present by laying down one of the show-cages upon its back, which, by the way, the discerning usher quickly righted.—Mr. Turnber said that in his opinion the two birds were those which he saw at Mr. Weston's office and house.

Mrs. Weston was called, and explained that her maid brought the birds to her about midday on the Saturday, and that she unpacked them and put them in the birdroom. No one saw or touched them until Mr. Weston went to look at them in the evening. They were not put back into the flight.

Mr. C. A. House, the next witness, said that he was a journalist and judge. He had been a judge for 21 years. He remembered Mr. Weston calling him into his office soon after 9 o'clock on the morning of October 19th.—Mr. Gowing: Tell His Honour what occurred.—Witness: Mr. Weston pointed to a Linnet and a Twite, which he had in show-cages on his desk, and asked me my opinion of them. Directly I saw them I said: Some one has been trying to "dress" these birds and has made a mess of them. Mr. Weston then explained the circumstances of the case.

Mr. Marris, cross-examining, asked whether it was not customary to "dress" birds with glycerine in order to improve the appearance of their feathers before sending them out to a show?—It is a custom to deal with birds in that way; not with crude glycerine, however.—He did not say that these birds had been dressed with glycerine; he said that they had been dressed with something, and that that something had made them in a terrible mess. Their feathers looked "sticky" and particularly bad round the neck.—Asked whether he could identify the two birds in Court, he said that in the case of the Linnet he was quite certain, because he still saw traces of what he observed on October 19th; of the Twite he could not be positive. He had not seen the birds since October 19th. Fanciers could carry birds "in their eye" for long periods. He could tell his own birds in the dark. (This caused hearty laughter, during which Mr. House explained that he was referring to his pigeons and fowls, by handling them, and made His Honour laugh by reminding him of his own saying: "The shepherd knows his sheep"). He knew nothing about the date of Battersea Show.

After he had left the box, Mr. House was recalled by Judge Bacon, who asked: What was your opinion of the birds when you looked at them? Were they two good birds?—They were two very good birds spoiled, your Honour.

Mr. Charles Prior was called, and said, in reply to Mr. Gowing, that he was a well-known exhibitor, had officiated as a judge, was a specialist in Linnets and Twites, and had written a book concerning them. He had examined the Linnet and Twite, the subjects of this action, and the birds had obviously been overdressed.—In reply to His Honour, he said that he considered they were two excellent birds. They did not show the effects of the "dressing" very much now. This was only what he should expect seeing that five months had elapsed. He considered that if these birds were kept from water they would show traces of the dressing until they moulted.—In cross-examination, he said that he should think it likely that glycerine in some form had been used on the birds. He knew nothing about Battersea Show.

The Defendant in the Box.

Dr. O'Neal was then called, and said in reply to his solicitor, that he was a medical man in practice at Fulwell, near Sunderland. He answered an advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, and had the Linnet and Twite, the subjects of this action, sent down to him on approval. Immediately he unpacked them he saw that they were not good enough, and decided not to keep them. They were placed in stock cages, and carefully tended, and returned on the Friday night as requested by Mr. Weston. He was having breakfast when they arrived, and they were brought into the dining-room by his maid, in whose presence he inspected them, and said at once that he would not keep them. His maid took them to the station, which was three miles from his house. He did nothing whatever to the birds while they were in his possession. His maid generally attended to his birds. He knew nothing whatever about the process of "dressing." He had never seen a bird "dressed." He had never sprayed a bird in his life, and never "got a bird up" for show. He refused the birds in question because they were inferior specimens. He did not actually touch them. He looked at them as they were in the cages. It was not necessary to touch a bird to judge it. He had merely ordered the birds on approval, and had sent them back as unsuitable.

Mr. Gowing, in cross-examination, said: You made up your mind at once that the birds were unsuitable as soon as you unpacked them? I made up my mind at once to send them back; they did not seem good enough to me.—Did you do anything to the birds while in your possession?—I did not touch them.—Answer my question. Did you do anything to them? Nothing at all.—But look at your letter in which you admit that you gave them a bath. Is it not a curious proceeding to take birds off a night journey and give them a bath? I do not think so. I say the birds enjoyed the bath.—Was there anything in the bath? It was pure water only.—Nothing in the water? Nothing at all.—The witness added that until he read in Mr. Weston's letter a reference to "glycerining," he had never heard of such a process.—Have you read any text-books concerning bird-keeping and exhibiting? Yes.—Do you read Fancy papers? Yes.—Do you mean to say that in these text-books and papers you have read nothing about getting birds up for show, and the use of glycerine? No, I have never read anything.—I suppose you would describe yourself as a novice? What do you mean by a novice?—Surely you know that. An exhibitor for a short time only.—I commenced to keep and exhibit birds about four years ago.—You have won many prizes? Yes.

The defendant said that he had only one British bird, a Linnet, on October 15th. He had not exhibited any that season.—He was asked to look at a catalogue of Morpeth Show, held October 17th, and admitted that he had a Linnet and a Twite entered there. They were the birds he ordered from plaintiff. But as they were not good enough he returned them and forfeited his entrance fees. He admitted that he wanted the birds sent on the Wednesday so that he might have them in time for Morpeth Show.

Mr. Gowing: I put it to you that you were also anxious to have them in time to "dress" them, or "get them up" for show? I have said that I have never "dressed" a bird, or got one up for show.—Have you never washed a bird? I don't call washing a bird "getting it up for show."—Has anyone got up birds for show for you? No, no one.—Do your know Mr. J. Riseborough? Yes.—Has he ever washed any birds for you for show? No.—Or helped to get any up for show? No.—He is well-known as an expert washer of birds? I believe so.—Has he never assisted you? No.

Isabel Moncrieff said she was housekeeper to Dr. O'Neal, and generally attended to his birds. She remembered the Linnet and Twite coming. Her employer made up his mind at once that he would not keep them. No attempt was made to "dress" them for show while they were at Dr. O'Neal's house.

In answer to Mr. Gowing she said she very rarely left the house, and was at home all the time the plaintiff's birds were there.—Judge Bacon: What? all the time? A dull life, is it not, never going out? Who orders the dinner? Who gets in the meat?—Witness: Of course I go out sometimes.—Judge Bacon: I am very glad to hear it.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Answering further questions, she admitted that sometimes her duties took her into the upper regions of the house; that Dr. O'Neal could be in the birdroom alone; and that she would have been unable to tell whether or not the birds were "dressed" when packed for the return journey.

Mr. Marris, in addressing the Judge, submitted that the plaintiff's case had not been made out. Dr. O'Neal had given his evidence in a very straightforward way, and had withstood the cross-examination very well. He had sworn that he did not do anything to the birds, and his evidence was supported by that of his housekeeper. He drew attention to the evidence of one of plaintiff's witnesses, who had said that he saw the birds on a date when they were, as a matter of fact, in the defendant's possession. He submitted that this witness's evidence was not entitled to be credited, and that he never saw the birds at all.

Mr. Gowing, in reply, said that the witness referred to by the defendant's solicitor had stated that it was the Wednesday of the Battersea Show before any date had been mentioned. He drew attention to the fact that defendant had the two birds entered for a show, and thus had a reason for getting them up for show. He submitted that the evidence pointed to this being the case, and that when he found the birds had been spoiled he sent them back to the plaintiff. What interest would the plaintiff have in "dressing" them? Was it likely he would risk the position he held, and his position as judge, by bringing an unfounded charge of this nature? He received the birds back in such a condition that he could not do otherwiso than take action against the defendant to recover their value.

The Judge's Decision.

Judge Bacon, when giving his decision, said it appeared that one side or the other so "dressed" the birds as to spoil their appearance. The plaintiff had sworn that he did not "dress" them, and a witness had said that the birds were in perfect condition on the day they were sent away. The defendant had also sworn that he did not "dress" the birds. He had arrived at the conclusion that the birds were "overdressed" when they got back to the plaintiff. That had not been disputed. The defendant had told them that he intended sending the birds to a show. But he at once decided they were not suitable. It was a remarkable fact that Dr. O'Neal, who claimed to be a novice, saw that these birds were inferior specimens at once, as soon as unpacked. Yet expert evidence said they were splendid birds. Three judges—one a judge of 21 years' standing—said so. This was not a sale. The birds were on approval, and it was impossible to believe that the plaintiff would send them in such a state that they were not likely to be accepted. The only conclusion he could come to was that Dr. O'Neal, having entered and paid his entrance fees, did "dress" the birds. Such simplicity as he had evinced was surprising on the part of one who showed birds and won prizes. It was difficult to be convinced that such a man had never heard of "dressing" birds for exhibition. It was well known that gardeners, florists, pigeon, poultry, and dog fanciers all had to prepare their exhibits; they would stand no chance of winning if they did not. He could hardly think that Dr. O'Neal, who, on his own showing, had been an exhibitor for four years, was unacquainted with the preparing of birds for show. He gave judgment for the plaintiff.

Mr. Gowing applied for costs on a higher scale, but His Honour refused this. Mr. Marris then objected to the amount claimed by the plaintiff for "care and keep" of the birds, offering 3d. per week. His Honour said that his judgment was for the full amount claimed, with costs.

A washing exhibition was given by Mrs. Ridge (wifc of tbe secretary), aud Mr. Dyer, the assistant-secretary. Mrs. Ridge explained tbe various positions, in which she held the bird, and tben proceeded with the washing, which was eagerly followed. The majority of the members were amateurs, who appeared greatly interested. Mr. Dyer then followed, and made his exhibition as instructive as possible. Mr. Vickers (a novice) then had a try to wash a bird, and although appearing very nervous, made quite a good job of it. A vote of thanks was passed to Mrs. Ridge and Mr. Dyer. Mr. Dyer said that he had a very pleasant duty to perform, and that was to present to Mrs. Ridge a lady's umbrella, and to Mr. Ridge a gentlemau's umbrella, as a small token of the great respect in which they were held. In Mr. Ridge, he said, they bad a good and faithful official, and in Mrs. Ridge a lady who was always willing to do all that lay in her power to further the interest of the society. He looked upon Mrs. Ridge as the assistant-secretary, and felt quite certain that Mr. R. would never have done bis duties so well if Mrs. Ridge had not been at his elbow. Both Mr. and Mrs. Ridge replied, and said that they were both lovers of birds, and that so long as healtb permitted, their services were at the disposal of the society. Mr. Dyer said he had another pleasant duty to perform, which was to make known to Mr. C. Crahtree that he had been made a life honorary member. Mr. Crabtree (he said) had been a breeder and exhibitor of cage birds almost all his life, and a member of this society for a good number of years, but now feeling old age creeping on, and health not good, he was giving up; but in order that the link should not he broken, he was commissioued hy the members to inform his old friend that he would always be welcome at any of the meetings or shows of the society at any time he felt able and disposed to come. Mr. Crabtree thanked the members for their kindness relating (as most old fanciers like to do) many stories of what it was to be an exhibitor in the days of long ago. Mr. Vickers then showed the members a very simple way of making a nest hanger, water tin holder, or perch holder, also how to make a seed box out of an empty mustard tin. Votes of thanks having been passed to Mr. Dyer, and to Mr. Roberts for his conduct in the chair, the meeting was closed, it being one of the most pleasant and profitable meetings the society have ever held.

Annual Dinner.

Fortunate indeed were the members of the S.M.F.A. in securing the presence of their president, Mr. G. Stewart Bowles, M.P., at their annual dinner, which was held at "The Firs," Clapham Park, on March 9tb. The room had been tastefully decorated hy some of the members, a goodly company assemhled, and a most pleasant evening was spent. The presideut was supported amongst others, by Mr., Mrs. and the Misses Aslin, Mr. and Mrs. Spowage, Miss Mills, Miss Hide. Miss Day, Miss Millichap, Mrs. Reece, Mr. and Mrs. Priest, Mr. and Mrs. Cattie, Mr. and Mrs. Whiting, Dr. and Mrs. Dunken, Mr. and Mrs. Jarman, Mr., Mrs. and Miss Ansell, Mr. and Mrs. Ware, Mr., Mrs. and Miss Pollock, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, Messrs. Geo. Milledge (vice-chairman), Heppell, G. W. Milledge (bon. secretary), Mills (2), Cottrell, Gibson, Gill, Harrison, Grovan, Bryan, Walton, Harrison, Lee, Hill, West, Clegg, Blake, Coleby, Robson, and House.

In proposing "The S.M.F.A.," the president said it gave him the greatest pleasure to propose what was in fact the toast of the evening. The S.M.F.A. was an association of which they could all feel proud. It was not an upstart society; it had been in existence for nearly twenty years, having been founded in November, 1889. It had had its ups and downs, yet through them all it had prospered, but best of all it had established a firm, sound, bonest reputation among Fanciers' Societies. It had been particularly happy in its officials. It bad only had five secretaries in the whole of its career. Two only held office a few months, hut Mr. Aslin, the second, for ten years held the society together. Since tben, Mr. Heppel, wbo had proved bimself a real friend and benefactor of the society, had held office for six years, and it was with great and unfeigned regret that they heard of his retirement. In Mr. Milledge, who had held office since Mr. Heppel's retirement, two years ago, they bad an officer who could fully and thoroughly enhance the good reputation of the society. It was a pleasure to him to be president of a society which had such a grand past; he hoped to be president for many years to come. Theirs was a small society, but then tbey only counted those who paid, and they numbered over a hundred. Prosperity depended not upon members, however, but upon the quality of tbe members, and he thought they had quality, for the society was conducted on sound lines. He was pleased to see such a large number of ladies present, and hoped the society would go on and prosper.

Other toasts were "The Press," given by Mr. Walton; "The Judges," by Mr. Whiting; "G.U.M.S. and Kindred Societies," by Dr. Dunken; "The Ladies," by Mr. Spowage, and "The Host and Hostess." A splendid musical programme was contributed by Miss Millichap, Miss E. Mills, Miss N. Aslin Miss S. Aslin, Mr. L. E. Aslin, Messrs. G. C. and E. W. Mills, and Mrs. F. Taylor.

The question was raised re Mr. Fulbrook's hybrid being "wrong classed" at the L.C.B.A. Show. ## SCOTTISH BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Annual general meeting held in their rooms, 142, High-st., Edinburgh, on March 6th, President Mr. Cochrane in the chair. The secretary then intimated that two members, namely, Messrs. M. Craig and P. McQuistou, had violated rule 11, part of which reads thus: "Any member found unfairly or dishonestly competing at any show, or otherwise guilty of any dishonourable conduct, shall be expelled the club, shall forfeit all interests therein, and shall not be eligible for re-election." In the first case it was a Yellow Bunting, which had been disqualified for an alleged trimmed head. The chairman, Mr. Cochrane, being the judge disqualifying same, at Glasgow and West of Scotland Show, vacated the chair, the vice-president, Mr. Bald, being appointed in his stead for this case only. After being fully reported upon by the judge concerned, Mr. Craig was asked for bis defence, in giving which be strongly denied any trimming on bis part. Both were then asked to retire. The case was fully discussed, and the alleged trimming confirmed by a few of those present who had seen the bird. The judge's decision was upheld, and on the exhibitor being again brought in, he was informed, on the unanimous finding of the meeting, tbat he had been expelled the club. The other case, that of Mr. P. McQuiston (Ayr), was concerning a Bullfinch cock, which had been disqualified for alleged painting at Bathgate Show. Mr. Jno. Brown, the judge, who disqualified the Bullfinch, was present, and be ably stated his case, and informed the meeting that be took four pads of wool running thick with stain off the bird In the presence of some of the officials of Bathgate Show. He also produced the signatures of the following, wbo saw the stain taken off the bird, nameiy, Messrs. T. R. Barkhouse, Wm. Sharp, R. Bald, Wm. Flood, and S. Ward, tbe other judge officiating. Mr. McQuiston admitted the bird was stained, but said that he only bought it a few days before the show. He handed in a letter to that effect from the seller, in wbich tbe latter confirmed selling the bird, and denied having stained the bird. Messrs. Brown and McQuiston then retired, and the matter having been fully discussed, it was unanimously agreed that Mr. McQuiston be expelled the club. It was also agreed after a vote tbat they he presented with what medals, etc., they won previous to tbe time of the shows concerned. It was also agreed after a vote, and almost unanimously, that all societies asking for patronage be not granted if entries be accepted from Messrs. McQuiston and Craig, or if eitber of the two he officiating as judges." The balance-sheet was then approved of. Presentation of medals to winners present was made. Messrs. Arrighi, Livingstone, and Sharp very generously handed their gold medals back, which was highly appreciated by all. Election of office-bearers as follows:—President, Mr. Arrighi; vice-presidents, Dr. Galloway, and Messrs. R. Bald, T. Erskine, C. Douglas, F. A. Watt; secretary and treasurer, Mr. A. W. Watson, 8, Commercial-street, Leith, with salary £2; auditors, Messrs. R. Craig and J. Winter; committee, Messrs. Allau, Mason, Bruce, Davidson, Henderson, Pendrigh, Miller, and others, if necessary. A long discussion on rule providing that judges must be members of this society before patronage is granted took place, and after a great many votings the finding was: "All societies asking for patronage must have as their judge a member of this society, but where a judge is appointed outside of Scotland same to he discussed and voted on at September meeting, this being the meeting when patronage is considered." Also agreed that five silver medals instead of four be taken in exchange for a gold one. Gold medal winners: Messrs. T. Erskine, McQuiston, Henderson, Livingstone, and Sharp, Arrighi, Pendrigh, and Bald; silver medals, Messrs. Davidson, Bruce, Duncan, Sharp, Cullen, Aitken (2), Crockatt, Dr. Galloway (3), Duncan and Logan, M. Craig (3) (withheld), Taylor, Calder, Anderson, Thomson, Bruce, Johnstone, Watson, and Ward. Unfortunately, through a printer's error, one or two exhibitors' and winners' names included above, were omitted in the balance-sheet with winners' names; will they please accept my regret for same? Trophy won by Mr. Arrighi, who gets gold medal; runner-up, Mr. McQuiston, silver medal. Next meeting, first Saturday in September, at Bathgate. A hearty vote of thanks to retiring office-bearers brought a very long and representative meeting to a close. Information to be had from the secretary as to membership.—A. W. WATSON, Sec.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE & DIST. C.B.S.

At the usual monthly meeting an interesting address on "The Norwich Plainhead Canary: Its Breeding and Rearing," was given by Mr. T. Brown (Newhurny). After a lengthy discussion and several questions being asked and answered, Mr. Brown was heartily thanked for bis address. We enrolled three new members, wbich makes eleven for the year so far.—GEO. HAYVER, secretary.

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

FOLLOWING up last week's notes on the ballot paper of the Yorkshire Union, we come to the additions to rules. Here we have under consideration the advisability of denoting in the Yorkshire Union year book, who are novices and eligible to compete in the novice classes. The idea is a good one, and I hope in future to see all novices marked "N."—Next we have an addition to the rule concerning defaulting members, and the addition should be carried, as it will give the Union power to expel such.

PROPOSED new rules embrace a variety of subjects. The first deals with members' shows, and the rule is to read: "That no society holds a members' show during the hours a Yorkshire Union show is in progress." This rule has been much talked of for some time, and in effect has been carried out by many of the societies. It is open to comment. Of course it does not, on the face of it, look quite the thing for a society to hold a members' show when another one is holding an open show, being almost certain it will slightly effect the entries, as many (especially when in the running for good specials) will patronise their members' show to the detriment of the open one. Should the rule pass, the societies will have to fix their dates so as to miss the open shows, or otherwise hold them in the evening.

SECONDLY, we read: "That all entry forms and judges' slips be forwarded to the Yorkshire Union secretary within fourteen days of the close of the show. Any society failing to comply to bo fined £1 1s." This rule is merely to safeguard the checking of points in cases of dispute, and should, therefore, receive many votes for its adoption.—Next we have the proposition: "That show rules be printed in the Union year book, so that rule sheets need not be sent out with schedules to Union members, but only to outside exhibitors." The principal item in its favour is that it will save each society holding a show about 4s. 6d. But great care will have to be taken that schedules sent to fanciers who are not members contain a sheet of rules; and, further, each society must guarantee to deliver the books to their members.

MANY new rules deal with the subject of curtailing the number of shows, or shortening the time taken up by the shows. Firstly, it is suggested that two societies hold shows on the same dates, the classes to be so arranged that no class is provided for at both shows. This idea is, in my opinion, not in the least feasible. For the large exhibitor it may be fairly workable, but for the small one, the fancier who exhibits two, three, or four birds, it is unjust. Say, for instance, a fancier possesses two show birds and wishes to show them. When the schedules come out he finds they have to go to two different places. What can he do?

SECONDLY, it is proposed that the latter third of the shows shall hold first feather shows, thus, If eighteen shows are to be held, the last six must hold first feather shows. All societies holding shows to take the shows in rotation as usual. Thirdly, we have: "That the Y.U. provide a separate competition for first feather shows, prize money, etc., on same lines as winter shows. Any society holding a first feather show shall be exempt from holding a winter show, and shall advance two in rotation of dates for winter shows." The object of this rule is to allow any who hold late dates for winter shows, to hold first feather shows, when probably these will pay better, and at the same time the society will not lose its chance of a winter show when the date gets within reasonable limits.

FANCIERS, don't forget that ballot papers must be in by Monday morning, or they will be too late.

THE Amalgamated social and prize distribution was again a decided success, many being unable to obtain admission, the room being packed to its utmost capacity. The Open Norwich Plainhead Club had a good turn up at 3 o'clock for their annual general meeting, the balance-sheet, which shows a nice balance in hand, and other most important business being on the agenda. At 4.30 a move was made to the dining room, where tables had been laid for 68 visitors, and 67 of these places were filled. And a real good Yorkshire dinner we had. Dinner over, the visitors adjourned to the large room, where the prizes were on view, and a grand display they made; better than ever was the unanimous verdict. Mr. Sunderland makes an ideal chairman for such a gathering, and he filled the office to perfection, being supported by the presidents, secretaries, etc., of the various clubs represented.

A Wonderful Meeting of Yorkshire Fanciers.

The Gathering of Members and Friends of the various Specialist Clubs in Yorkshire, at the Annual Social and Prize Distribution, proved a remarkable success, the hall being filled to overflowing, and the utmost enthusiasm prevailing.

The great annual gathering for the distribution of the trophies, medals, and other prizes, of the Yorkshire Union of Cage Bird Societies, Yorkshire Canary Club, Cinnamon Marked Yorkshire Canary Club, Yorkshire County British Bird and Mule Club, Open Norwich Plainhead Club, CAGE BIRDS prizes for the Amateurs of Yorkshire, Ramsden's and Sandiford's colour food specials, etc., took place at headquarters, the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, on Saturday last, March 6th. The attendance was simply tremendous, the room being packed, while some were unable to obtain admission, and the utmost enthusiasm, and a true fanciers' spirit, prevailed. An innovation, voted a very good one, was the dinner, which took place before the meeting proper and it is hoped that this will also be an annual affair. Practically very little intimation had been given of this event, and it pleased the committee of management immensely to see the 67 fanciers and friends, including ladies, seated round the festive board. The committee which had the arrangements in hand was composed of the following gentlemen:—Chairman, Mr. D. Sunderland; secretary, Mr. Samuel Dean; with Messrs. Greaves, Shackleton, Halliday, Gledhill, Towers, Cowgill, Myers, Hammond, and Mitchell, representing the various societies concerned.

The Open Norwich P.C.

After an overture on the piano by Mr. E. Clegg, of Dewsbury, Mr. Sunderland opened the meeting with a few remarks concerning the various clubs, etc. He followed on by presenting to the winners the prizes of the Open Norwich Plainhead Club, of which Society he is chairman. He dwelt upon the great progress made during the first year of its existence, the excellent balance-sheet presented by the secretary at their general meeting that afternoon, the grand total of members, 83, and the beautiful display of prizes that he had the honour to present on behalf of the Club. He made special mention of the good work done by their esteemed and genial secretary, Mr. O. Mitchell.

Prize winners, open section, 1st, Messrs. John Haigh and Son, the splendid marble timepiece and bronzes, given by Mrs. C. M. Sunderland. Mr. Sunderland called upon his wife to present the prize, remarking that it was the first time he had ever had the pleasure of calling on his wife to fulfil the last clause of the marriage service, to obey, with any certainty of its fulfilment. (Laughter.) The remainder of the prize-winners were: 2nd, A. H. Waters, tea urn, value £2 2s.; 3rd, A. Hirst, pair of oil paintings on opal, presented by Mr. Harry Virr; 4th, J. Wilcock, dress piece, value 10s. 6d., presented by Mr. J. Whiteley; 5th, Messrs. Pickering and Wright, special, presented by Mr. J. E. Brotherton. Novice section: 1st, J. Mottram, tea urn, value £2 2s.; 2nd, Messrs. Greenwood and Pickles, goods value 10s. 6d., presented by Mr. Shields; 3rd, O. Mitchell, copper kettle, presented by Mr. Heppleston; 4th, Marlow Bros., electro-plated cruet, presented by Mr. S. Wilcock; 5th, J. W. Holmes, briar pipe and case.

The Y.C. British Bird and M.C.

Mr. Scott then took his place at the piano to accompany Mr. H. Pollard, who sang with good effect "The Raft," which was very well received. Mr. Sunderland now called upon Mr. W. A. Cowgill, the president of the Y.C.B.B. and M.C., to present the prizes for his society. Mr. Cowgill spoke as to the progress of the club, which he thought had not received quite the support expected and deserved, but he hoped that as they would start in a better condition for the next season than they were able to last year, they had better prospects in store. In this section D. Duncan, jun. (Harrogate), last year's novice winner, proved victorious, but owing to a regrettable illness, was unavoidably absent. Mr. Cowgill remarked upon the sterling qualities of Mr. Duncan as an exhibitor, and hoped the club would get a few more of the same stamp to keep him company. T. H. Inman (Bradford) secured second place; 3rd, T. Boyle (York); 4th, P. Mason. The prizes were: 1st cup, 2nd cutlery, 3rd case of carvers, 4th oil painting of British birds (presented by Mr. P. Jowett). Novice section: 1, W. R. Myers, pair of oil paintings, presented by Mr. Jowett.

Mr. W. Northrop next rendered the song, "Will of the Wisp" in fine style, securing the loud applause of the audience. This item was followed by the song, "Down the Vale," by Mr. Bennett, who also "brought down the house," the applause being loud and long.

The Yorkshire Canary Club.

In consequence of the unavoidable absence of Mr. W. H. Shackleton (the president of the Y.C.C.), Mr. Sunderland called upon Mr. F. Armstrong, the vice-president, to hand over the prizes to the successful competitors. First and foremost in importance was the presentation of the Y.C.C. challenge cup, value 20 guineas, to Mr. James Bailey (of Bailey and Swanger), who have been successful in heading the competition three times in four years, the trophy thus becoming their own property. This splendid cup is very massive and imposing, and will doubtless be much cherished by Mr. Bailey and succeeding generations. Mr. Armstrong dwelt upon the sterling qualities of Mr. Bailey, designating him a thorough tryer in any competitions he entered for. Mr. Bailey responded in true Yorkshire style, stating that eleven years had elapsed since he made up his mind to win the cup. He had had hold of one handle before, but this time was pleased to say he had hold of both. (Laughter.)

Mr. W. H. Shackleton, 2nd, receives the silver cup, value £2 2s., presented by Messrs. Bailey and Swanger; he was only five points behind the winner. Third prize, silver-plated teapot, presented by Mr. R. P. Broome, was won by Messrs. Ogden Bros.; 4th prize, Mr. J. Wilcock. Outside members' competition: Challenge cup, value £5 5s., presented by Mr. J. Sandiford, and silver-plated preserve dish, presented by Mr. J. W. Ramsden, won by W. Broughton. The second place was secured by G. W. Cuthbertson, who received Mr. Davy's oil paintings and Mr. Ramsden's miniature goblet. Third prize, 10s. 6d. cash, was won by H. Foden. Ramsden cup and money specials: First, Messrs. Ogden Bros., challenge cup, value £6 6s., presented by Mr. J. W. Ramsden; 2nd, £1 cash, M. Peel; 3rd, 15s. cash, W. H. Shackleton; 4th, 10s. cash, W. Wadsworth. Next came the smokers' cabinet (presented by Mr. F. Armstrong) and novice competition, won by M. Peel, who received the cabinet at the hands of the donor. Second prize, silver-plated cruet and 10s. cash, J. Robertshaw; third prize, miniature goblet and 5s. cash, Messrs. Shaw Bros.

The Yorkshire Union.

We then had "The Bedouin's Love Song," which was finely rendered by Mr. H. Pollard. Mr. Riley contributed to the amusing side with a comic song, which was exceedingly well received. Mr. Sunderland now rose to present the prizes of the Yorkshire Union, in place of Mr. Greaves, who did not feel quite equal to the occasion, in consequence of anxiety with regard to his wife, who, we were sorry to hear, is very ill, having been laid up in bed for five or six weeks. The "W. H. Shackleton" 30-guinea trophy, 1st, and medal value £1 1s., was won by W. H. Shackleton; 2nd, and medal value 15s., Ogden Bros.; 3rd, and medal value 10s., Bailey and Swanger; 4th, and medal value 10s., J. Wilcock. This is the second year of competition. First place last year was secured by Bailey and Swanger. The trophy must be won three times before becoming the property of any exhibitor. The "H. W. Naylor" challenge cup: First, W. H. Shackleton, who received a medal value £1 1s., in commemoration. This trophy must be won three times, and has already been won twice by both Messrs. T. Murgatroyd and Son and Mr. Shackleton. The "J. W. Ramsden" colour food specials:—Open section: First, silver-plated cruet, Ogden Bros.; 2nd, silver-plated preserve dish, W. H. Shackleton. Novice section: First prize, silver-plated preserve dish, F. Hammond; 2nd, miniature goblet, W. Beaumont.

The "H. H. Towers" champion novice specials: Prize, medal value £1 1s. for most points in Yorkshire novice section, W. Beaumont; prize, plant pedestal, value 10s. 6d., for most points in Norwich novice classes, F. Hammond. Novice medal competitions, Yorkshire section, were won as follows:—Messrs. Beaumont, White, Lane, Laycock, Clegg, Lumb, Livesey, Gill, Kaye, Sowden, Wilson, and Radley; Norwich section, Messrs. Hammond, Markwell, Fortman, and Greenwood. It is pleasing to note that two medals have gone to a society which has only joined the Union this year, and also that four have been won by the members of the City of Bradford O.S., amongst these being Mr. T. Fortnam, their genial president, and Mr. F. Hammond, last year's secretary of the Union. They will now have to sing "Put us amongst the champions."

"Cage Birds" Specials.

The musical part of the programme again held sway for a time, the duet, "Excelsior," being admirably rendered by Messrs. Bennett and Northrop. Mr. Stafford then gave a lovely song, and was awarded an almost deafening encore. He responded with "Eileen Allanah," the whole assembly joining in the chorus in true Yorkshire style, the effect being well-nigh magical.

CAGE BIRDS prizes for the amateurs of Yorkshire were next presented by Mr. Sunderland, who expressed regret that Mr. Carl had been unable to attend to present to the successful fanciers the valuable prizes he had so generously given. In these competitions several competitors had been fortunate enough to win more than one special, and by the kind permission of the donor, had been allowed to consolidate them into one valuable prize. Mr. H. H. Towers secured no less than three first prizes, attaining premier honours in the Yorkshire Union, Y.C.C., and C.M.Y.C.C., and also 10s. in the weekly cash prizes. He put them all into a splendid, massive tea urn. Messrs. P. Drake and Son won 2nd C.M.Y.C.C., 2nd Yorkshire Union, and tied for 3rd place in the Y.C.C., their prizes being a pair of silver vases and a pair of silver photo frames. Messrs. Shaw Bros. won 3rd Y.U., tied for 3rd Y.C.C., and received two cruets, one for each partner.

Useful for the Secretary.

Mr. J. Mottram secured first place in the amateurs of the open Norwich Plainhead Club, his choice of prize being a nickel silver teapot. Messrs. Greenwood and Pickles came in second, and received a pair of photo frames. Mr. O. Mitchell was placed third, and was handed a very useful article for a secretary—a writing desk—Mr. Sunderland complimenting him on his choice, and hoping that he would long use it for the benefit of the O.N.P.C. as its secretary. Mr. J. Robertshaw won second in the Y.C.C., his prize being a splendid china tea service. In the British section, Mr. T. H. Inman came out at the top of the tree, and was presented with a very handsome walnut table; 2nd, Mr. B. H. Wilson, timepiece, a lovely prize; 3rd, Mr. J. Isherwood, who is preparing for a rainy day, and also providing himself (in anticipation of first prize next year) with useful information, for he chose an umbrella and CAGE BIRDS book on "Aviaries"—wise man. The various cash prizes were also paid out to the respective winners (as per report of the Yorkshire Union in CAGE BIRDS, February 20th).

The Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C.

Mr. Riley now contributed another comic song, to the entire satisfaction of all. Mr. Stafford sang, "Aunie Laurie," and was again loudly applauded. The prizes of the C.M.Y.C.C. were then presented by their worthy president, Mr. Gledhill. Champion section, open: Ogden Bros. here again secured first place, A. Cooper being second, R. Sutcliffe and Son third, J. Wilcock fourth, and for fifth and sixth prizes Messrs. A. Jowett and H. H. Towers tied. Mr. J. W. Ramsden's colour food specials:—Open section, Ogden Bros.; novice section, P. Drake and Son. Novice competitions:—P. Drake and Son were placed first, F. Fawcett second, A. Frankland third, F. Gelder fourth. The president, Mr. Gledhill, made a few interesting observations on the progress made by the club, stating that it was the club in which absolutely the best value was given for money (and this is quite true), practically the whole of the amount received in subscriptions being given away in prizes.

Mr. W. Northrop now occupied the attention of the company by his fine singing, and Mr. Bennett also fairly excelled in the rendering of his song, both receiving a great ovation.

Mr. Sunderland here read a telegram from Mr. F. Carl, in which he regretted not being present, but hoped the company assembled were enjoying themselves. He also stated that he was willing to repeat the offer of prizes for the "amateurs of Yorkshire," if such were accepted. The reply was ringing cheers for CAGE BIRDS and Mr. Carl, and it was put to the company that Mr. Carl's generous offer be accepted, and that the best thanks of those assembled be sent to him. This was carried unanimously, amid further cheers.

Mr. Samuel Dean, the secretary of the Yorkshire Union, proposed a vote of thanks to the many donors of special prizes, etc. This was seconded by Mr. F. Hammond, who also dwelt upon a working arrangement with the Cage Bird Union, and expressed sorrow that so far it had been a failure, but he hoped it would in the near future be an accomplished fact.—Mr. Ramsden responded on behalf of the donors, thanking all present for the vote of thanks accorded to them, and assuring them that it gave the greatest pleasure to give where that which was given was so very heartily received. Mr. Sunderland here took the opportunity to present to the company the future secretary of the Yorkshire Union, Mr. H. Hill, the energetic secretary of the Bradford East Cage Bird Society. He called upon Mr. Hill to present to Mr. G. Bray the Rose Bowl offered for competition by his society for the best unflighted Yorkshire exhibited by its breeder at their annual show.

Mr. Sunderland announced that Mr. J. W. Ramsden had promised a special for the ladies—a tea service, for those who assist their husbands in the management of the bird rooms, conditions to be published later. So read your CAGE BIRDS, ladies, and look out for the terms. You all know that Mr. Ramsden will give one worth winning. Mr. Ramsden also promised to repeat the specials given to the various clubs, and extended them also to the O.N.P.C. (for which they were duly and truly thankful), and the thanks of all went out to him in loud applause.

Mr. R. Halliday proposed, and Mr. H. Hill seconded, a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Sunderland for his very able and efficient services as chairman. This was carried, amid great acclamation.

Amongst the visitors to the dinner we noticed Mr. and Mrs. D. Sunderland, Mr. J. W. Ramsden, Mr. and Mrs. F. Hammond, Mr. and Mrs. H. Simonett, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Towers, Mr. and Mrs. P. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Isherwood, Mr. and Mrs. J. Townend, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilcock, Mr. and Mrs. P. Drake, Mr. and Mrs. H. Dobson, Messrs. W. Mundell, H. W. Battye, O. Mitchell, W. A. Cowgill, W. R. Myers, A. Gill, J. S. Clarkson, A. Haigh, J. Mann, H. Kellet, F. Benn, M. Barraclough, A. Morley, A. Greenwood, M. Broadley, E. Clegg, E. W. Johnson, J. Crowther, A. Cooper, R. Garnett, E. B. ## COKERNUT NESTS.

Fairy tales are all right for children, but CAGE BIRDS, "Feathered World," "Poultry," and "Exchange and Mart" have individually advised their readers to employ my "Improved Secure" husks, and they certainly don't tell their correspondents any fairy tales. I am the importer, and wager £50 that I have sold more wired husks than any other man living. Now, has any wholesale man or merchant sufficient British pluck to take this on? if not, stand down. Don't be gulled into ordering before you want them: it's a fairy tale, and don't commence breeding while this cold weather is on. Very large stock the year round. I supply the principal private parks, public parks, Zoological Gardens, and largest dealers and breeders, and it's no fairy tale either. Breeding husks are my speciality. One quality—the best. You have the benefit of 18 years' breeding experience. I lead—follow who can. I don't keep a shop. My "Improved Secure" husks are 4/6 dozen; smaller quantities, 5d. each. Few joiner-made Cockatiel nests, 1/6 each.—Harper, Husk Importer, Wolverhampton.

HARRY ALLEN.

HAS 5,000 NEW BOOKS CALLED the "sure guide for contest singers." Owing to the many letters that have been sent to me from different parts how they sing at contests, I have made up my mind to publish a new book. It gives the correct rules of the Linnet Club, also states how they sing at contests, and how they hang their birds, and follow in turns; it gives the correct time for quality and time singing; this will enlighten every purchaser. My book of secrets is also printed in this book, and how to save Goldfinches and Greypates from dying when freshcaught. Also how to train Larks for contests, and what to feed them on, and how to get them fit in a very short time. Now, all the members of Linnet clubs should send for one of these at once, these are the same rules as I won all my contests with, which are the finest rules in the world. The price of this book is the small fee of 9d. Gentlemen, I have the following for sale:—House-moulted Linnets, as straight as arrows, and will pick out of your finger, will sing face to face with any bird, can win, 10/6 each; very large, steady muling Linnets, 2/6. ## IF YOU MULTIPLY

my prices by two, you get nearer the real value of my birds. The reason for this is that I import them direct, and by taking very large quantities every week for spot cash, am enabled to retail them at prices which ordinary retailers cannot touch. For years past I have asked all intending purchasers to have a Roller from me on a week's trial, and compare it with one from elsewhere at a higher price than mine, test them side by side for a week, and if my bird is not far superior, to return it, and I would refund the whole of their money. This offer has repeatedly been taken up, and I frequently receive letters from purchasers saying that my Rollers have beaten birds costing twice, and even three times the amount of money I charge. I claim to be the largest retailer of Rollers in United Kingdom, and only importer of Hans Weber Leipzig Rollers, and this enormous trade has been built up solely by the merits of the birds. At present moment I have 1,250 Leipzig Rollers in stock, all 1908 birds, and cocks in full song, day and gas light, with long, hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, waterbubble runs, soft roulades, piccolo trills, jug-jug of Nightingale, deep bass rolls, bell, harp, and flute notes, etc., etc., and guaranteed entirely free from Titlark or other objectionable notes whatever. Price, 6/6, 7/6 each. Special Bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, 10/- and 12/6 each. Pure Roller hens, 5/- each, 5/- couple. I have also just received my last consignment of the season of the real Seifert contest Rollers. Price, cocks, 15/-, 17/6 and 21/- each. Seifert hens, 4/- each. These are not merely Seifert because I call them so, but I guarantee them to be of the original "Seifert" blood, and can produce my invoice as proof, if necessary. I only have a limited quantity, so order early, please. Also in stock, 750 real Hartz cocks, every bird in full, loud, free song, price 4/6 each, seven for 28/-. Hartz hens, 2/- each, two 3/6, six 10/-, or 18/- dozen. Please notice some of the testimonials given below, give you an idea of the quality of these Hartz cocks. Singing box cages 1/-, 1/2, 1/4, 1/6, 1/9 and 2/- each. Special Roller song cabinets, with folding doors, 2/6 each. Notice dates of following unsolicited letters, all in same strain as those published by me for years past. They tell you why my Leipzig Rollers lead the way, and cannot be approached by others. A most successful meeting was held on March 6th, and after the meeting a washing exhibition was given by the following: Messrs. G. Thompson, B. Cowell, L. C. Casey, H. Bleazard, and J. Pownall, which was very interesting. A lot of good information and experience was gained by the younger members. A few more such meetings should bring this society to its old strength. Great interest was shown, and the discussion lasted until 10 o'clock, when a most enjoyable evening was brought to a close.—L. BOOTH, Hon. Secretary.

MAESTEG AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

DARVEL O.S.

General meeting held March 6th, Councillor J. M. Cleland, president, presiding. Last year's office-bearers were all re-elected, and a good number added to the committee. It was agreed to hold Open Show on November 6th. There being a good balance in hand, and with the view of adding some new members, it was agreed to reduce the membership fee from 2s. 6d. to 2s. The question of holding monthly lectures was considered; also that of holding members' monthly shows. Agreed that these be discussed fully at next general meeting, to be held April 17th.—J. ROBERTSON, JUN., Secretary.

WOOD GREEN AND DIS. F. & F.S.

The first general meeting of the above society was held on March 9th at headquarters, 165, High-road. We had a splendid gathering; a number of new members were added to our list. There is every sign of this being a very successful society. Rules were passed, and the officers elected for the year, and arrangements are being made to make our meeting nights interesting to our members. At the next meeting we shall have a lecture on the "Breeding and Management of Canaries" by a well-known fancier, when anyone interested will be welcome. Due notice of same will be given.—T. CALLEGARI, Hon. Sec., 17, Gladstone-avenue, Wood Green.

STRATFORD AND E. LONDON F.S.

Adjourned annual meeting, held at headquarters, March 11th. The late secretary (who was not at the meeting) sent a statement of accounts for 1908. The statement showed a deficit on the year's working of £16. The new committee, secretary, etc., were elected. With the loyal help of members they hope to soon clear off the deficit, and again make the society foremost in East London, as in the past. There will be a meeting on March 25th, at Workman's Hall. The challenge cup will then be on view. Members who are in the running for points, medals, etc., must send details of points to the new secretary. Also all who have ticket money for annual show, will they kindly forward same at once along with all unsold tickets, so that books can be cleared. Many subscriptions for 1908 are still outstanding, which I shall be glad to receive at once. All communications to be sent to me at 16, James Place, Poplar, E. W. MAXEY, hon. secretary.

PENZANCE AND DISTRICT F.A.

The Hon. Treasurer read the balance-sheet, which showed receipts of £84 6s. 8d., including a balance from last year of £6 11s. 10d., and expenditure of £63 4s. 1d., leaving a balance in hand of £16 2s. 7d. Secretary) handed in his resignation, but was asked to reconsider his decision, and he accepted on conditions; Hon. Auditor, Mr. T. H. L. Perry, re-elected; Hon. Auctioneer, Mr. A. W. Robinson; Cage Bird Committee, Messrs. W. C. Bodinnac, W. Fox, C. Hosking, T. Treganowen, S. O. Watkins, R. Gendull, J. Caine, W. Warren, F. Richard, and W. H. Bolton. Bodinnan was appointed delegate. The Hon. Secretary was requested to write to some well-known judges for the show. ## NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held in the usual place on March 4th, Mr. Currah presiding. The following gentlemen were elected to membership, viz., Messrs. J. Smith (Byker), R. Tight, Mather, and Longstaff (Gateshead), Trowhitt (Shotley Bridge), C. Campbell (Heaton), Markwell (Wallsend), A. Fryer (Newcastle), and G. Dohinson (Seaton Delavel). The principal business was the lecture delivered by Mr. James Shepherd on "Preparing for and Treatment During the Breeding Season." There were over fifty members present to hear Mr. Shepherd's lecture, he being a most able and adept speaker. After the discussion, Mr. MacPartling gave a brief account of his visit to the Crystal Palace Show. The members were unanimous in electing him to the committee. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Shepherd and to our chairman brought a pleasant evening to a close. —CURRY AND HUTCHINSON, Hon. Secs.

SOUTH-WEST LONDON O.B.S.

Special general meeting held at the Plough Hotel, Clapham Junction, on March 4th. Mr. Harris was in the chair. The balance-sheet was read and passed, showing a nice little sum to the good. Mr. Lilley referred to the good the club had done in the past year. After paying all expenses the society has £8 7s. 3½d. in hand. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the secretary, and likewise the auditors, Messrs. Tate and Burgess. The chairman, taking Mr. Lilley by surprise, presented him with a handsome plated tea and coffee service, generously subscribed for by the members in recognition of his valuable services to the club as secretary. He spoke of the way he came amongst us, and steered our ship in the right direction. Mr. Lilley, in response, said he did not know what he had done to deserve such a kindness. He had only done his duty, and hoped he would be spared for many years to continue in the same. Letters were read from Mr. Mason, of Richmond, and Mr. Dales, of Northampton (who, the members were pleased to hear, has taken up birds again), congratulating him (Mr. Lilley) on his long service. A hearty vote of thanks to the chairman brought one of the pleasantest of evenings to a close, and we all went home in the snow.

ORMSKIRK C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held at headquarters, Buck i' th' Vine Hotel, on March 1st. There was a good attendance. Officials for the ensuing year were appointed as follows:—Chairman, Mr. E. A. Walker; Vice-Chairman, Mr. W. Davenport; Treasurer, Mr. W. Moss (re-elected); Secretary, Mr. T. H. Tiffen (re-elected); Committee: Whole of the members; Auditors, Messrs. P. Mawdsley and P. Wilkinson (re-elected). The Chairman and Vice-Chairman thanked the members for promoting them to their respective chairs, and promised to do their best for the benefit of the Society. Mr. Walker also promised a silver medal for most points at the November show. Rules were revised and show dates fixed, the Young Bird Show on July 10th, and the Old Birds on November 27th. Open classes for the latter show were discussed, but eventually left over. By an overwhelming majority it was decided that in future points gained in gift classes do not count for points specials, whereupon one member promptly withdrew his name from the gift class, and the late Chairman, to supplement that, kindly offered two birds for the gift class at the November show. Previous to the election of officers, the Secretary wished to be relieved of his position, but the members would not hear of it, and from what transpired the official in question will not be classed as an "out-of-work" for some time to come.—T. H. TIFFEN, Hon. Sec.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Annual general meeting held at Ye Old Boar's Head, Manchester, on March 6th. The attendance was not as large as expected, but the bad weather probably accounted for this. However, fanciers from Oldham, Glossop, Middleton, Hazel Grove, etc., turned up, and a large amount of business was done. Messrs. Hampshire and Oldham acted as auditors, and expressed themselves well pleased with the balance-sheet, and with the general way in which things had been conducted. Officers were appointed for 1909, and few changes were made. Mr. John Garner was again appointed president; Messrs. Jno. Dewsnap, Barker Clegg, Jos. Hampshire, and Jno. Vickers vice-presidents; and Messrs. Wm. Lawton, W. P. Barnes, A. C. Dandie, J. Dickinson, J. J. Brookes, H. Oliver, and Jos. Oldham, committee; auditors, Messrs. Jos. Hampshire and Jos. Oldham; treasurer, Mr. Jno. Swalwell; and secretary, Mr. John Rukin, 44, Hall Carr Road, Rawtenstall, Lancashire. We made two new members in Mr. W. Dewsnap (Glossop) and Mr. Goodall (St. Helens), and received promises of several more for next meeting. A short discussion took place regarding the unsatisfactory response of novices, both in Lancashires and Lizards, and it was proposed to go into the matter thoroughly at next meeting, which will be held in Manchester, at Ye Old Boar's Head, on April 3rd, and try and devise some scheme. The two varieties we specialize in are very much alive, and have brighter prospects; it behoves fanciers to join our society, and help push the Lancashire and Lizard to where they ought to be—bang at the front. All fanciers are welcome to attend our next meeting, when cups and medals won during 1908 and 1909 will be presented. Will any intending new members kindly send on their names and addresses, and I will propose them, and so enable them to be in plenty of time to compete for the new season's cups and medals.—JOHN RUKIN

CANNOCK AND DISTRICT C.B.S

Second meeting of cage bird fanciers held in the old Mission Room, Heath Hayes, on March 2nd, and, in spite of a heavy downfall of snow, we had a good attendaance, and were able to get through a considerable amount of business. We enrolled three new members, namely, Messrs. Horobin, E. Fisher, and A. Sheppard. It was decided that members, if possible, should at our next meeting bring one or more birds for discussion upon regarding their merits for breeding purposes, etc. Copies of CAGE BIRDS were distributed to members to deliver to likely members, some being sent to institute for its members, which may induce some of them to take an interest in the Fancy.—ALF. TROMAN, Hon. Sec.

PRESTON O.S.

Monthly meeting held at the Tokio Cafe, March 4th. It was decided to hold annual Open Show on November 12th and 13th. A discussion arose as to the advisability of still remaining affiliated to the C.B.U., we having lost several members through Rule 17, which we consider most unfair. It was generally considered a case of being beaten with one's own stick. However, after a few remarks by the Chairman (Mr. Dent) it was decided to again send on the subscriptions. Mr. Dent later gave us a paper on the Norwich Plainhead and breeding, which was greatly appreciated, especially by the novices. Several stiff questions were put, but Thomas was not to be "had." A vote of thanks to him brought a pleasant evening to a close.—ROBT. TAYLOR, Sec.

TONG AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

First annual dinner and presentation of prizes, held March 9th, at the Holme Lane Hotel. Nearly fifty members, with their wives and friends, sat down to an excellent tare, provided by Mr. and Mrs. Blakey. The rest of the evening was spent in listening to vocal music. Mr. T. Ogden was in the chair. Mr. H. H. Towers (Shipley) presented the prizes:—1st, gold medal, Mr. H. H. Clarke; 2nd, gold medal, F. Fawcett; 3rd, medal, J. W. Bedforth; and six other specials to Messrs. A. Gledhill, B. Worsman and Co., H. Shaw, O. Atkinson, A. Tidswell, and W. Dawson. Mr. H. H. Towers promised a special for each forthcoming members' show, and there are eight for this season. He was heartily thanked for his kindness. I hear, by the bye, he has got a few of our members to join the C.M.Y.C.C. A vote of thanks to Mr. H. H. Towers for presenting the prizes, and also to the artistes and all who helped to make the gathering a success, was passed. This is the first gathering of its kind we have had, and I feel sure it will not be the last. A vote of sympathy was passed by the gathering to be sent to Mr. H. Pacey, a member. He is suffering from appendicitis, and is, we hear, progressing favourably.—J. SMITH, secretary.

GATESHEAD AND DIST. C.B.S.

Usual meeting held at headquarters, Lockhart's Cafe, on March 10th, presided over by the chairman, Mr. T. Almond. The balance-sheet was gone into, and it was found that a printer's error had occurred, and it was agreed to let the matter stand over till next meeting. We enrolled Mr. A. Wood as a vice-president. No less than twenty new members were proposed and elected; it is very pleasing to the new secretaries to see so many of the old members returning to the ranks of the palace of the North. The following well-known breeders and exhibitors were enrolled as members:—Messrs. F. Hawkins, R. Lowery, Holden and Todd, J. Carmichael, E. Atkinson, G. Dowsie, D. Wood, P. Riddle, R. Ridley, W. R. Smith, J. Hunt, T. Burns, and J. Goodman (all of Gateshead), Mr. Mackenzie (Low Fell), Messrs. Bertram and Story, and A. Hermitson (Newcastle), Mr. A. Walker (Sunderland), and Mr. A. McGurk (Dipton). The preliminary arrangements for the election of judges for annual show to be held on December 10th and 11th were proceeded with. The secretary was instructed to write the following gentlemen, who were nominated:—Messrs. J. Robson, J. F. Dewar, J. Dixon, and T. Taylor. A deal of discussion took place over the judge for the Yorkshire section, seven well-known judges being proposed; it was also decided to let this matter also stand over till next meeting. Several gentlemen have promised us lectures, and washing exhibitions, and we are looking forward to spending some pleasant and happy hours in the near future.—G. BUCK and H. JOHNSON, Hon. Secs.

WEST OF SCOTLAND CLUB.

The West of Scotland N. and B.F.C.M.B. and F.B.A., held usual meeting in Nelson's Temperance Hotel, 83, Ingram-street, Glasgow, President, C. Hunter in the chair. Classes were arranged for the annual show as follows: Class 1, clear or ticked yellow cock; 2, ditto hen; 3, clear or ticked buff cock; 4 ditto hen; 5, varieg. yellow cock; 6, ditto hen; 7, varieg. buff cock; 8, ditto hen; 9, Crested cock; 10, ditto hen; 11, Crest-bred cock; 12, ditto hen; 13, clear or ticked yellow Border cock; 14, ditto hen; 15, clear or ticked buff cock; 16, ditto hen; 17, unevenly marked or varieg. yellow cock or hen; 18, unevenly marked or variegated buff; and 19, green or Cinnamon. These classes are for young birds bred, reared and moulted by exhibitor, and the birds competing for cups must be nominated. Two classes have been added for Yorkshires, a class for Siskin, and one for Redpoll or Twite; also two selling classes of 15/- and 7/6. Classes for young Mules and Hybrids, and all old bird and British bird classes will remain as in former years. The judges will be nominated at next meeting. Three new members were enrolled, and Mr. J. Young has agreed to open a discussion on Crest Breeding at next meeting. Membership is now open to all members of Specialist Clubs, etc., and the secretary will be pleased to hear from any fanciers wishing to join.—GEO. SMART, Hon, Secretary, Carmyle-by-Glasgow.

LONDON FEDERATION OF C.B.S

A meeting of the Council was held on March 11th at the "Feathers," Great Chapel-street, Westminster. Present: Messrs. H. E. Tringham (chairman), R. L. Crisp, W. H. Mugford, J. Dewhurst, ex-officio members; H. W. Cook and J. T. Hammond (Poplar and District C.B.S.), F. W. Thorpe and R. J. Pretty (London and Counties O.S.), J. Carson (Wimbledon and District C.B.S.), H. T. Newnham (Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S.), R. P. Harper (North London C.B.A.), C. H. Cooper (Leyton and District C.B.A.), H. Churchard and J. Turner (West London F.A.), T. Miller and F. Boxall (London C.B.A.), E. S. Lugg (Lewisham and District C.B.S.), A. Cunningham (Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S.), J. C. Birch and W. J. Creamer (Queen's Park and District C.B.A.), W. Honeysett (Battersea and District C.B.A.), and P. Adamthwaite, the Hon. Sec.

Mr. W. H. Mugford reported that in accordance with the instructions received at the last meeting he had taken the opinion of both solicitor and counsel on the question of Mr. Simpson's claim against the L. and N.W. Railway. The sub-committee appointed by the Council now recommended that the Council do not proceed with the case. Mr. Simpson had practically no claim against the railway company. Although it would be possible to get a verdict in the Federation's favour, the railway company would not let the case remain there. It would be better that Mr. Simpson accept the five shillings offered by the company, plus the amount of carriage paid by him. On the motion of Mr. Cook, seconded by Mr. Hammond, it was decided that the sub-committee's report be accepted.

Mr. Crisp, in moving "That the Council consider the best means for the formulating of a scheme whereby affiliated members may be insured against loss of birds in transit and other causes," said that it was his desire that every unit of the Federation should have some interest in it. The scheme he suggested, would, he thought, help to cement the members together. The present conditions of railway insurance were very unsatisfactory. (Hear, hear.) They had to pay 1½ per cent.—that was, threepence in the pound—if they wished to insure birds on railway journeys, but before they could lay claim to compensation they had to prove direct negligence on the part of the railway company concerned, which was a difficult matter. His scheme obviated this difficulty. Another advantage was that, whereas under present conditions they could not insure birds against loss or damage on the return journey, they would then be able to. His idea was that members should have the opportunity of purchasing books containing (say) six sheets of the value of £1 apiece; so that when a member dispatched a bird he could state on the sheet its destination (as regards the town only), and should also make a declaration that the bird is in a perfect state of health to the best of his belief. He suggested that £5 for any one bird be the limit for which the Federation be held responsible in the first year. He also suggested that the charge for insurance be 2d. instead of 3d. He would even go further and suggest that the Federation insure birds against death or theft at shows, so far as Canaries and hard-billed British birds were concerned. Mr. Honeysett said he thought the levying of an annual subscription of one shilling per member would meet the requirements of the scheme.—Mr. Crisp: I think that would be ample. Allowing for duplications, etc., we may quite easily put the membership at 500, and if 500 paid the shilling there would be £25—ample to carry the Federation over one year. Mr. Honeysett amplified his suggestion by stating that if a member did not care to pay the shilling he need not; but, of course, he would not benefit under the scheme.—It was suggested that the idea be submitted to the respective societies, but it was ultimately agreed, on the motion of Mr. Cook, seconded by Mr. Cooper, that a sub-committee be formed to draw up a scheme of insurance. Messrs. Harper, Lugg, Birch, and Boxall were appointed to the committee, together with the ex-officio members.—Mr. Crisp afterwards stated that as there seemed to be some apprehension as to the working of the scheme on account of lack of funds, several gentlemen were prepared to guarantee the working of the scheme for the first year provided 400 tickets could be sold between them. (Applause.)

In moving "That the Council consider the question of a novice or amateur returning to such classes after having won in championship classes provided they have not qualified for the latter by the required number of firsts in either of the former," Mr. Crisp stated that some fanciers during the past season showed at certain exhibitions as champions and at others afterwards as amateurs. This was not, he said, according to the spirit of the rules laid down. (Hear, hear.) Once a fancier had passed the novitiate stage, he should not be allowed to go back to it.—On the motion of Mr. Cooper, seconded by Mr. Turner, it was agreed "That any member of the Federation having won in the champion classes shall not be allowed to return to the amateur or novice classes."

Mr. Honeysett moved 'That the Federation grant medals for competition," but there being no seconder the matter fell through.

Mr. Cooper, in moving "That the Council discuss the advisability of holding a Federation show," stated that the holding of a show would tend to bring the affiliated societies nearer together. It certainly was the wish of the society he represented. —Mr. Crisp said he thought it would be excellent if the necessary money were forthcoming. (Laughter.) If this difficulty could be got over, or if the suggested show could be held in conjunction with another in some way, he would be prepared to support the idea. It was a fact that about 80 per cent. of the shows of last season resulted in losses. (Hear, hear.) He did not think it would be possible to run a show successfully even on a sliding scale, as Mr. Harper had already suggested. Mr. Adamthwaite said that as their secretary he would like to see a show run, and he saw no reason why they should not run one. They did not want to make money over it—(laughter)—they only wanted to make it pay its way. Besides, he looked upon the event as a social one, and as something that would bring the societies closer together. The only thing was that they would not get him to run it. (Laughter.)—Mr. Thorpe said he thought Mr. Adamthwaite's last remark from one point of view a very good one. He (the secretary) had spoken as a young and enthusiastic fancier, but after a few more years in the Fancy he would probably tell a different tale. (Laughter.) If all fanciers would combine and show a similar enthusiasm the thing would be done; but, alas! he had had his hopes too often dashed.—Mr. Turner said he thought they had better wait a year. (Hear, hear.)—Mr. Mugford said he did not think Mr. Adamthwaite really knew what it cost to run a show. The working expenses of the last Horticultural Hall Show, he might be surprised to know, were no less than £120.—Mr. Adamthwaite stated that the rent of the Horticultural Hall was £40, but he knew of a hall within three minutes' walk of Baker-street Station which was in every way a suitable one, and which could be rented for a week at less than £10. (Chorus: "Oh," and "Name.") I will undertake to get it if it is wanted. (Applause.)—Mr. Cooper pointed out that they were not a single society, but nineteen strong. (Hear, hear.)—Mr. Adamthwaite added that this was not an ordinary show, but practically a members' show, and they would find that four out of every six members' shows paid well.—This statement was contradicted by several.—Mr. Boxall having asked where the money for running the show was to come from, Mr. Adamthwaite proceeded to estimate both the working expenses and the income, but some laughter was caused when it was suddenly found that he had forgotten to take into account the postage bill. Still, his estimate of income, he said, was a very low one, and he felt confident of success.—Mr. Cooper's motion for the holding of an open show, seconded by Mr. Lugg, received 6 votes for, and 13 against, and it was declared lost.

Mr. Honeysett stated that it had been pointed out to him that the Federation were running in opposition to the Cage Bird Union, and that perhaps a few remarks by the chairman would satisfy those who were under that impression.—Mr. H. E. Tringham, in reply, said he could only repeat that they were not in any sense antagonistic to the C.B.U. The Federation had established themselves to deal with members' cases only in the London area without appealing to the senior and superior union, and they had justified their existence. (Applause.)—Mr. Crisp said he thought they might ask the C.B.U., and perhaps also the Yorkshire Union, to uphold the Federation's disqualifications, the Federation on their part giving the same undertaking with regard to these Union's disqualifications. (Hear, hear.)—Messrs. Pretty and Thorpe endorsed the opinion, and it was decided that the secretary write to each of the bodies concerned.—Mr. Crisp gave notice of motion that a rule he formulated dealing with defaulting committees. The questions of joining with the C.B.U. and the Y.U. in appealing for reduced railway fares and of another insurance scheme were also mentioned, after which the meeting closed.

HALIFAX O.S.

Annual general meeting, held March 13th, at the Griffin Hotel. There was a good attendance. The balance-sheet was read, and showed a cash balance of £42 15s. 0½d. in favour of the society. During the meeting seven new members were made. The following were elected officers for 1909:—President, Mr. A. Ross; vice-presidents, Messrs. F. Lee, H. W. Walsh, and W. Speak; delegates to Yorkshire Union, Messrs. H. W. Walsh, H. Whitaker, and F. Townsend; secretary, Mr. J. F. Thackray, 82, St. Augustine's Terrace; assistant secretary, Mr. H. Whitaker; auditors, Messrs. J. Mottram and H. Lord; stewards, Messrs. S. Haigh, A. Lloyd, and H. Clegg; sub-committee, Messrs. S. Haigh, J. Mottram, H. W. Walsh, H. Lord, F. Lee, H. Clegg, and F. ## SCOTTISH NORWICH P.C.

Annual general meeting held at 142, High-street, Edinburgh, on March 13th, Mr. Winter (president) presiding over a full meeting. The committee having recommended that the secretary be paid an honorarium for his services, it was ultimately agreed that the secretary be paid a salary of £2 yearly, plus out-of-pocket expenses. The suspension of a club member by the Scottish British Bird Club for alleged trimming and faking was raised by a member, and after consideration it was decided to take no action, as the member in question had not committed any offence against this club. The financial statement for 1908 was then considered and unanimously passed, the club being in a very satisfactory condition. The president's prize was handed over to the winner, Mr. A. Chalmers (Kirkintilloch). The winner of the novice prize, Mr. D. S. Gowans (Glasgow), the secretary, had intimated, already had his prize handed over. Mr. Malcolmson moved that the present show cage be discarded, and the old bow-fronted one, with certain alterations, adopted, but he found no seconder, and the motion therefore dropped. Mr. McFarlane moved that the club adopt two show cages, the one at present in use, and the bow-fronted one; this was seconded by Mr. Campbell. Mr. Dunn moved, and Mr. Ferguson seconded, the previous question, and after letters on same subject were read from Messrs. Watson (Kilmarnock) and Hector (Aberdeen), a long discussion ensued, the result of the vote being that the previous question was carried by 16 votes to 7. Mr. McFarlane's motion that the committee be composed of two members of the club connected with societies obtaining the club's patronage did not find a seconder, and was also dropped. Mr. Aitchison's motion that the committee be composed of six members from the West, six from the East and South, and six from the North of Scotland, was seconded by Mr. Dandie, and was carried by a large majority. Mr. Aitchison's motion that no party be allowed a vote in the club management until he had been a member for eighteen months fell through for want of a seconder. Result of voting for office-bearers for 1909:—Committee, Messrs. J. Young 30, G. Scaife 29, A. McFarlane 28, A. Roberts 24, J. Adams 23, J. McLay 24, W. Jaffrey 23, J. Winter 23, R. B. Jarvie 21, W. Roberts 18, G. Davidson 14, A. Malcolmson 13; auditors, J. Young 21, D. S. Gowans 15; scrutineers, A. Roberts 27, J. Young 15; secretary and treasurer, J. Brown 41. Winners of specials during 1908:—President's prize, A. Chalmers, 225 points; next highest, J. Adams, 198 points; novice points; next highest, A. prize, D. S. Gowans, 44 points; next highest, A. Henderson, 30 points; gold medals for best unflighted cock and best unflighted hen at club show, A. Watson and S. Buglass; silver medals were won by A. McFarlane, J. Winter, J. Holmes, J. Smeaton, R. Jeffrey, G. Scaife, A. Chalmers, R. Martin, G. Davidson, J. Adams, J. Calderwood, A. Watson, A. Miller, J. Ferguson, G. Mitchell, W. Clubb. Mr. Miller, J. Ferguson, G. Mitchell, W. Clubb. Mr. Young having gained the highest number of votes was duly elect president for the current year. Meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman.—J. BROWN, Sec.

I look with interest for CAGE BIRDS every Friday, and find it very instructive. I may say that I used to take ——, but a fancier gave me your paper to look at, and I liked it so much that I ordered it at once from my newsagent in preference.—W. TAYLOR (Walley Range).

We cordially invite fanciers and friends to any of our meetings, which are held on the second and fourth Mondays in each month, writes Mr. H. Clayton, hon. secretary of the Pendleton and Salford O.S. Mr. Barker Clegg will lecture on the Goldfinch and Linnet on March 22nd, at 8 p.m.

The Hayle and Dis. F.A., writes Mr. H. Ware, the hon. general secretary, are holding their sixth open show on November 17th and 18th. Three new secretaries were elected at our last meeting, and with most of the old management we hope to have the finest show in the West

The members of the Hull Cage Bird Society are highly pleased, we hear, at the honour done to one of the members, Mr. Geo. Harland, in being elected to judge the open show of the Norwich Plainhead Club of Ireland. This is only the second show the Norwich Club has held, and Mr. Harland judged the first also.

About a month ago, chiefly out of curiosity, I bought a copy of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL at a railway bookstall. After perusing same I found myself so interested that I began taking in CAGE BIRDS weekly, with the result that I am now going to make a start in the Fancy.—E. CARLILL (Blackhill, Co. Durham).

That enterprising specialist, Mr. W. Rudd, of Norwich, has forwarded us correspondence which shows that he has just completed the purchase of the whole stock of Roller Canaries belonging to one of our largest and best-known English breeders. They are said to be well-bred, well-trained, hardy birds, with many choice specimens amongst them, and all are offered for sale to Mr. Rudd's customers.

A syllabus of the members' first feather and second feather shows, to be held in connection with the Tong and Dis. C.B.S., has been issued. The shows are to be held at the Holme Lane Hotel, Tong Street, Dudley Hill. The secretary is Mr. J. Smith, 7, Rose Terrace, Tong Street, Bradford.

I am sorry to have to inform your readers, especially Northern fanciers, writes Mr. J. W. Dixon (Blaydon), of the death of Mr. J. Hands' (Ryton), crestbred hen. She was a bird that had been a great credit to Mr. Hands, for she generally stood at the top, and was own sister to and bred in the same nest as his winning grey crest.

In perusing my ANNUAL, writes Mr. Nimmo (Everton), I notice in the list of chief winners in the Green section that my name appears twice. As I am the only person of that name who has exhibited Greens, I should thank you to make a note of same. I have removed from 79, Aubrey Street to 1a, Oakfield Road, Everton, Liverpool.

The first annual balance-sheet of the Ayr and Dis. C.B.C. shows a balance in hand of £1 17s. 7d., which, considering the payment of £1 2s. 4½d. for special prizes (the donors having withdrawn their offers), must be regarded as highly satisfactory, doing great credit to the secretary and treasurer, Mr. C. C. Irvine, and the other officials.

The judges appointed for the annual show of the Aberdeen O.S., on December 17th and 18th, writes Mr. J. Bryson, the hon. secretary, are: for Norwich, Mr. William Watson (Kilmarnock); for Crests, Cinnamons, Borders, and Yorks., Mr. John M'Lay (Kirkintilloch); and for Hybrids, British and Foreign Birds, Mr. James Livingstone (Bathgate).

Since we started the Pendlebury and Swinten Canary and British Bird Society, writes Mr. Alex. Donnelly, the secretary, the sale of CAGE BIRDS round this district through the reports of our meetings that you have published has greatly increased. Newsagents are "sold out" each week at 8 p.m. on the Friday night. We hope you will go on increasing the circulation.

The Sandy Lane and Dis. C.B.A., writes Mr. B. Buckle, the secretary, are having a pleasant function on March 23rd, to congratulate their members, Messrs. Bailey and Swanger, on their splendid achievement in winning the cup outright. All the members, with their wives or sweethearts, have been invited, along with a few friends, to a supper and concert at headquarters, at 7 p.m.

I was most agreeably surprised to see my winning lightly variegated Norwich Canary depicted in so life-like a manner in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS. It does Mr. H. Norman great credit as an artist. Please thank him on my behalf for the part he has taken in reproducing such a picture as this. This was the first time the bird was shown. I hope that it will go on improving.—A. HUNT (Cardiff).

The 17th annual statement of accounts of the Bournemouth and Dis. C.B.A., a copy of which reaches us from the hon. secretaries, Messrs. Leech and Jones, discloses a creditable state of affairs, seeing that the deficit on the previous year's working (amounting to £6 10s.) has been reduced. It is to be hoped that in the current year the deficit will be finally removed. The prospects of the society are excellent.

The City and Suburban Association of Canary Breeders (who have now added "and British and Foreign Bird Fanciers" to their name), send their programme for 1909, and we find it a very interesting one, replete, as usual, with helpful lectures, and demonstrations of washing birds, etc.—something, in fact, for everyone. Fanciers desirous of joining should write the secretary, Mr. V. Wynn, 22, Park Lane, London, W.

The balance-sheet of the Scottish Norwich Plainhead Club for 1908 is an excellent one, the balance in hand, £2 12s. 7d., being an increase on that of the previous year, despite very thorough support of the shows with medals, etc. We note that the membership roll totals 129, a fact which must be very pleasing to the able secretary, Mr. J. Brown, and to his fellow-officials. The S.N.P.C. promises to be a big success, and deserves all support.

I have just received your Birthday Number, with the three coloured plates. To say that they are gems and a work of art would be putting it mildly; they are really beautiful, and should appeal to every fancier, I am sure. I intend to have them framed and preserved to adorn my birdroom, as I think they will be most suitable and add to its attractiveness in a great measure. I think the publishers of CAGE BIRDS are to be congratulated on their noble efforts to please their many patrons. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success, and many more Birthdays.—JOHN K. STOREY (St. John, New Brunswick).

A Lady Bird.

A young woman of Wisconsin, Miss Reina Wright, is said, by the "Manchester Evening Chronicle" to have mastered the language of birds. A natural love of all feathered creatures caused her to pass years in the woods studying their habits, and now she is said to be able to reproduce the notes of birds so perfectly as to deceive the birds themselves. On one occasion she visited a house where many Canaries were kept, and imitated their song. When she stopped the birds all sung in emulation, using every trill and roulade of which they were capable. Again Miss Wright sang, more loudly than before, and so the contest between the birds and their human imitator went on, till finally the birds lost heart and sat silent and sulky in corners of their cages. Miss Wright can outcrow the proudest chanticleer, and as for the wild birds, they will often come to her call and listen while she sings to them.

Very many thanks for the original sketch of my two young buff Yorkshires, which you portrayed in January. I need hardly say that Mr. Norman's splendid drawing was at once taken to the picture framer's. As mentioned before, the larger of the two birds went to a gentleman in Glasgow for a big figure, and I much regret to say that the bird has in some unaccountable manner injured one of his wings, which, according to the owner, will prevent his ever appearing on the show bench again. As I had confidently predicted a great future for this bird, I can assure you the news was a great disappointment to me. The smaller bird I still have, and put him down at our members' show in February, when he stood first and special for best bird in show, which makes his record two firsts and two specials for the only times out.—E. J. BANKS (Cardiff).

I look forward with keen interest to each issue of CAGE BIRDS, which I greatly enjoy reading. Every page of it is full of valuable information, both for the novice and the experienced fancier. Twelve months ago I knew practically nothing about Canary-keeping, but through interesting myself in the various topics of selecting, matching, breeding, and rearing, I have gained immense knowledge, especially so from the "Canary Queries," which I have studied with delight. This part of the paper itself is worth all the money that is charged for it. I intend setting together nine pairs this spring, including Scotch Fancies, Borders, Norwich (Plainhead and Crest), and Yorkshires, and they are all well-chosen birds. I am, therefore, looking forward to putting my knowledge of Canaries into practical operation, and with further assistance in hints from your paper, I hope to have a successful season.—J. MACFARLANE, hon. secretary Cowal O.S.

Southern Yorkshire C.C.

Will any member who has any proposition, or amendment to rules, to make, let me have same at once, so that they can be placed on agenda for annual meeting? I shall be greatly obliged if the members who have not paid their subscriptions for 1908 will do so at once to enable annual meeting to be convened at an early date.—J. W. RENNIE, hon. secretary.

Ravenous Ravens.

It was thought that Ravens had almost disappeared from the lowlands of Cumberland, but farmers on the Cumberland plain are complaining of the depredations of these fierce birds on their flocks. This week one agriculturist in the Wigton district caught a Raven in the act of pecking out the eyes of a few-days-old lamb, and on other farms young lambs have been found similarly mutilated. Another farmer speaks as to seeing one carry off a young chicken.

Good Company.

For the past three years a Robin has hibernated at Fleet (Lincolnshire) Rectory. When the cold weather arrives the bird takes up its abode in the house, roosting on top of a grandfather's clock, and taking its meals from off the table. If a crumb is thrown the Robin will hop to it and pick it up, and it is so tame that it will feed out of the hands of one of the maids, though it will not allow the other people in the rectory to catch it. It only spends its time in the house when the weather is cold, and directly the weather becomes warmer goes outside.

A Disclaimer.

Respecting Dr. O'Neal's case, only a few words in defence of myself, writes Mr. John Riseborough (Sunderland). As far as dressing birds for Dr. O'Neal, I have never handled a bird belonging to him, neither in his house or anywhere else. Where Mr. Weston had the impertinence to bring my name into the case I do not know. If Mr. Weston had been man enough to write to me, instead of writing all over the north, I would have satisfied him at once. But, as far as I know Dr. O'Neal, he has always been fair and square. If all our so-called judges were the same, we would not want any Cage Bird Union.

Early Swallows & Sand Martins.

Mrs. Bernard Hopkinson writes from Cambridge to "The Times":—"On March 3rd, between 11 and 11.45, I saw a flight of Swallows and Sand Martins. If I had seen a solitary specimen of either species I should have doubted the correctness of my observation, in spite of the fact that British birds have been my hobby for a number of years. But there were such a number that I could look from one to the other in amazement, confirming their identification. They flew so close to me that I could see the Sand Martins' bibs. I am anxious to know if anyone else has seen them, as, unfortunately, most people being at work during those hours, nobody here seems to have seen them."

Chapter XXVII.—My Painted Quails.

Always look out for opportunities, and nail them just as a sensible man nails a mosquito, the first time it settles near him. Of course, a fellow may get another chance, but the odds are that if he misses the first time he will lose a good deal of blood before he gets a second. Mindful of this, I eagerly seized my chance when one day some years ago I was offered a pair of Chinese Painted Quails.

You will always find it a safe rule to take a thing just as quick as it is offered—especially a bird. It is never easy to get one, except when you don't want it, but when you have to get one, and go after it with a gun, you'll find it as shy as an old Crow that every farmer in the county has had a shot at. For years I had been on the look out for something that I thought would be nice and easy to breed. I was tired of rearing Softbills, and felt I had earned a right to a little bit of ease. Quails seemed to offer just what I was looking for. They would lay eggs quite like chickens, sit on them, and save me all trouble. I should merely have to feed them two or three times a day, and they would do all the rest.

When, therefore, I saw a pair of Chinese Painted Quails offered for sale, I at once wrote off in hot haste to say I would have them. They were advertised as "thoroughly acclimatised and in perfect health and condition." I thought this looked all-right. I could not do wrong in buying them! Later on, I found I could.

Some days later the birds arrived, but the moment I turned them out of the travelling cage, I saw that something was very wrong with the hen, as she had a nasty way of heaving her shoulders, which I knew indicated lung trouble of long standing. I had been asked 21s. for the pair, and I thought I had got a bargain. I want to say right here that whenever anyone offers to let you in on the ground floor it's a pretty safe rule to take the elevator to the roof garden. I wish I had done so in this case.

That hen spoilt all one season, as she wouldn't die, and I constantly hoped she would get better as the weather got warmer. Of course, she did nothing of the kind. She merely lingered on, and then just when she ought to have been laying, died. I was the victim of too great trustfulness. If only I had had those Quails on approval, what trouble I should have been saved.

Now if you are going to take my word for some things you are going to save yourself a lot of trouble over one of these things, i.e., always see before you buy. There are some people who like trouble; it's no good speaking to such. It seems to afford some fellows a heap of satisfaction to pull the trigger for themselves, to see if the gun is loaded, and a lesson learned from the muzzle has the virtue of never being forgotten. If you are a fellow of that kind, you will always take birds on trust.

My next duty was to discover a new hen to supply the disconsolate widower. I remember many years ago that the late Mr. Pope, of Langshan fame, used to head his advertisements, "Remember the cock is half the battle." I have no doubt this is so; but what about the other half? It has been my experience that when a fellow has half a thing, he finds that it's the other half that would really come in handy. It was so in my case. Try as I could, I failed to discover a hen. In fact, Painted Quails seemed to have emigrated just when I most wanted them.

All that autumn I tried to replace my lost one, but in vain. Then one day in the spring my eye lighted on the following advertisement: "For sale, two hen Chinese Quails for sale, 25s. pair, bargain; no cocks." The advertisement might have been inspired by myself. I rushed to the post office and sent off a wire: "Will take both hens," so fearful was I that someone should step down before me. I don't suppose I need have run. Probably nobody else tried for them, and no doubt the owner smiled at my impetuosity.

In a few days the birds arrived, and I was delighted to see that they were beautifully plump, and their very sleek appearance told me that they were in perfect health. I at once introduced them to the disconsolate widower, and he brightened up wonderfully and seemed to take a new interest in life. And when later I entered the aviary he and one of the hens were squatting comfortably side by side, while the other hen was clearly out of it. For some days the pair wandered about the aviary, just like a pair of human lovers; and then the hen began to scratch about in one particular corner of the compartment. She formed a little hollow in the sand, and she began to collect stray feathers and bits of groundsel, in fact, all sorts of odds and ends, with which she lined the coming nest.

On looking in the corner casually, some mornings later, I was delighted to see a little olive brown egg deposited, something like that of the common Partridge, very lightly speckled with red. Day after day she added to the number, till there were six altogether, and then she refused to have anything more to do with them. I found them lying about here and there, as if someone had been having a game of golf with them. Who the culprit was I could not discover; I replaced them again and again in the nest, but all in vain; they always got rolled out again. Here was my first disappointment. I found I had yet to sip of that enchanted cup of which I had yet to learn that plus aloes quam mellis habet.

A Foster Parent.

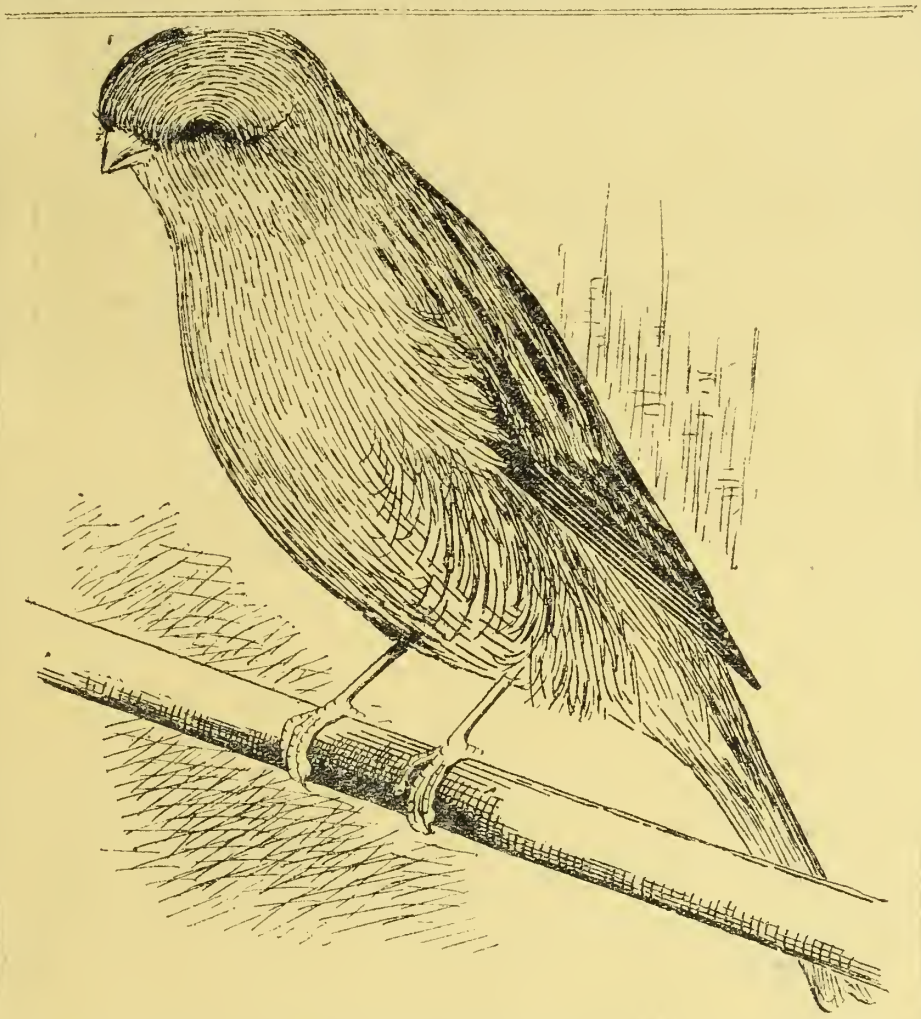
I did not like to lose the eggs, so I got a bantam hen and put them under her. She sat perfectly, but with no result, as I found afterwards that the eggs were clear. I now determined to try the other hen.

To do this, I first removed the other lady, as I knew that no good could result if both were left together. The removal of the "well beloved" would, I was certain, produce what actors call a "short scene." As a matter of fact, the cock sulked and gave the new hen as bad a quarter of an hour as you ever saw. Apparently, however, he came to the conclusion that it was no good to sulk, and determined to make the best of a bad job.



THE NOTED GREEN CREST-BRED CANARY, "DUCHESS."

The property of Mr. R. S. Bewick (Newcastle), and winner of many prizes, including First and Special at Gateshead.

The little hen was not at all revengeful, and sweetly accepted his overtures of peace. She would, however, have nothing to do with an indoor nest; but at once began to make one outside under a bush. I was rather frightened as to the result, as the Barometers say, "set fine," but still one has to do, even in bird-dom ce que femme veult.

Everything went on in a perfectly normal manner after these little preliminary differences, and as luck would have it the weather proved propitious, or else I don't know what would have happened. Seven eggs were laid, all with their points turned inwards, and everyone of them hatched out, and one morning on going to the aviary I saw the proud parents teaching the young idea to feed. Little Quails are bonny young mites, rather like bumble bees on legs; they are really very little bigger, and yet perfectly formed and able to fend for themselves at once if only the food supply is right.

The ideal food is ants' eggs, fresh ones, of course, and if you can find plenty, the little Quails will ask for nowt else. When the Quail season is on I go out with a bag and shovel, where ants abound, and bring back a sack full of ants eggs, and earth, and then throw it down two or three times a day, and the Quails account for all that is not of the earth earthy. After a time I give some soft mixture, as well as egg flake, and gradually get them on to millet and Canary seed.

I may say in passing, that although the gentleman Quail is not in the least averse to polygamy, the ladies are; in fact, if you introduce a strange lady, the lawful wife's astonishment could not be greater than that of the School Inspector who, having asked how many wives one was permitted to have? was told, "Two only as generally necessary to salvation."

When young Quails are about, it is most necessary to take all precautions against self-destruction, as if a young Quail can commit suicide, it will. A pan of water two inches deep is a ready-made death-trap, and I remember I lost my first baby Quail by carelessly leaving a German mouse trap about; it unfortunately got inside and then died of starvation before I missed it. I could have cried; but it was no good. It generally is'nt, when we find out our follies. Old age, it has been bitterly said (as I have previously pointed out), when it can no longer set a bad example, gives good advice. May be this is true of myself!

A Male Nurse.

The father does most of the dry nursing, and broods and tends the little mites most lovingly. Should any bird dare to come too near, or what he thinks too near, he becomes a perfect little fury, puffs out his feathers and goes for them like a small bulldog. "Nemo me impune lacessit," seems to be his watchword abroad; at home, when the wife's about, it is "Blessed are the meek."

When once you have got your little Quails over the first few days, your troubles will cease, if only you feed right, and they grow in the most wonderful way; in fact, in a few weeks they are fully feathered, and but for being a little smaller in size, they are bad to distinguish from their parents.

One merit about Chinese Quails is that they are very good to sell. You can readily dispose of any number at 25s. the pair; a sum which I consider pays well for the comparatively little trouble they give to rear. Some people don't like a little trouble, even over birds. They are quite of the opinion of Mrs. Pring, and the poor sick patient: "Who do you think's to wash one feater and miss another, and wear out one's eyes with all manner of fine work of that description for half-a-crown a day?" Well, for people who hate trouble, Chinese Quails are the birds, for they only want food, and that of the right kind. I say the right kind advisedly, for we all remember that the dinner that killed the Duke of Wellington was a cold pie and salad!

Management of Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries.

By THOMAS SMITH.

The question is often put, "How is it those who have, year in and year out, purchased Mr. So-and-So's birds, make so little progress in producing stock equal to compete with Mr. So-and-So's?" In my opinion, the secret is that Mr. So-and-So, being in possession of knowledge which is never imparted, can breed the stock he knows so much about to far greater advantage than any other person.

Everybody knows that there is one thing that can never be bought, namely, experience; it can only be acquired by working, and that is particularly true in the ornithological world. Breeders have been known to sell the best of their stock, retaining the inferior quality from the same strain, and yet succeed because they knew how to mate the birds they retained.

We often hear the remark, "There is no use my trying to get stock from so-and-so; he will not sell to me." My advice is try; no one can succeed without trying, and instead of sitting down and coming to false conclusions try again and again. The man who wishes to get thoroughly in the Fancy must be up and doing, and making hay while the sun shines.

In Full Bloom.

By the beginning of December most Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries should be in full bloom, and able to withstand severe weather, which is apt to set in at this time of the year, and also the strain of showing. Though well seasoned and fairly through the moult, the greatest care has yet to be exercised in the housing and feeding, as they are liable to break down; indeed, we frequently hear of a prize winner passing away a day or two after winning a distinguished honour.

The room at this time should be comfortable; not necessarily warm, but free from draughts, which are a great danger to every living thing, whether protected by clothing or feather. Who would ever think of planting his bed right in a draught? To do so would be foolish, and would be to invite serious trouble, while it might end fatally. It would be equally foolish to place a tiny bird in a draught, and a bird so placed would be almost sure to catch pneumonia or some other dangerous trouble. Every fancier should consider the welfare of his stock, and do all that in him lies to keep them in perfect health. A sickly bird is of no use either for showing or for breeding.

Birds that are regularly exhibited should be well looked after, and on their return from a show should have an opportunity of refreshing themselves at the seed box and the drinking glass. Lukewarm milk is a capital drink, and this will in many cases be found to avert a chill.

It is a most difficult task to procure reliable stock of the modern Scotch Fancy type. Those who have not hitherto been suited should lose no time in securing what they are in search of, by visiting shows and getting into touch with breeders by calling upon them; but where that is impracticable by reason of distance or other causes, correspondence can be resorted to. In any case, it is advisable to see the birds before coming to terms as regards the purchase of them. Living specimens can be the better judged then.

False Moult.

Sometimes false moult sets in, in this month especially, where artificial heat is brought into requisition. The change of temperature will be found to have a tendency to bring it on. But a false moult may come on a bird kept in a cold room.

I recommend that it should be allowed to take its course, as any attempt to stop the moult may lead to complications. A little egg food should be given twice a week, a moderate supply of linseed being added to the Canary seed. A piece of sulphate of iron, about the size of a pea, should also be added to the drinking water twice a week.

The birds should be kept free from draught and hurried through the moult as quickly as possible, it being more dangerous than at the natural time in the autumn. Uniform and constant attention will help to keep birds from falling into a false or second moult. Nothing equals steady attention to stock. To neglect one's birds one day, and to over-pamper them the next, has a hurtful effect. Rich feeding is a mistake at any time. An occasional tit-bit twice a week will help to brace up the stock, and that is all that is required with birds in their usual normal condition of health.

Breeding Stock.

By this I mean the birds that are kept for breeding purposes only. These should not be fed with the nourishing food that is given to the over-worked show bird. They are kept at home, and have nothing to do but to exercise themselves by flying through the cage or jumping on to the wires, and eating and sleeping; generally speaking they are kept as comfortable as they can be, being protected from the elements. Much harm is done at this period by over-feeding, with the natural result that the birds become too fat, and rarely do good in breeding. The best of strains have been lost in a very short time by over-kindness in the off season. When the summer comes round, the birds that have been over-fed in the winter disappoint the owner, and leave him without issue from his favourites.

The Winter Diet.

The winter diet should consist of the best Spanish Canary seed procurable, with a pinch of German rape seed raw daily, or twice a week boiled. I prefer giving it, boiled, in the egg mixture. It is desirable to curtail the extras, and not give too many; in the winter time the stock seem ready for almost anything. Hemp seed and an occasional pinch of maw seed may be given to a bird that is losing flesh, but these seeds should be given sparingly.

Green food may be considered out of the question. Well preserved dandelion root might be supplied, but it should be kept indoors for a couple of days before the birds are allowed to partake of it. The safest at this time of the year is a raw or boiled carrot or a ripe apple. They soon become very fond of these, and they are helpful in keeping them in good condition.

The bottom of the cage should be kept clean and free from anything tainted. Spare time can be well employed in tidying the cages.

Pure Air a Necessity.

Pure air in a bird-room is indispensable; nothing is more disagreeable than to go into a room having a close, sour and unwholesome atmosphere. Such is neither good for man nor for beast, and these conditions have put many a good lady against birds. In such cases the windows at this changeable period should be opened for a few minutes several times a day—at the top and bottom—to admit of a complete change of air. Avoid having the window continually down at this time of the year, i.e., in or about December. In cold rooms it is cold enough with the windows closed, and no risks should be run.

Where birds are kept in a room by themselves with the door opening to the lobby, the door may be left open. More birds die for want of fresh air than from cold.

Some rooms give one the impression that fresh air is unknown, they being close and stifling. By a little attention the air can be kept pure. Remember that the stock have to pass all their days and nights in their abode, and that their surroundings have much to do with their general health.

Keeping Birds in Pairs.

Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries may from December be kept in pairs, as they are intended for breeding. Putting them together in one cage will avoid quarrels in the spring. They take to one another gradually before they get into breeding condition. By having them in couples, too, it reduces the number of cages, and they keep remarkably clean—certainly cleaner than when a number are together in a flight cage. It is interesting for a fancier to go into a room and see pairs as they are to be bred. Show committees, too, should have classes for pairs at every show, to be judged upon the ground of their suitability or otherwise for breeding.

On the subject of artificial heat differences of opinion exist, and every man prefers his own way. Artificial heat is not absolutely necessary even in the coldest of weather, but once introduced, it will have to be kept up in order to maintain an even temperature, and also avoid a false moult. A cosy room is really all that is required in the severest of weather. A natural equable temperature is the best for Canaries.

Hybrid Breeding for Exhibition Purposes.

When and How to commence Breeding.

About the middle or even the end of April is quite early enough to begin breeding operations. When breeding with the two wild birds, if each pair can be given a separate compartment in an outdoor aviary, we will then have an ideal place for Hybrid-breeding. If such a place is not available, give each as large and roomy a cage as possible.

For nesting sites, nothing in my opinion beats the German wicker cages, with the fittings taken out, and one end left open. Stuck up in a corner, and well screened with heather or broom, the birds will quickly take to them. Give a plentiful supply of nesting materials, hay, moss, cokernut-fibre (Bullies are especially fond of this), and hair.

When dealing with Canary hens, proceed as in breeding Canaries, using the ordinary felt or earthenware nest-pans. When the hens commence to build in earnest, a sharp look-out must be kept, as when you are dealing with the wild birds they have a knack of dropping their eggs, generally in any place but the nest.

The cage must be well padded with some soft material, such as bran, chaff, or sawdust. Personally I use dried grass, and I have found this very suitable, as when the eggs are dropped, they get down among the grass, and are partially hidden from view, which is very desirable when you are dealing with Siskins or Goldies, who are very fond of "testing" them.

When once the clutch has been secured, transfer them to a reliable foster mother, and here let me impress upon you the desirability of having a good strain of feeders, to act as foster parents. Test all the eggs that are laid, as one never knows when fertile eggs will crop up; sometimes those which look least likely will be found to be fertile.

When the Young have Arrived.

Suppose we have now been successful in hatching one or two Hybrids, let the parents or foster parents, as the case may be, have a supply of egg-food, soaked rape seed, crushed sunflower seed, and a plentiful supply of hemp seed. Give plenty of seeding greenstuff; I don't mean lettuce leaves and suchlike salads, but ripe shepherd's purse, mouse-ears, chickweed, etc. Fed on such a mixture, the young Hybrids will grow apace, and at the end of a fortnight will be hopping about by themselves.

Don't be in too great a hurry to take them away from the parents, but when they are about a month old they will be quite able to feed themselves. At this time give the young Hybrids egg-food daily, as well as soaked rape and crushed hemp. A small piece of bread soaked in scalded milk and covered with maw seed will be a welcome addition to their diet. Give no green food, but ripe seeded weeds will be found beneficial. Given plenty of room for exercise, and frequent opportunities for bathing, they will be in grand condition at the approach of that most critical period, the moult.

Concerning the Moult.

We have now come to the most critical period in the whole of a bird's life. How often do we see fanciers rearing a lot of birds, only to have them drop off one by one at the approach of the moult! Now this need not be the case; nor would it be if a little discretion was exercised. The strain on a bird, consequent on the shedding of old, and the reproduction of new feathers, is very great.

Whenever a bird is noticed a little thick about this time, a small piece of bread soaked in scalded milk and sprinkled with fine sugar, supplied for two or three days, will, in nine cases out of ten, put matters right. This acts as a gentle laxative, and carries away any obstruction. Of course, with the best of attention there will be losses, but these will be reduced to a minimum by the adoption of this plan.

For exhibition, all Hybrids must be colour-fed. Follow the directions given by the vendor of the feed, and by giving the feed regularly and as directed, good results will accrue. Some breeders do not exhibit their Hybrids until these have completed their first adult moult. This is undoubtedly the best course to pursue. If this method is adopted, of course they will not require colour-feeding. If they can be given the run of a small outdoor aviary, and are well fed, they will develop into fine, strong birds, and will well repay the owner for the extra trouble given.

Suppose now we have got our young Hybrids successfully through the moult, we will want to test their mettle at some show or other. See that the birds are in proper condition before this is done, as no matter how good they may be, they must be shown in the best of condition.

A liberal use of the bath is a grand conditioner, and gives that beautiful gloss to the feathers which adds a finish to an otherwise good bird. Failing this, the birds must be sprayed as often as possible. For show cages, use a box cage, enamelled green inside and black outside.

All that now requires to be done is to enter your birds and await the verdict. If successful, do not be tempted to overdo the thing, as some do. The rough handling which exhibits get, going to and returning from shows, does not benefit the birds at all. As the birds are young and not properly developed, it will be seen that they require careful treatment for a time. I think I have now gone pretty freely into all the points connected with this question. Some will perhaps say, if we follow the directions here given, it will mean a tremendous lot of work. To such I would answer in the words of the poet:

"The heights by great men reached,
Were not attained by sudden flight.

(Our Invaluable "Breeding Room Register.")

A well-known fancier has said of it:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." This book is one no breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred—keep account of their strong and weak points. It contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

How an Irish Fancier Breeds Norwich Plainheads.

By WELBY A. C. ADAMS.

One of the most important factors in breeding birds is suitable accommodation. I prefer the box-cage made of wood, excepting in front, which should be of tinned wire 16 gauge. The length for a single breeding cage should be 21 inches, height 15 inches, and depth from front to back 12 inches. The bottom cross-bar should be 3 inches deep, and the middle cross-bar 9 inches from top, which allows ample head-room.

How to Clean Cages.

I prefer two doors, one in front for hanging bath on, and one in the side. The side door should be 6 inches from the bottom, 4 inches from the front and back, leaving the door 4 inches wide, 4½ inches high. If the nest is to be hung on the door, so that one may examine it easily, the sides of the door should be flush with the sides of the cage, to make it firmer. The perch should be placed in front 2 inches from bottom, to enable the birds to feed their young.

Any cages which have been used should be thoroughly washed with soap and water, with two tablespoonfuls of carbolic acid added to each bucket; then rinse cages in pure water. Allow the cages to dry in the open air, and when dry paint all the cracks, crevices, and joints with carbolic acid, which should also be allowed to dry before the birds are replaced. The cages should be re-enamelled as the enamel will be found to fill up the crevices so that they cannot afford red mite any shelter; it also brightens the appearance of the bird-room. Never use very hot water, nor allow the cages to dry in a hot place; otherwise the wood will warp, and so make new holes for red mite.

If a special room is devoted to the birds, the handiest way to clean it is to fumigate it with a sulphur candle, all holes having first been blocked to keep the fumes in. The floor should be washed with some disinfectant fluid or carbolic acid, four tablespoonfuls to the bucket. The walls and ceiling should be re-distemperod with some carbolic mixed with the distemper. The bottoms of the cages should be covered with fine sawdust. Some fanciers like trays, but if the whole front comes out these are unnecessary.

Concerning Nest Pans.

Purchase should be made of moderately soft wood, ⅝in. broad; if some are made round and some flat the muscles of the birds' feet will be exercised. I prefer unglazed earthenware nest pans. I don't like wire hangers. I prefer the back of the nest to be raised in a semi-circle, with two holes for nails; this arrangement keeps the nest much steadier. If the nest is not placed on the door, it should be placed 7 inches from the bottom and 4 inches from the corner next the side door. When placed on the door, it is handier to examine; on opening the door you have full view of the nest. The nest pan should have a broad rim round the top. I dislike platforms, as they harbour red mite too easily. They have, however, some good points. They prevent to a certain extent hens carrying the young out when leaving the nest. Place a perch 2 inches from the nest, so that the young may be fed easily.

Seed and water pans should be placed outside on the bottom cross-bar. I like the flat-side glazed earthenware type, without corners. They are easy to clean, and if hooded prevent birds from wasting their seed. The pans should be thoroughly washed twice a week in boiling water. Glazed egg-pans are best made in a round pattern without cornors, and about 1 inch in depth, 1½ inches wide, and 2½ inches long. The food is more liable to be wasted if placed in shallow pans.

Where Care is Needed.

Stale egg or green food is most injurious to birds. Egg-food turns sour very rapidly in warm weather, and if placed in shallow pans gets knocked to the bottom of the cage, where it is eaten by the birds, and is thus likely to cause inflammation, usually followed by death.

A liberal supply of cow-hair and moss for building purposes should be kept in readiness and placed in a rack outside cage when birds are building. Nest lining should be stuck on with paste, rye flour preferably. I believe if alum is added it sets quicker and dries firmer. I prefer felt nest linings. It is advisable to sprinkle Keating's insect powder both under and in the nest lining. I was recommended to soak nest linings in some disinfectant, and to dry them thoroughly before placing in nest.

Birds should always have a free supply of cuttlefish and mortar, containing a fair amount of lime. The cuttlefish should be placed between the wires, and the mortar placed in a vessel inside cage.

The Best Diet.

Diet is another very important matter. The best diet for getting birds into breeding condition is good sound Spanish Canary seed as a staple food, with a pinch of German rape seed twice or three times a week; occasionally a small amount of maw seed to keep up the bird's vigour. Never give green food during the cold months, or green food which is frosted. A piece of ripe apple or boiled carrot twice a week is best.

Egg-food should be made of hard-boiled egg, Oshorne, or Lunch biscuits, with home-made bread crumbs for a change. Give half a teaspoonful of egg-food once a week to each bird. A little hemp in cold weather is beneficial.

Breeding birds must not be in a fat condition. Forward birds should be kept separately, and hens should be kept in flight cages so as to have plenty of exercise and to keep them in good condition. Cocks also should be kept in flights as long as they agree; when they get quarrelsome they must be separated. Over-forward birds ought not to get any egg-food or maw-seed for a while.

Be very careful how you treat over-forward birds, as some if improperly treated lose their condition and become useless for the remainder of the breeding season.

Rape seed soaked, boiled, and served cold, is an excellent cooler. Always give birds pure water to drink. Most fanciers use a wire partition when pairing birds; I prefer it to slide in from front, not from the top. I like nursery cages to be made either all wire (excepting top and bottom) and laths, which should be 1½ inches deep, running round bottom of cage, or top and bottom wood, back and one side wood, to prevent draught. Both cages should be 8 inches long, 7 inches wide, and 7 inches high. The perch should be 3½ inches from the front, and 3 inches from the bottom.

Place nursery cages in front of open door of breeding cage. Always cover the floor with sand. If your room is heated the risk of giving green food is much reduced. I prefer young rape or lettuce, but when this is used fanciers should be sure it is fresh.

On Giving Baths.

Red mite cause breeders any amount of trouble and vexation. It is generally allowed that all vermin comes from dirt, so keep your cages scrupulously clean; prevention is much better than cure in this case. Allow the birds baths daily; add a little essence of quassia to the water occasionally. Some birds have a great dislike to bathing; this is usually the fault of the breeder not allowing them a bath when young. These birds should be sprayed. The mode of procedure is thus: Place the birds in a small cage (a show cage is excellent), then spray the bird with some tepid water, to which some essence of quassia has been added. Keep on spraying till the feathers have been fairly moistened through. The bird enjoys this very much, as the delight he displays when returned to his cage, preening his feathers and shaking himself fully testifies.

It is very difficult to know when to pair up birds, but the man who can heat his bird-room may pair at the beginning of March all his forward birds. Personally I do not recommend early pairing; I prefer to commence in April. Hens become over-forward in a much shorter time than do cocks; at least, it is more noticeable, and in trying to prevent them from laying you may incapacitate them for the whole season; so you will see it is much better to let them go to nest at the risk of clear eggs or the loss of a nest of young. Of course there is the risk of egg-binding, but this is much easier overcome than to restore a hen to breeding condition who has lost her health through incorrect management when over-forward.

When hens are about to lay give them a pinch of niger seed on alternate days, with some damped sugar added to the egg-food; it will greatly reduce the danger of egg-binding. Put a little maw seed on the top of her egg-food if the weather is cold.

A heated room is not all; a heated room with a draught through it, blowing right on the birds is much worse than a cold room. I like plenty of ventilation. I do not recommend coddling birds, but Canaries cannot be expected to thrive in an ice-house. It will pay a person who has a cold room to buy a stove, or to heat it with any safe apparatus (hot water pipes are best). A man with a cold room may also pair his forward birds. As I have said, it is much better to risk clear eggs or a nest of young than the health of the parent birds. If hens are treated as advised above when about to lay, there ought not to be much trouble with them. Of course, there are exceptional cases when steaming will have to be resorted to; but I find that on giving the hens some maw seed when you think they are going to lay, it greatly soothes them. I have often proved this. Most hens lay at night, or in the early morning. If they do not lay by the morning, after you notice the hen has an egg, it is better to steam her.

Get a large pickle bottle with a fairly narrow neck. Fill it almost full of boiling water, then place a piece of muslin over the opening. Put one or two drops of pure olive oil into the vent, and then place the hen over the bottle; steam her for about ten minutes or a quarter of an hour. If she does not pass the egg, repeat the process three or four hours later. It usually has the desired effect. There is another method, pressing the egg out, but it is not to be recommended.

Do not give any egg-food when the hen has finished laying her clutch of eggs, until the young birds appear.

Before I conclude, it would be advisable to say these few things:—Have your flights as large as possible; use the best seed, which is the cheapest in the long run; and if you have a cold room, get a stove. The risk of losing young birds in the early part of the season would then be much reduced, and the bird room would be free from damp, which is a great evil.

THE HAND-WASHING OF BIRDS FOR EXHIBITION.

Paper read before the Ashington and Hurst C.B.S. on March 9th, by Mr. Edward Floyd.

This paper is down to be short, so I will begin right away with the subject before us. Rain water is by far the best in which to wash birds, especially Canaries. This should be stored for a few weeks before the show season, to allow it to settle. When needed, the quantity required should be carefully strained through some finely-woven linen, for the purpose of getting rid of all the dirt. Even when boiled, a scum generally forms on the top of rain water. Skim this off before filling your basins or dishes. About two gallons of water are necessary for a dozen birds.

The Four Basins Described.

Next comes the soap. I have tried many kinds, but I find the pure white curd is by far the best. No chemicals are required to impart a sheen to the feathers if rain water and pure curd soap are used. I prepare the soap by cutting it up small, and putting it into No. 1 basin, pouring hot water over it, then working it into a good lather with the brush. No. 2 basin of water I make to a temperature of about 80 or 85 degrees F. In this water I do the washing proper. I begin by allowing the feathers to soak a second or two; this softens the wing and tail feathers, and they can be washed without fear of being broken. No. 3 is a rinsing basin, the water being from 60 to 65 degrees and is for taking the most of the lather out before placing the birds into, or over, No. 4 basin, which is the final rinse. The water in the last basin should be lukewarm, the chill having been taken off by a little hot water being added.

Our outfit should be ready, i.e., four basins. No. 1, soap; No. 2, water 80 to 85 degrees; No. 3, 60 to 65 degrees; No. 4, lukewarm; two badger hair brushes (shaving brushes); and two pieces of flannel about 8 inches wide by 14 or 16 inches long. I prefer old sheeting for drying cloths, although small Turkish towels are very good, and an old soft silk handkerchief—this latter may be done without. A box 22 inches by 14 inches makes a good drying box; knock out the bottom and insert a piece of glass for the back; cover the top or front with cotton—this is the side nearest the fire. Cut a circular hole five inches in diameter in the top, keeping the piece for a lid. Place an old clean rag on the bottom, and fix a perch two inches up. Cut some ventilating holes in the ends near the top. We are now ready to wash.

When Ready to Wash.

Catch your bird, but be steady and do not chase him about. He will need all his breath. Place him in the left hand with the claws on the middle finger. The bird will grip the finger with his claws. Being nervous it is a comfort to him to have his claws firmly fixed on something. The fore finger should be placed on the front of the neck, and the thumb on the back of the neck. This gives you a good hold on the bird, and at the same time plenty of freedom to work and wash. If the bird loosens his grip on your finger, tighten your finger and thumb around his neck, and bring the third and little finger against the body, as he intends to get away if possible. Dip the brush into No. 1 basin for soap; then into No. 2 for water, and begin to wash at the back of the head and neck. This is after the second or two's soaking previously mentioned. Then continue down over the end of the tail. Turn up the wings and wash the under parts well in the downward journey. Now turn your bird over and well wash the chest and neck (this is important, as it is the frontispiece of the bird), continuing downwards as before right to the end of the tail. Use the side of the wrist or the side of the basin for a back hold to the wings and tail. The feet and legs are washed in doing the abdomen. Next wash the head. Do this quickly, gently, but well. Do not be afraid to cross wash here, but carefully finish by stroking the right way.

Remove the bird now to No. 3 basin, and with the other brush get out as much of the soapy lather as you possibly can. Change again to No. 4, and do a good finish by stroking the way of the feathers—from head to tail—removing all soap and lather. If any lather is left in the feathers a bad wash is the result. The feathers should dry stiff and straight. With a piece of old sheeting or fine towel mop out as much water as you can, drying carefully the bill and eyes, also the feet and the vent.

After the Wash.

Have one of the pieces of flannel warm, and roll the bird gently in it, not too tight, but firm enough to hold it. Be sure your bird can breathe easily. Place him near the fire with his head away from it. The heat will draw the web of the feather the right way. Let the bird remain here a minute or two to recover his breath. Take the bird out of the flannel now, but be easy; do not give him a spin that will daze him. Place him carefully in the drying box, near the cotton front. Behind the glass at the back place a lighted candle, and as soon as the birds are able to perch they will do so looking out at the light; this places them with their backs to the fire, and consequently the heat will draw the webbing of the feathers the right way. By stages remove the bird from the fire, until far enough away to be left for the night. Next morning let your birds loose into the flight. After a feed a general retouching will begin, and the day will be spent by the birds in feeding and giving themselves a general overhaul. Next day place a dish of clean soft water for them to bathe in. Birds that will not bathe should be sprayed, and all washing should be done at least three days before the show.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

Birds Eggs and Some Problems of Colouration.

By J. B. BROWN.

We have to consider the bird which lives entirely upon insects and yet lays a coloured egg. You will all agree with me that there is an abundance of colour in insects. Some of the most beautiful blendings of colour are seen in different kinds of insects. It is not difficult then to understand how the bird that feeds on insects only, possesses the power of colouring its eggs.

The Canary for Example.

We have still to try and explain why the bird in captivity continues to lay a coloured egg; the Canary, for example. In all animal or bird life old habits linger long. A dog on the hearthrug will turn round two or three times before lying down, an inherent trait of the days when all dogs were wild. He is treading the grass to make his bed comfortable for him. It must be remembered that the Canary in captivity is being given food as nearly as possible like what it would eat if free; it therefore is obvious that it obtains the pigments it requires to colour its eggs from this food, and tho old instinct guiding it to colour its eggs has never left it.

The different markings on the eggs of the same bird have been attributed to this fact, that some eggs remain longer in the bird's body than others; and the circular spots at the thick end of the egg show that this deposit of pigment has taken place when the egg is at rest; whilo the peculiar smears and blotches are deposited when the egg is in motion.

The eggs of young birds are usually richer in colour than those of older birds, while the first eggs of a clutch are said to be more richly coloured than those which follow it. Fright and excitement may also account for many of the variations of blotches in the eggs of the same bird. But this power possessed by birds of being able to colour the shells of their eggs is as much an inscrutable mystery as is their migratory habit. That there is a reason for it none can deny, and "whoever denies to the bird intelligence," (and here I am quoting Mr. W. H. Adams in "The Bird World,") "and intelligence considerably developed, knows nothing of the bird's true nature. He leaves out of sight the fact that a bird can be educated; can be taught to leave and to return to his cage; that he can be trained to imitate the human voice; can be taught to sing." May not this intelligence of the bird, in some manner unknown to us, determine it to colour its eggs for some specific reason which we cannot discover.

He would be a very bold man who would attempt to describe all the various markings and colourings seen in a large collection of eggs, such as, through the courtesy of Mr. Shaw, at Holmbank Nurseries, it was my good fortune to see a few days ago. The first thing that attracts one's attention is that the colours displayed bear no sort of relation to the colours of the birds themselves. Secondly, that there is little about those eggs to enable him to decide to which particular species such and such an egg belongs. Some of course are recognised at the first glance.

A Striking Fact.

The markings of the shells range through minute frecklings such as are met with in some game-birds, to blotches and smears, and peculiar lines and streaks; while many eggs are what is called "double-spotted"—that is, that many of the spots are but faint, and evidently deposited in a deep layer of the shell and not on the surface. The most striking fact about this colouration is, that there is no uniformity in the colour of the eggs of those birds which are very much alike in their plumage; while birds which are in no way alike may lay very similar eggs—and much the same is true of the shape of the eggs. On the whole, those of the larger species of birds can be easily distinguished. Thus those of the Petrel tribe are known by a belt of spots or smears running right round the thicker end of the egg. The goose tribe, without any exception, lay whole-coloured eggs. The eggs of birds of prey are either wholly white, or have a ground colour of white, bluish white, or buff, spotted and blotched with various shades of red and purple. In some cases the ground colour is covered by spots so thickly clustered together as to give to the egg an almost uniform tint of red or dark purple. And so the eggs of this group are sometimes of very rare beauty. Game-birds, as a rule, lay whole-coloured eggs, generally cream or buff-coloured, but there are some whose eggs are "spotted," and some "double-spotted." The grouse and the red-legged partridge (or "Frenchmen" as they are called in the eastern counties of England), lay spotted eggs; so also do quails.

Of the Plover tribe, in which are included all the gulls, the eggs are all spotted with various shades of brown, sometimes nearly black, on a ground-work ranging in colour from white, cream, brown to blue and green. There is one exception, the Jacana, which lays a white egg, but the bird is not known in this country.

I may be allowed to mention one other bird which is common on our coasts. The Guillemot; in the matter of variety of these markings, none can compare with those eggs. In the Natural History Museum of London there is a special case containing thirty of their eggs of which the great range of colouring is really wonderful, and why there should be such a variety is far from apparent; but it has been suggested that the end to be gained is to enable the hen-bird to recognise its own egg there in that colony of birds, because a Guillemot only lays one egg and hatches but one at a time, and they congregate together in their thousands at breeding time at some favourite spot. Here, then, we have another reason why birds colour their eggs, and that is, that each bird may recognise its own.

A Wonderful Collection.

Now, although that collection of Guillemots' eggs in the Natural History Museum is a very fine one, it is beaten altogether by that which Mr. Shaw has, because if he shows you one, he will show at least a hundred or more, and every egg different. He also explained the difference between the Razorbill's egg and the Guillemot's. They are similar in size and colouring outside, but the Razorbill's is coloured inside as well, while the Guillemot's is white. But what took my attention most was the Cuckoos' eggs; for Mr. Shaw showed them with the same eggs belonging to the nest in which they had been found.

I was interested in these, because in all probability, no bird is associated with more quaint superstition and legends than the Cuckoo. Although the ancients held many traditions concerning it, it was during the middle ages that the greatest number of strange beliefs were connected with it, and its name derived from its cry is almost the same in every European language. In Germany, it is sometimes "Gauck" derived like our local work "Gowk" from the Saxon "Gæc," which means a fool or simpleton. We speak of "April Gowks" and a "Gowk's nest, equivalent to a Cuckoo's nest, or as the Japanese say, "to a thing which is not."

Opinions differ widely as to the resemblance between the eggs of the Cuckoo and those of the dupes upon whom they are foisted. According to some this resemblance is more imaginary than real. Others say that the resemblance is real, and is a rule and not an exception. But I think the best solution of this problem is that of Professor Newton, which Mr. Oswald H. Latter endorses. Anyone seeing Mr. Shaw's collection will at once notice the great resemblance in colour to those of the bird in whose nest the Cuckoo's egg was laid, those of the Hedge-Sparrow excepted. But in one instance, in that collection, I saw the bluest Cuckoo's egg it was ever my lot to see. Since this was written, I have learned on good authority, that blue eggs are not so rare as generally supposed. According to Professor Newton, and his reasoning is rather keen, it is to be assumed that the eggs of the Cuckoo were originally subject to a considerable range of variation. This being so, the indiscriminate dropping of eggs wherever nests were available, resulted in a large number being rejected; the remainder, passing muster, were hatched. The females of these survivors, in their turn, laying eggs of the same type as those of their parents, naturally looked for the same kind of nest. Thus a series of "clans" of Cuckoos became evolved—Thrush Cuckoos, Wagtail Cuckoos, Meadow-pipit Cuckoos, and so on. The fact that Hedge-Sparrow Cuckoos' eggs rarely resemble those of the Sparrow, is possibly due, Professor Newton says, to the fact that the Hedge-Sparrow is not gifted with a nice sense of discrimination in the matter of a size and colour; and the same applies to a few similar cases. A little while ago I read an article on this subject, in which it was suggested that the Cuckoo prefers the nest of the Hedge-Sparrow, because that bird takes it as a matter of course that the Cuckoo will lay an egg in its nest and never contests the fact, like some other birds do.

A Selective Process.

That Cuckoos return each year to the same locality, and that each female lays the same type of egg throughout its life, are now well-known facts. Mr. Latter's study of this question seems to show conclusively that there is a selective process at work tending to bring the eggs of these birds into agreement with those of the other birds both in size and colour. His observations on Wren-Cuckoos' eggs are important in this respect. The absence of colour-matching, in this instance, is very significant, but, as he points out, is of no importance, as neither Wren nor Cuckoo, from the construction of the nest, can see the eggs. But in the matter of size, the case is different. In this matter of size, the eggs of Wren-Cuckoos differ from those of all other Cuckoos, and approach those of the Wren. The accuracy with which Cuckoos' eggs are deposited in appropriate clutches is so remarkable as to tempt one to assume, that it is by choice and deliberation on the part of the female Cuckoo, and not by chance, that it is accomplished.

Finally, and most remarkable of all, we must suppose that this peculiar evolution of Cuckoo clans is a dominant characteristic transmitted in the female line alone, and not in the male. If otherwise, the tendency would be swamped by the females intercrossing with the males of another clan; inasmuch as only by rare chance would sexes of the same clan succeed in pairing together. It amounts to this—that if a Cuckoo was born in a Hedge-Sparrow's nest, what more natural, when its migratory habit brings it back to its birthplace, than that it should seek a nest in which to perpetuate the family of the same kind as that in which it first saw the light? The egg of the daughter would resemble that of the mother, and the laying of the egg in the same kind of nest as its ancestors, may thus be termed a hereditary habit. I never heard tell of but one reason why the Cuckoo does not build a nest for itself, and that reason is a Danish one. The bird is too busy answering questions when it first arrives. All the girls go out into the fields and ask it—how long will it be before we are married?

The Kingfisher's Eggs.

If colouring matter had to do with plumage, as some allege, one would reasonably expect to see in a collection of eggs, that that of the Kingfisher would eclipse all others. But this bird produces a white egg—the clearest white, glossy egg among all eggs that are laid. In some books you will find it stated that the egg is pink. I am inclined to think that it may be either white or pink when first expelled by the bird. For this reason the shell is opalescent; I mean, that certain faint tints can be observed in it, if held in a certain position with regard to the light.

Moreover, one must remember that the favourite haunt of the Kingfisher is when a stream has cut its way through the red sandstone formation. It is seen elsewhere, of course, but where this sandstone is seen with a trout stream running through it, Kingfishers may be more frequently met with. As it nests in a hole bored by it into the red sandstone, it is just possible that its eggs, when found in its nest there, may evince a pinky hue when discovered, because this opalescent, or reflective quality of the shell would show the general colourings of its surroundings, but which if brought to the light, would evaporate and leave the egg apparently a pure white. The Kingfisher, of all birds (and all birds evince this habit, to some degree, but the Kingfisher more than any), is king of his castle. He is tho sole riparian owner of the fishery for a certain distance from his nest. He will brook no interlopers as poachers in his domain. Woe betide any other bird that comes there if he sees him. With his strong sharp beak and his rapid flight, he is more than a match for many a bigger bird.

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

THE Tong and District C.B.S. held a dinner and social on the 9th inst., when they had a good turn-up of members and friends, no less than 45 sitting down to a substantial feed. A good muster, this, for a society practically in its infancy; but, my, ain't it precocious! During the evening the medals and prizes won in the competition at members' shows during the previous season were presented to the fortunate exhibitors, Mr. H. H. Towers, of Windhill, having the honour of handing them over.

WIBSEY Society also held its annual tea and social last week, this event taking place on the 13th. As usual, there was a very large muster, close on 100 sitting down to the splendid knife and fork tea provided. Enough for all and to spare was the order of the day. Afterwards a very successful social evening was spent. They have some splendid amateur talent in this district, always in full soug—must get plenty of egg-cake! The three highest scorers during the past season each received a grand medal. There was also presented the Ramsden Colour Feed Medal, won at their Boxing Day Show, and last, but not least, the steward, who has acted at the members' shows during the year, received a splendid medal as a mark of esteem for services rendered. Mr. Samuel Dean had the pleasure of presenting the prizes to the successful ones.

BRADFORD West C.B.S. hold their annual social to-day (Saturday, March 20th), and will be pleased to welcome any friends who care to come. In consequence of the illness of their hostess, the "Westers" have had to forego the usual tea, so this time the proceedings will start at 7 p.m., light refreshment being provided during the evening.

LAST week's cartoon, anent the Amalgamated Prize Distribution, has caused no little amusement. Many attempts (some of them very successful) have been made to name those who were going up to receive their prizes, the British bird with the umbrella puzzling many.

THE ballot of the Yorkshire Union has closed, and the following is the result of the poll. Out of a total of 1,140 papers sent out, only 343 have been returned, a very meagre total indeed. For the post of Vice-President, Mr. F. Hammond scores an easy victory, securing no less than 152 votes, his nearest opponents being Mr. H. W. Walsh with 47, and Mr. Samuel Dean with 33. As Secretary, Mr. H. Hill is returned unopposed. As Trustees and Auditors, the previous holders, Messrs. Brotherton and Mitchell and Messrs. Armstrong and Holroyd are far ahead of the rest of the competitors.

REVISION of rules: The annual ballot is again to the front, being 150 votes ahead of the proposed general meeting. Next in importance is the question of representation, and here the amendment is lost, the old rule still holding good by a margin of 25 votes. In regard to judges, the old rule that they be nominated by the societies, quite overwhelms by 171 votes, the proposed alteration of being nominated by the Council, and also that they should judge two shows, which proves the existing rule is considered satisfactory. Nearly 100 votes carry the amendment for expelling defaulting members from the ranks of the Union. The rule about the "minimum classification" is wiped "off the map" by a majority of 65. The price in the Novice Classes is to remain as before, 226 being in favour of the £5 5s. limit, and only 98 in favour of the price being open. That the exhibitors are in favour of providing their own water tins is shown by a majority of 110, a uniform pattern, of course, to be adopted. The alteration of the rule in regard to claiming birds from selling classes obtains, the large majority of 161 proving that the old rule was not quite satisfactory.

NOVICE members must now be marked with the letter N to denote their qualification to compete for medals. So, novices, don't delay, but see to it that you have your names so marked by your respective secretaries. With regard to defaulting members, those who are members of more than one society must pay their liabilities in all, and not be in arrears with one, or they are liable to be expelled from the Union. Members' shows must not now be held during the hours an open show is in progress; this only obtained a majority of 20. Two hundred and ninety-six are in favour of show rules being printed in the Union book, and only fifteen against, thus proving that members are in favour of saving their societies a little when possible.

LAST, but not least, comes the question of shows. The proposed two shows on one-day system receives only 65 votes for and 201 against. The motion relating to compulsory first feather shows, one-third of the societies to hold such shows receives fair support, but the optional first feather shows and the provision of a competition for them, along with the advancement of dates for winter shows, comes out at the top of the poll.

AN INTERESTING ENGAGEMENT.

The "Human Linnet" Takes to Himself a Mate.

I hear, writes a local correspondent, that a marriage has been arranged, and will take place in Hull sometime during May, between Mr. Fred Allen, of Leeds, and Miss M. Fay, niece of Mr. R. Dearlove, bird specialist, of Hull. Mr. Allen is widely known as a very clever Linnet whistler, and has been called in CAGE BIRDS, "The Human Linnet." His fiancé is also a lover of birds. I am sure all fanciers will wish them a happy and prosperous future.

We are enabled, by courtesy of our correspondent, to give a photograph of Mr. Allen.

We hear that Mr. W. P. Barnes, of Grantham, has been elected by the Darlington C.B.S. to judge the Canaries at their annual show on November 27th.

We hear that the fifteenth annual show of the Weybridge F.S. will be held on November 2nd and 3rd next, when Mr. C. A. House will judge the cage birds.

Many thanks for the picture of my bird appearing in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. J. Little (Newcastle-on-Tyne). It is sketched very well indeed, and whilst it is the first, I hope it will not be the last of my birds that has such an honour.

Kindly note, writes Mr. W. Atkin, hon. secretary of the Bangor and Dis. F.S., that Mr. F. Millard, Ormo Road, has been elected chairman of the society, and Mr. W. Jones vice-chairman. Twelve fanciers have been elected on the committee. Any fancier wishing to become a member should forward the entrance fee of 1s. to me at 1, Belmont Street, Bangor.

Kindly note that my society have secured the services of Mr. H. W. Battye (Huddersfield), as judge at our members' show, to be again held on New Year's Day, January 1, 1910, writes Mr. W. Vart, hon. secretary, Kendal and Dis. C.B.S. We have also secured the Market Hall for our next show, as the St. George's Lower Hall was far too small and too crowded on the occasion of our last.

I have taken your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, this last few weeks after an interval of nearly seven years, writes Mr. T. Pickard (Leeds). I used to take it when in the Fancy, and staying recently in Glasgow I could scarcely recognise it again, there being such a tremendous improvement. And now that I have started with cage birds again, I shall also take the old paper, and I hope you will continue to send us the good reading that I now find. Your contemporary is not in it now. I have given both a trial—result, orders for CAGE BIRDS per newsboy every week.

Cycles We deliver our high-grade "SCOUT," £6/19/6, Lady's or Gent's. 10/- with order & 10/- monthly. Free Wheel, Double Brakes, Reynolds Tubes, & every improvement. Write for Catalogue. The Finest Offer ever made by a responsible firm. J. C. GRAVES, LIMITED, SHEFFIELD.

FURTHER SPEAKING TESTIMONY.

Our "Annual."

I think CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL is better than ever.—S. J. ELMER (Witney).

I have got CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, and like it very much indeed. I have three altogether.—MRS. SANDELL (Brighton).

Allow me to take this opportunity of complimenting you on the ANNUAL; it is marvellous.—P. H. HARRIS (London, W.C.).

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL proves of great assistance to fanciers. It is a good production.—J. MACFARLANE, hon. secretary Cowal O.S.

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL is the best sixpennyworth I have ever invested in.—JOHN DIXON, hon. secretary, Choppington and District C.B.S.

I have already found your CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL to be of real value, and I think every fancier should find a place for it in his birdie library.—Mr. Higgins (Wimbledon).

I think CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL is better than ever. The coloured plate of the Linnet is extra good. When I look at it, it makes me wish I had one to equal it.—W. RATCLIFF (Grantham).

I have sold all my CAGE BIRDS ANNUALS. The members seem delighted with them. I hope to send you an order for some more soon.—R. H. TURNER, hon. secretary Morley and Dis. C.B.S.

Allow me to thank you for your grand CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. It is indeed a boon to fanciers, and contains a host of good things. You deserve our hearty thanks for this grand ANNUAL.—J. RUKIN (Rawtenstall).

I received CAGE BIRDS ANNUALS. The ANNUAL is full of valuable information, and I think no fancier should be without it. It is a cheap 6d. worth.—J. R. HENDERSON, hon. secretary, Ashington and Hurst C.B.S.

I received CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL all right, and allow me to congratulate you on this year's number, it being full of useful information to both old and young fanciers. I wish you and your paper the best of luck.—W. DALGETTY (Scarborough).

Spend your Money to Advantage.

I am pleased to state that I sold all the Norwich I had through my advertisement last week in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. C. Hill (Matlock).

Through my last advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. A. T. Selvey (Tredegar), I had about 30 answers, so that speaks well for the paper.

To my last advertisement I received replies from all over England, writes Mr. Walter Bell (Sheffield), and I think that yours is the best paper for advertising in.

Kindly thank all applicants, in reply to my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. F. Cockerill (Stockport). I had so many answers that I could not answer all.

I am pleased to say that I have disposed of all my stock, which I advertised, writes Mr. J. W. Lawton (Crewe). The applicants are too numerous for me to reply to all individually.

I had no need to advertise last week, writes Mr. A. Brown (Wood Green), as my last two advertisements in CAGE BIRDS brought me splendid results. I have sold about 100 through your valuable paper, all of which I bred last season.

I advertised some of my Bantams in your paper the other week, and I could not answer all of the many letters that came to me. I thank you and those who replied for their kindness. Good luck to CAGE BIRDS.—W. BROADBENT (Thornaby-on-Tees).

I have had a good sale through CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. A. Thomas (Loftus). I have sent birds all over the country, and have had inquiries from Ireland and Scotland. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success, as it is the best paper for advertising in I have ever tried.

This week I have an order from Rockhampton, Australia, for 12 show birds, of various breeds, writes Mr. J. A. Taylor, the well-known bird specialist, of Frizinghall, Bradford, through my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS. The results from my advertisements have been splendid.

I must thank you for the last advertisement which I had in CAGE BIRDS of February 27th issue, writes Mr. H. Satterthwaite (Morecombe). It brought me 42 applications from all over the United Kingdom, which speaks volumes for your paper. The journal is without doubt the best of all papers to advertise in.

Kindly thank all who answered my advertisment re black Pom. dog in exchange for birds, writes Mr. Johnson (Bacup). I may say it was altogether impossible for me to reply to all, as I had upwards of forty replies, which shows the circulation CAGE BIRDS must have. I wish good old CAGE BIRDS continued success.

Owing to the large number of letters I have received through my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. J. Pilot (Welshpool), I am unable to answer all. Kindly thank the writers for me. I had replies from all parts of the kingdom, which clearly shows the vast circulation your paper enjoys. You deserve every bird-keeper's patronage.

I am very pleased to tell you, writes Mr. J. Walsh, the well-known Blackburn bird specialist, that we are very busy in every department. This week, too, we have had to engage two extra men to keep up with the demand, and I am pleased to inform you that most of our orders come through CAGE BIRDS readers. Just lately we have sent out orders to Punjaub (India), Montreal (Canada), New Zealand, United States, and all parts of the British Isles. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

CANARY QUERIES.

Sore Feet.

J.W., A Reader of CAGE BIRDS.—Keep cage floor and perches scrupulously clean, and if the bird seems to have pain in standing or gripping the hard perch, bind a strip of wash leather round it for a time. Bathe feet until quite clean daily in a warm solution of boracic acid—say, a small teaspoonful of acid to a teacup of warm water—dry carefully on a soft rag, and gently anoint them with zinc ointment, being careful not to apply too thickly so as to leave any for the bird to pick off. A very slight smear is sufficient. If this does not quickly heal them, use a solution of extract of wych hazel to bathe them instead of the boracic solution.

T'other from Which.

J.C.—Perhaps it would ho best to ask a more experienced fancier than yourself to look at the birds and tell you the sex. I am rather inclined to think they are two hens. All the differences are comparative, and not very easily recognised by an untrained eye. The cock is bolder and more dashing, and his call more full and clear, and when singing, as he should be now, the throat swells and throbs perceptibly right down on to the front of the neck. If caught, and the feathers of the abdomen blown up, the vent of the cock is more prominent and pointed, whilst that of the hen is comparatively flat and expansive. You had better describe your Finches more clearly in a query for our British bird specialist. Your supposed Chaffinches are probably something else.

To Bring on Song.

A.A.—If the birds are really cocks they certainly ought to have been in song by now. The loss of feathers is indicative either of draughts or great variations of heat. Take care to avoid these, and treat as follows for a few weeks:—Keep in separate cages; for staple food give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week give half a teaspoonful of hemp, and every second day for a fortnight the same quantity of egg-food or crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry mixed in it, and a few grains of gold of pleasure seed sprinkled over it. On each of the alternate days give a spray of green food. Discontinue all other seeds for the present. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts and six drops of dandelion juice for two days, and afterwards two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel every second day, and twenty drops of chemical food on the alternate days.

Treatment of Norwich Hen.

A. Locke.—The treatment given below will be all that your bird requires. As regards the mixtures, although they may be useful enough to resort to at a pinch when proper remedies are not handy, I do not consider them quite safe or suitable for general use. Keep the bird quite free from draughts, and great variations in day and night temperatures, and in the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, six each of syrup of squills and tincture of tolu, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and if not quite cured in that time, continue same medicine every second day for another week. Feed as frequently advised here, and if the bird is in a poor condition of body, you may also give her a small piece of bread and milk, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it three times a week for a fortnight. The fumigation you suggest can hardly be necessary, I think, and if anything of the kind is required a simple inhalation of eucalyptus and benzine would be better. You may try this if you wish, but be careful the bird does not get a chill after it. Place twenty drops of tincture of benzine and ten of eucalyptus oil in a teacup, fill nearly full of boiling water, and stir well. Now place cage containing bird on a table, with the cup standing in front, but not close enough for the bird to touch it, and cover all over with a shawl or blanket. After ten or fifteen minutes remove the cup, but allow the cover to remain another ten minutes or so. It is best to keep the cage covered lightly over for a day or two after this treatment.

Preventing Rust.

D. Todd.—I do not know any good method of permanently preventing rust appearing on the wires of cage fronts other than using tinned wire and bars and keeping the fronts free from damp when stored away, and, of course, wiping the cage fronts dry regularly after the birds have been bathing. You can get wirework fronts, which are tinned all over after the front is made, so that there is no place for rust to get a start. Another plan would be to paint them over with "Moronite" when new. This is an invisible lacquer varnish which prevents rust or tarnish for a very long time, but I should not like to call it quite a permanent protection. I have never tried the aluminium paints, so cannot express an opinion, beyond saying that the method does not appeal to me. I should prefer a good, hard drying enamel of the Brunswick Black kind. A black wire, mark you, shows up the birds far better than a shiny one.

Making a Start.

Novice.—In selecting the Border Fancy, you have hit upon a very nice variety to start with, as it is not only a good breeder which gives little trouble, but is hardy and active. I am sorry I cannot give you the names of particular breeders here; but look in our ANNUAL, under the review of the year, for this variety, and note who have been most successful as breeders and exhibitors, and you may also profitably consult our advertisement columns weekly, and select a breeder who has a reputation to maintain, and write for a quotation for a pair, or what you require, of birds. Tell him what class of bird you desire, and what you want to breed, and leave the selection to him. You may, if you like, put a limit on the price you are prepared to pay, but a decent type of bird will probably not come less than 30s. or 40s. per pair, and may be much more than that. Note: If you ask to have birds selected to breed even marks, do not expect to find the birds sent even-marked ones—probably this would not be the case.

Two Gone Wrong.

"Constant Reader."—(1) Your treatment of this bird was quite unnecessary, as it is clearly not egg-bound. Feed and treat as advised to "H.S."" except that in your case the staple diet should consist of three parts Canary to one part rape. You evidently mated her before she was ready, as if she is not braced up and began nesting, I would advise you to separate her for a fortnight or three weeks whilst you are giving the above-named treatment a fair trial. Keep in a comfortable temperature, and avoid great and sudden fluctuations as carefully as you must do draughts. (2) The treatment of this bird is obviously incorrect. Feed same as advised for No. 1, but in this case omit the extra mixed seed twice a week, and give an extra spray of green food instead. Also give the salts and dandelion juice to this bird two days in every three for a week, and after this two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel every second day for a week, or fortnight if necessary, and on the alternate days twenty drops of chemical food.

Not Singing, etc.

Novice, H.W.B.—See that your seeds and water supply are above suspicion as regards their purity, and that the former is not visited and soiled by mice. Also see that the hens are not kept in a damp position, as this alone may be the cause of the diarrhœa. Feed the cock as advised to "A.A."; also give him the same medicines in the water. Feed the hens on plain Canary only as a staple. Give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it. Give no green food until quite recovered. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and six drops of dandelion juice for three consecutive days, and afterwards as much carbonate of bismuth in the water for a few days as will cover a sixpence. Twenty drop doses of chemical food every second day for a week or two will do good as a finish when the diarrhœa has stopped. If you have any doubt concerning the purity of your water supply, boil it all before use.

Those Substitutes Again.

New Subscriber.—I have no doubt whatever that the substitutes for egg, of which you sent recipes, would be very efficient articles for rearing young birds without the use of eggs if the parent birds took to them kindly and feed the young well with them. But in my experience, and I have put a few of these substitutes to a practical test, the "if" is a most important factor. If you were hand-rearing the birds so that you knew you were stowing the capacious maws of the young well, you would doubtless succeed in raising quite as good and robust young on the mixture as the parents would with egg-food. Still, for all this there are so many unexpected side issues to crop up that, whilst fully recognising the possibility of using such substitutes with unqualified success, I must advise you not to jump on to experimental ground with both feet at once. Go cautiously, and use substitutes at first experimentally on a portion of your stock only, at the same time treating them in every other respect the same as the other portion which are being fed on orthodox lines. Then you will be able to note results side by side, and either extend or curtail the use of substitutes as your experience decides. This method of procedure for one or two seasons is worth more than hundreds of volumes of precepts for carrying conviction.

About a Hartz Roller.

H.S.—It is more than likely that your management is the real cause of the bird not resuming its song. As you seem to think your kitchen may be too warm rather than otherwise, it seems fairly clear proof that the cause of the continual moulting is the excessive fluctuations which are apt to occur in kitchens where the place gets very hot by day, and is correspondingly cold at night. This must be remedied. Keep the bird well away from the fire, in a box cage, so that the heat where it is will keep as equable as possible night and day. Feed on a staple [illegible]re of two parts Canary to one part summer rape, and twice a week give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp and inga. Every second day for a fortnight give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of sherry and one of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with a few grains of gold of pleasure; on the alternate days give a spray of green food. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three days, and after this give twenty drops of the following mixture every second day until the feathers have quite ceased dropping. Mixture: Dissolve a pennyworth of citrate of iron and quinine in two tablespoonfuls of port wine. A Hartz Roller has no external captivating beauties; its beauty all lies in its vocal abilities. The colour is a very much washed-out yellow or buff, with no particular form of markings.

The Other Norwich.

L.S.—If there really is no draught which can affect the birds, there is practically certain to be considerable variations between the day and night temperature, or sudden fluctuations at other times. Do you use any kind of heating apparatus, which you only requisition on certain occasions? If you do this, it would quite account for your birds' protracted moulting. You must see that they are kept in an equable temperature, not necessarily overheated, but still comfortable, and free from chilliness. Feed on plain Canary only as a staple, and every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape seed, and on the alternate days until the moulting is stopped, half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, or egg food, in which two drops of sherry and one drop of cod liver oil emulsion have been well mixed. Twice a week give half a teaspoonful of hemp, and on each of the remaining days a spray of green food. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice, and two each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel every second day for a fortnight, if necessary. On the alternate days give the old hen twenty drops of chemical food, and for the young one, which is also wheezy, instead of chemical food give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, six of oxymel of squils, and two of eucalyptus oil on the alternate days.

Singing Hen.

Blitey.—Am glad to hear you have been so successful in treating your bird on the advice given here for a similar case recently. There is really no foundation for the theory that a hen that sings is no use for breeding. It might be so in certain cases where the singing powers were developed after some abnormal condition of the ovaries, which is sometimes the case, but there are many so-called singing hens which would not come under this description, and which breed quite successfully. You should not attempt to mate the bird for two or three weeks after the plumage appears to have got quite fine, and as you must now allow the weather to get quite settled and mild before returning her to the cold room, it would be best to wait until the middle of April or thereabouts before mating her, and this will give you an opportunity to take advantage of a spell of mild weather at the beginning of April to return the bird to the room, and would avoid disturbing her unnecessarily after she is mated.

Diarrhœa and Cages.

Nulli Secundus.—It is more than likely the former is simply the effect of the latter, as it is extremely difficult to keep these tiny wicker cages in the least semblance of an hygienic condition, and the birds probably pick up and eat food soiled with excreta, which, of course, is responsible for the diarrhœa, and sooner or later will doubtless be responsible for a far more fatal epidemic. Be warned in time. These cages are just tolerable for conveying the birds in transit from place to place; for regular use they are abominations. If you kept the birds in proper cages, and cut the linseed out of the staple diet you would find the trouble vanish. If you cannot do this, keep the cage floors as clean as possible by scraping out at least once every day; strew well with gritty sand, cut the linseed out of the staple diet, and give instead twice a week half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and maw. This will probably stop the looseness recurring. If it should not, when another attack occurs give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence in the drinking water for one day, and afterwards about the same quantity of carbonate of bismuth for a day or two.

Not Singing.

"Songster."—The real cause of the bird's not singing is probably some error of diet or management, as the injury to its foot would not affect its singing powers so long after the injury had been cured. The seed mixture you use is not quite suitable for constant, regular use. Try the following treatment for a few weeks, and note the effect. For staple diet, give a mixture of three parts canary seed to one part summer rape, and twice a week give a small teaspoonful of the mixture you now use as a staple for a treat. Every second day for a week, and twice a week afterwards, give half a teaspoonful of egg-food or crushed spongo cake, with four drops of sherry well mixed in it, and a few grains of gold of pleasure seed sprinkled over it. Give a scrap of green food three or four times a week. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the following week give four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day, and on the alternate days two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel.

Lies on Her Back.

J. Alcom.—Your bird must be an avine suffragette, or something of this modern description, as it is most exceedingly rare to find a bird acting in this unseemly manner. Candidly, I do not care to hazard a guess as to what may be wrong with her, in the absence of any information as to how she is fed, where she is kept, and whether she has had any accident or not. Also, it would be useful to know how old she is, whether plump and fat, or wasted, and whether she was "flighted" or not last moult. In the latter case, if the operation was unskilfully performed the wings were probably permanently crippled. Try the following treatment for a fortnight, and if the hird has not improved in that time, write again and give the above particulars, and also refer to this reply. Staple diet, plain canary only. In additiou, give every second day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of port wine and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it. On the alternate days between this give a spray of green food. Limit diet to this; keep in moderate size cage, and supply clean, gritty sand. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsoin salts every second day the first week, and every third day the second week, and on the intervening days give two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel.

Pecking at Feathers, etc.

Novice.—The cage in which you first had the bird was in all probability infested with red mites, which were the cause of the irritable condition of the bird. A colony of these mites had also probably located themselves around the nail on which the cage hung, or on the wall at the back of the cage, and when the bird was changed into the clean cage the pest promptly took up new quarters in it, and thus continued, with scarcely any break, to plague the occupant. Examine well, and if you find this is the case, change the cage again for a thoroughly clean and disinfected one, but take the precaution of giving the bird a bath daily for a few days, in which a few quassia chips have been soaked before putting it in the clean cage; then, before hanging the cage in position, see that the nail and surrounding wall space are perfectly clean and free from any mites. Feed on a diet of plain canary seed only as a staple, and give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, the same quantity of hemp once a week, and three times a week give half a teaspoonful of egg-food, with a few grains of gold of pleasure sprinkled over it. Give green food every second day. In the drinking water give ten drops of dandelion juice, and as much Epsom salts every second day, for a week, as will cover a sixpence, and on the alternate days two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel. As regards a mate for the other bird, as you give me absolutely no idea of the colour or marking or parentage of it, I can only say you should mate it to a Norwich Plainhead hen, of the opposite type—then if your bird is a yellow, mate it with a buff hen, and if yours is a clear bird, let the hen be a ticked or lightly variegated one, and vice versa.

Seeds and Heat.

"Star."—(1) All the samples are of very poor quality, being small, in at least two cases (Nos. 1 and 3) very small indeed, and thin in substance. They appear clean and bright, and all except No. 1, which is a little doubtful, are quite sweet, which is the only good quality they possess. No. 2 is the best sample, and worth the extra money, but even this is very poor. (2) The aviary you wish to heat is very small, and any oil stove arrangement inside fitted with a proper cover and flue would take up a disproportionate amount of space in such a small place, so that I would advise you to put in a small portable hot water apparatus which can be heated by an oil stove kept in a little chamber adjoining the wall outside the bird room in such a position that it can be protected from wind and weather. If you cannot arrange some system of this kind I would rather advise you to give up the idea of heating it at all, although you think it seems so cold. Of this you may be quite sure — a cold room without draughts is infinitely preferable to a warm room

A Point about Pairing.

No Name.—Am sorry I cannot quite understand your query. You ask how to pair your birds, and then go on to say you have a Cinnamon cock and hen to match, etc. Of course, if the birds match each other, that is all you need. You certainly do not want to put together a pair of birds that do not match. If you are doubtful about the Yorkshires, your best plan is to pair the green cock with the buff hen, and get a buff cock for the yellow hen. If this is marked at all, even only slightly ticked, you should mate her with a clear cock, as you will have plenty of marks in the young from the green cock to deal with next year. By the way, if it is the actual procedure of putting the birds together that you enquire about, I may say that if you use double breeders, put the hen in one compartment, and the cock in the other, with the wire slide between. Feed the birds generously until they both seem anxious to start nesting at once, the cock continually singing lustily at the hen through the wires, and calling her to take food from his beak, and the hen on her part frequently flying to the partition and responding promptly to his calls, and allowing him to feed her through the wires. When they are in this condition draw the wire slide out, and let them run together, when they will probably set to work at once. If you use single breeders, put the hen in the breeder, and the cock in a small wire cage, and hang the latter on to the front of the breeder until you see the birds acting as just described, when you may turn the cock in with the hen.

Brevities.

Sample of Hemp (F. Chadwick).—The sample of hemp sent shows a seed of poor quality. Apart from its age, it contains a rather large proportion of unripened grain, and the husk of a large proportion is damaged, allowing the air to get at and deteriorate the kernel. The latter is really the chief objection to old hemp seed. The seed you have may do to use up in limited quantities for common stock, but I would not advise you to feed valuable birds with it.

Would Not Sit (G. E. L.).—Sorry I know of no method of making your hen sit, and hatch out her eggs if she is not inclined to do so. Beyond seeing that the nest is clean and free from insect pests, and in such a position that the bird can have a certain amount of privacy when sitting on it, and not be scared by people moving about in the vicinity, you can do nothing at all to compel her to sit. If she is a valuable bird, and worth the trouble, your only plan is to do as you did last season, and mate up another hen to hatch and rear the young of this one.

Swollen Gland (Miss R. Morton).—Unless there appears a distinct "head" or "core" on the swelling you should not attempt to prick it. Anoint it daily with carbolised vaseline—or Zambuk, if handy, would do—and if it should break anoint it afterwards with a little cold cream. Feed the bird for the present on plain Canary only, with a spray of green food daily, and a small teaspoonful of summer rape seed twice a week. Every second day for a week, or until swelling has begun to subside, give a small piece of bread and milk, slightly dusted over with flowers of sulphur. Keep the bird in a comfortable temperature and free from draughts and damp. When the swelling subsides feed more generously on the lines frequently mentioned here, and give four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid in the water every second day for a week, and on the alternate days twenty drops of chemical food, continuing latter for two or three weeks. Should the bird commence moulting after this, treat as advised to "Anxious" for "A Persistent Moulter" in our last issue.

A Probable Error (W.W.).—I imagine you must have made a mistake in thinking the cock turned such a cad as soon as the babies arrived as to make the hen feed him until she had nothing left for the young. The probability is that what really happened was the cock carrying good supplies of food to the hen, and handing them over to her as it were, to be distributed amongst the family. However, as he wanted to usurp her place on the nest at the same time, and she would feed the young quite well without him, you did quite right to remove him, and leave her to rear the young alone. You may return him to the cage when the young are from twelve to fourteen days old, when he will probably lend a hand in feeding, and finish off the brood if they require any attention after the hen has gone to nest again. Watch him for the first day after returning him, and you will soon see whether he will be safe to leave with the young.

Egg Substitute (A. J. Shipton).—Yes, I think the food a very good substitute for fresh egg and biscuit, and where biscuit is used instead of bread-crumbs there is probably nothing to choose between them. You should not give a very full feed last thing at night. It would be much better to give a small quantity which the birds will clear up before breakfast time next morning, then a full feed at breakfast, and another small ration at tea-time. If you cannot see them at breakfast-time, I would advise giving a good feed before leaving in the morning; leave instructions with those who will be at home to give just a small quantity of fresh green-stuff at breakfast, remove all stale bits, and give a bit more fresh at mid-day. When you return empty and clean egg-drawers, and give about as much fresh egg-food as will be cleared up before roost-time; last thing at night repeat this operation, but give only a very small quantity of egg, as the birds will not require much before having the early morning supply.

Changed Conditions (R. Aitchison).—It is the changed conditions from comparative freedom to caged life that are the cause of your bird's condition. Repeat the dose of Epsom salts you gave before writing every second day for a week, and every third day afterwards as long as the sluggishness appears to return. Feed on plain Canary only for a week, and give a spray of green food, tender young groundsel if you can obtain it, every day, and a pinch of inga three times during the week. After a week or so of this treatment gradually return to usual routine diet frequently given in this column, but continue to use green food rather freely until all danger of constipation recurring has passed.

Another Moulter (W. G. Buck).—See reply to "H.S.," and feed and treat the Yorkshire cock as there advised. I think it is most probable that the change from the aviary to an all-wire cage in the kitchen is the indirect cause of the mischief, the bird being in this new position and in an open cage far more fully exposed to all variations of heat and draughts. It would be far better to keep him in a box cage, which should be hung well away from fire, where the extremes of temperature are not so violent, and well out of all draughts. If you attend to these points, and follow treatment named for two or three weeks, the bird should soon get right.

Lancashires v. Yorkshires (C.W.G.).—There is, I think, very little to choose in these two breeds as regards the ease or otherwise with which they may be bred. The Lancashire is, perhaps, not quite so productive, but, all round, I should say the one was no more difficult to breed than the other. The comparative value of the breeds is undoubtedly chiefly governed by the limited supply of Lancashires as compared with the Yorkshire, which is one of our commonest breeds. For a beginning I would advise you to get good, active and healthy hens from eighteen months to two years old for this year's mating, and cocks not younger than the first brood of 1908. Many thanks for kind remarks re CAGE BIRDS and these columns.

A Surplus Hen (A.C.T.).—Your hen is not necessarily too old to breed successfully at six years old providing she is strong, healthy, and active. Still, as you have already two pairs, I would scarcely advise you to get another cock on the chance of this hen breeding. Instead of doing this, wait until the two hens that are paired have begun to sit, and then if either of the cocks are too medlesome, and interfere with the hens whilst sitting, remove him and leave the hen to hatch and rear the brood alone. You will then be able to pair the cock with this old hen in the interval, and if she is any use at all for breeding she should be gone to next and sitting before the other hen is ready to have the cock returned to her. The old hen, of course, would, in turn, be left to hatch and rear by herself.

Cock or Hen? (Jonathan).—I fancy the bird is a cock. See reply to "J.C," for differences. But with a bird evidently in high condition, you could soon satisfy yourself by hanging an undoubted hen in a small cage on the front of the breeder, when, if the hen was in anything like breeding condition, the cock after a violent outburst of song would probably be feeding her through the wires in a very short time. Singing hens vary a good deal in their capabilities; most of them merely utter a more or less prolonged twitter, and it is not often that one finds much, if any, of the throbbing and inflation of the throat. In exceptionally rare cases, however, they run a cock rather closely in their vocal performances.

Nest Boxes v. Pans. (G.W.B.).—I certainly think the earthenware pans would be much preferable to the boxes, of which you send a sketch. The boxes are badly shaped, and besides taking up an undue amount of nesting material, the isolated spaces in each corner would probably afford an harbour for countless red mites. If you refer to "Canary Breeding for Beginners" again, I think you will find the boxes there advised a very different shape to those you have, the front and sides being put on at an oblique angle, so that the bottom of the box is smaller than the top; whereas, all four sides of your boxes appear to be put on at right angles.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

A Quartette.

A. G. Kent.—1: Judging from your description and the feathers sent, I should say that the Mule is a Greenfinch-Canary. 2: He has gone into a "cross-moult" (a moult out of season), probably due to the changeable weather; or perhaps you have just bought him, and he had previously been used to a heated room. You can only wait for him to go through with it. Stir a small teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food into his drinking water on alternate days. You would be well advised to put him in a room which is not "dead cold." 3: The absence of song may be due to the extreme severity of the weather, and the Thrushes may "tune up" again, as soon as springlike conditions prevail. Mix a small half-teaspoonful of the chemical food into their soft food daily for two or three weeks. 4: The seed is a very fair sample, but contains millet (which is no use) and too much linseed; niger, too, should not be given in a stock mixture. I have frequently advised a mixture for Mules.

A Nuthatch.

Snob.—Your bird won't sleep in the seed-box if you supply a "tube" of bark; the latter they require to "run" on, not being perching birds, like Goldfinches. I let mine have one perch in the cage, however. The insectivorous class is the correct one. There is no regulation size and pattern of show cage. A box-pattern cage, about 15 or 16 in. long by 14 high by 9 wide, would answer well, with a piece of bark (as flat as possible) fixed to the back so that the bird cannot get behind it, and water and food vessels which fit inside, preferably swing-in from the front. The inside and wires should be enamelled white. In the stock cage the Virginian cork (or bark) should be semi-circular in form, and arranged so that a "tube" is left at the back, down which the Nuthatch may pop when so disposed. An entrance hole should be arranged at the top (not over large), and another near the bottom. I strongly advise you to have two pieces of cork (or "bark," as some term it) and change them fairly frequently, thoroughly scalding the one last used with boiling water, or stoving it for a time in a fairly warm oven. This is necessary to keep down insect pests. The bird is very fond of bathing, and should be allowed to freely. Its main food should be good quality insectivorous mixture, such as is supplied to small softbill birds, moistened with grated raw carrot, or finely-chopped lettuce, or other green-food. Several very good "soft-foods" will be found advertised in our columns. Suitable live-foods must also be given, according to season, and a few small nuts (cracked, if necessary) and sunflower and hemp seeds. One particular favourite I had, possessed a wonderful appetite, and very varied tastes. He liked (in addition to the above things) hard-boiled eggs, bits of cake, currants and things, all sorts of nuts (especially the mixed shelled nuts from the greengrocers), mealworms, live ants' eggs, wasp grub, beetles, flies and tiny beetles, and many kinds of fruit, peeled grapes being a "speciality."

Points About Muling.

Leo.—1 and 2, Your indoor place would hold about a dozen hen Canaries, with, say, four cock Goldfinches, and four cock Linnets. You don't want to overcrowd, by any means, or you will seriously jeopardise your chances of success. If possible, turn in all the birds at once, or the cock Finches, at any rate, for I have found the introduction of a strange cock Finch, after the others have got settled down in a place, sometimes leads to his being attacked and chivvied about. 3, You would probably have a fair amount of luck with the birds flying loose, providing you put up a good number of nest-boxes (about twice as many as there are hens), and kept an eye open for quarrelsome customers, especially hens squabbling for possession of the same nest-box. If paired up in cages, one has the birds better under control. 4, I should use a thick layer of coarse-cut pine sawdust on the floor, and keep plenty of gritty sand in various parts of the place (also cuttlefish), say in cigar boxes, which have had the lids removed, or in any suitable dish.

Puzzlers.

J.D.—I cannot, frankly speaking, quite fathom your questions. Are you trying to "pull my leg," or has someone been filling you up with high-flown yarns? Exhibition Goldfinches are not made with "chemicals," or produced "artificially," as your letter would lead one to assume you thought to be the case. However, here goes! 1, I do not know of any "chemical" which will "increase the blaze" of a Goldfinch. I wish I did. One has to take it as Nature made it. Colour-food (the ordinary "red-feed," or "sweet pepper" of the fancier), will deepen the colour of a Goldfinch's wing-bars and body chestnut, but it also clouds its whites, and does not, in my experience, do the blaze any good—rather the contrary, in fact. The thing to do is to get a jonque (rich coloured) Finch with a big blaze to start with; then, given a good moult, neither "chemicals," nor colour-food is required. 2, It certainly is not necessary "to wash Goldfinches every day for them to keep their colour good, and enable them to moult well." If by "wash" you mean let them have the opportunity to bathe, then I certainly say do so. But "wash" to the fancier conveys hand-washing. 3, I know of no "chemical" that will "brighten the blaze and clean it." One needs to get a bird with a bright, clean-coloured blaze to commence with. It won't go dirty; at least, soap and water will suffice to do all the cleansing required.

In a Greenhouse.

R.H.S.N.—Greenhouses, as a general rule, are not very suitable places to keep birds in, but yours seems likely to be a success, judging from the description given. I think the ventilation would be ample; the door could be left open in very hot weather, a wired frame (or false door) being fitted into the door frame. You would need to cover the glass (inside) with half-inch mesh wire, both as a precaution against breakage, and to prevent the birds dashing against the glass. I think you would find it necessary to whiten the roof in summer, or shade it in some way. You might keep a pair each of Goldfinches, Bullfinches, Linnets, and Redpolls, along with a collection of small foreign birds; also one or two pairs of Canaries. The latter would be more likely to breed than the Britishers. You will have to get your list from Mr. W. T. Page, our foreign bird specialist, to whom I will send your query, and he will doubtless reply next week. Why not get a copy of his book from this office, "Foreign Birds for Beginners"? It would help you very much. Parrots in cages would hardly do, I am afraid, for if any tiny birds flew on the latter, they would stand a chance of getting mauled; Mr. Page will tell you for certain.

Three Points.

A Fancier.—I hope you will have success with your British birds. 1: Yes, there are certainly "exhibition points" to consider in connection with British birds—that is, if you want them for show. Last year CAGE BIRDS published a number of "charts" describing both pictorially and by means of letterpress the correct show points (also common failings) of certain of the best known British birds. These you could obtain from the office, and would find exceedingly useful. "Standards" are published in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, and these also you might peruse with advantage. 2: The only way for a novice to learn whether he has bred a good Mule or not, is either to submit it to an expert fancier (two, if you like), or to trot around a good show or two, and size up the winners on view thereat. He should, of course, take steps to learn at the earliest possible moment what constitutes a good bird of any cross he may be trying for. A study of the coloured plates of Mules and Hybrids which have been issued by CAGE BIRDS would be very helpful. If you join a good cage bird society, you will have no difficulty in getting a reliable opinion from some member or other. 3: There is a vast difference between Siberian and British Goldfinches. The former are twice the size of the latter, and much more white-looking in appearance.

A Seed Mixture, etc.

New Reader.—1, I often explain that it is wasteful, consequently expensive, to use a seed mixture in a large aviary containing many species of birds. The best method is to give the principal seeds (say canary, teazle, hemp, summer rape, charlock, and sunflower, or preferably, a mixture of half-sunflower and half safflower) in separate hoppers or dishes, and throw a little of the other seeds in occasionally, by way of a change, or as "tit-bits," as fanciers say. If you must have your seed-mixture, then for a varied collection of Finches, you will find it difficult to beat this: Canary and teazle three pints each, hemp two pints, summer rape and charlock one pint each, linseed half-a-pint, with about a half-pint of mixed sunflower and safflower seeds, increasing or decreasing the quantity of these latter according to whether the birds eat it all up or not—it depends on the composition of the collection, as some birds like these seeds more than others. The other seeds—niger, maw, wild seeds, wild seed mixture, etc.—you can give now and again, as indicated above. The exact quantity of hemp should vary according to the season (less in summer than in winter). A little more linseed is also useful during the moult. 2, You will find the following colours very hard to beat (I presume you refer to show cages): Very dark green for Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Linnet, and Bramblefinch (many use it for all Finches), with a light (not too light) blue for the Siskin, Greenfinch and Chaffinch.

Sex of Linnets, etc.

W. Clements.—I have not as yet heard of a Hybrid being bred from a cock Linnet and hen Chaffinch. Nothing like trying, though. As regards sexing Linnets, the best guide for the novice is to choose a bird with a good edging of white to the tail feathers, and which has the white on the flight (wing) feathers extending right back to the quill (shaft), and white underneath the wing as well as on top. The hens are grey in colour, and heavily streaked with markings on the breast; the cock has a nut-brown back and wing butts, and signs of red are to be observed on the breast feathers, especially if ruffled with a finger, and at the end of winter and the approach of the breeding season, the breast of the cock becomes very perceptibly red. On the breast of the cock the tips of the feathers have a "mooned" appearance—an edging of colour disposed in a shape resembling that of the new moon. Any red feathers on the breast infallibly denote a cock—unless, of course, the "red" has been applied by human hands. A three-year-old cock Linnet in the breeding season develops a really gorgeous crimson head and breast. To sum up: in an adult bird always look for good whites, a rich nut-brown back, and a "mooned" breast, and you can't go wrong.

Seeds for Bullfinch.

J.W.P.—I certainly think "a large percentage of hemp seed" is bad in the stock mixture for a Bullfinch. They get very fat and wheezy, as a rule, on excess of it, and specially if kept in but a small cage. Probably you will know, too, that it is well established that excess of hemp affects the colour of the Bullfinch, and will even cause it to moult out black, or partially black. I have found that safflower and sunflower seeds are far better than hemp, as a regular thing, for the Bullfinch. The following would make your bird an excellent stock mixture, and any good seedsman would put it up for you. Canary and teazle three pints of each, linseed, summer rape, and charlock, half a pint of each, safflower and sunflower a quarter pint of each. In a tin you could keep a mixture of niger two parts, maw three parts, and give a pinch twice a week, also a little hemp once a week. Then you have thistle and dandelion seed and wild seed mixture, small feeds of which may also be occasionally given. For green foods give any of the following, according to season: — Shepherd's purse, dandelion, groundsel tops, chickweed, flowering grasses, watercress, lettuce, rape or Canary seedlings, etc. The seeding kinds may be freely given. Bullies are very fond of many berries (black, privet, etc.), also fruit, and the buds of fruit trees and bushes; on such things they feed largely when wild. Charlock, dock, thistles, hardheads, and many other wild seeding plants; these birds are also very fond of, likewise, mealworms.

Eight all at Once.

Novice.—Eight questions at once are too many, three being supposed to be the limit. 1: Yes, if steady. 2: You might possibly succeed indoors, but if you get good eggs from the Bramblefinch-Chaffinch pair you would have to provide a hen Canary to sit on them and rear the young. 3: I give a little egg-food to those muling Finches (any species or sex) which I find will eat it. 4: British birds require other seeds than just plain Canary—hemp, teazle, charlock, summer rape, linseed, sunflower, thistle, maw, niger, etc. Note other replies this week. 5: See reply to "New Reader" for a good mixture. 6: If in a really large aviary, a collection of Canaries and British Finches will be found to agree very well. Odd birds often, however, prove very quarrelsome and aggressive, and these are best removed. Beware of odd (unmated) birds—such as, for instance, two cock Bullfinches and only one hen. 7: Have never seen a Bramblefinch-Canary Mule yet, nor heard of one, so can't answer this. 8: You write: "Are Canarics away to hens when muling?" I can't understand this, and am afraid you must have omitted some word or words, or else you meant to have written "always." If the latter is the case, then I may say that Mules are sometimes bred from cock Canaries and British Finch hens, but not very often.

Brevities.

Blackbird and Two Thrushes (F.A.M.).—1, The Blackbird will sing right enough when it becomes steady and used to cage life. You are feeding it wretchedly, however. Note the reply given "C. Morgan," in last week's issue. 2, The Missel Thrush is much larger than the Song Thrush, and ashy-grey in colour by comparison. It has white tips to the outer tail feathers, and is white on the undersides of the wings. The sexes are alike in plumage.

A Linnet (Birdy Man).—I really cannot quite comprehend what you mean by "poor feathers." Are the feathers broken, or "slack" and untidy, or has the bird bare patches? If slack and untidy, then I should suspect the presence of redmites, the usual, and often unsuspected cause of this trouble. When these pests are exterminated, and the bird is allowed to bathe freely (or is sprayed) its plumage should be all right. Why not feed it as I recommended the other week?

Thrush Ailing (H. Hickling).—You do not give any particulars which help me. Are its bowels in proper order? Does it seem to have a cold? One cannot, of course, guess these things. If your scullery is heated, then putting the bird outside now and again, during severe weather, would be certain to bring you trouble. Try the chemical food, as advised "A. G. Kent" (answer to question 3) this week, and write me again if necessary, giving fuller details.

Will He Breed? (G.W.B.).—There is no reason whatever why a Goldfinch caught last October should not breed Mules this coming season, providing he is of a "kind" disposition—that is, has settled down to cage life, and is getting stout in song. "Feed him up" as advised "Tommy Burns" last week.

Linnet and Goldfinch (G.L.R.).—No doubt you would note that last week I gave the method of feeding Linnets in the reply to "Started," and that for the Goldfinch in the reply to "Tommy Burns."

Bullfinch Ailing (Will).—Possibly the bird had been used to a heated room, and you placed it in a cold one. If it seems all right in plumage, that is, tight and sleek, then try for 10 to 12 days a good half-a-teaspoonful of the following mixture in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water; One ounce each of glycerine, oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine. Keep the bird in a warmed room. Give him a little ripe fruit daily.

Mating Matters (Plasterer).—You could mate the cock Chaffinch with the hen Bramblefinch, and the cock Redpoll with the hen Greenfinch. The cock Goldie you could fix up with either a hen Canary or a hen Bullie, and the two cock Greenfinches the same. All these couples would be likely breeders. The cock Goldie would, of course, also mate with the hen Greenie; if you pair him with her, then put a small hen Bullie with the Redpoll cock.

"Cock" Skylark and an Egg (L. Miller).—I certainly have never known of a hen Skylark singing so well all one summer out of doors, and for the winter indoors, as to deceive its owner into believing it a cock, and then to go and present him with an egg. I have never known a female Lark to "sing well." True, I never have kept any number of Larks. Possibly some Lark fanciers who happen to read this will tell us if they have known of a similar case.

Linnet "Queer" (Morley).—Are you sure the Linnet is not pestered with redmite? It is quite possible for one bird out of a number to get infested. The "blowing himself out and shaking himself" reads as though this were the case. As a tonic, get one ounce of crystals of citrate of iron and quinine from a chemist, and dissolve as much as will just cover a sixpence in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water (use a glass or pot vessel only). Continue using for 12 or 14 days, watching its effects on the bowels.

Ailing Goldfinch (W.C.C.).—Let the bird have plenty of thistle seed, teazle, niger, and cracked hemp. For three days stir a small teaspoonful of dandelion juice (taraxacum), from the chemist, into its drinking water, and afterwards give the iron and quinine, as recommended in the reply to "Morley," this week. He ought to pull round, I think.

Mating and Showing (S.W.E.).—1, It certainly is quite possible to mate a hen Canary to a cock Goldfinch, even though a cock Canary is within earshot. Probably the hen will not take the slightest notice of the latter; still, you must not forget that sometimes they fall in love with the voice of the charmer. 2, I would rather say nothing about the "dressing" of Goldfinches for exhibition, if you don't mind. If your bird commences to moult early, and bathes freely, you will have nothing to worry about.

A Trio (Timothy).—1, It is nonsense for anyone to say that cock Goldfinches will not breed during their first year in captivity. Why, Greypates, such as you bought last September, are about the best once can try with. Go ahead. 2, If you have won a first prize in open competition, then I am afraid you cannot again exhibit as a "novice." In some societies, however, a "champion" in British birds can be a "novice" in Canaries. 3, The bird must have had its wing broken at the shoulder (put out of joint), and you cannot remedy this now.

Goldfinch and Thrush (E.J.T.).—1, I hardly understand this; personally I should call a Goldfinch which sleeps during the daytime very queer indeed. Try the food, dandelion juice, and iron and quinine recommended "W.C.C." this week. 2, I don't know whether I should interfere, as only local applications would be of service, such as painting the places lightly twice daily with a camel-hair brush dipped in an astringent lotion, say sulphate of zinc (or "red") lotion, from the chemist

Blackcap Not Singing (W.E.A.).—It is a puzzle I cannot solve, I am afraid. The hen Blackcap Warbler has the crown of the head a distinct rusty-brown colour, not black at all. I give my own Blackcaps very considerably more ripe fruit than you seem to be doing; they are great fruit-eaters. Possibly bird No. 2 will break into song very soon now.

Goldfinch Ailing (E.M.W.).—Treat your bird exactly as advised "W.C.C." this week. You would be wise to feed him on the lines I lay down; also to give him all the early dandelion leaves (or a daily feed) you can find, taking care it is not in a frosted condition when offered. I hope you pull him together.

A Pairing Point (Mrs. Sandell).—You write: "Can I breed with a hen Goldfinch and cock Linnet and cock Canary?" Do you mean let the hen have two husbands at one and the same time? If so, then I am afraid it won't work. The hen would probably be pleased with either; but there would be hair flying if you left all three together. Linnet-Goldfinch Hybrids are pretty little birds. Why not try for them?

About a Linnet (J. Patchett).—No doubt you would notice that I dealt fully last week (reply to "Started") with the feeding of the Linnet. I should not care to try to breed with a Linnet which has damaged its wing to such an extent that it cannot fly. If your bird is so nervous that he is "always in the cage bottom, seldom perching," then I am afraid he does not promise to be a success at Mule breeding. He would, perhaps, be newly caught when you bought him 10 weeks ago.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

A Feather Puller.

Despair.—Make sure and keep a good supply of seed mixture in cage, and I should continue to use the quassia solution. I should also give a dose of Dinneford's magnesia frequently, but not sufficiently often to occasion diarrhœa. It will be some time before it gets over the effect of its former unwholesome diet—though the bread and water will not harm it. Make the water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's chemical food before soaking the bread in it. The bird's drinking water can also be treated the same way. In addition to your diet, supply boiled maize; boil till soft, drain off all water, and dust with flowers of sulphur. Note: The maize only keeps fresh one day, and the food vessel must be kept strictly clean. Report progress in a month's time.

Seed Samples, Budgerigars, etc.

"Donabate."—As regards the hemp, I preferred sample No. 1; both samples contained more pale green seeds than I care to see. As regards the millet, samples No. 1 and 4 were the best, and I rather incline to advise you to supply these half and half. It is a decided advantage to ring young Budgerigars, and if you have a distinctive ring for each nest, you can then be sure of securing unrelated pairs for your own stock, and also for sending away. This is a very difficult question to answer from the data you supply. It largely depends on the size of your aviary, providing the birds have room to get out of another's way. I do not think either the single Ringneck or a pair would interfere with your Budgerigars, but if the aviary is small a pair of Rosellas would be quite as handsome and much safer. Value depends entirely on the market, sometimes as low as 10s. a pair, at others double or more. The hen Ringneck has no ring; this is also the case with young males. Diet: Seed mixture, canary, millet, oats, hemp, wheat, maize, and sunflower seeds, in about equal parts, well mix, and let this be your staple food. Also supply plain biscuit, nuts, fruit, cuttlefish, and grit, with regular supplies of water for drinking and bathing. The above diet will not hurt your other birds if they partake of it. Note: There is so much character and individuality among Parrakeets that no large species should be left among smaller species till their demeanour has been ascertained.

A Grey With Running Eyes.

H. H.—You cannot do better than continue treatment already advised. The seed you name will give a sufficient variety; only supply those it at present refuses in very small quantity. You can get over the eye trouble by saturating a feather in the solution and letting the liquid run into the eye from the upper lid; also stroke the solution into the bare skin round the eye. I cannot remember the whole detail of my previous reply, but if spraying with quassia solution, was not advised, I certainly now advise you to spray the whole of the plumage with this, twice weekly, keeping the bird carefully out of draught till dry. Your bird will certainly be one by itself if it will not take grapes, and one thing leads to another; it will be the better for fruit, and I should continue to tempt it with such varieties as you have for general use. With returning health the plumage will improve, and I do not think you have any cause for alarm. Do not be tempted to give slops or messes under any condition, and I opine your bird will gradually recover condition. Keep up the chemical food, and also let the cuttlefish hang in its cage.

Violet-necked Lory, etc.

E.D.P.—Milk sop must be the main diet of this bird, supplemented by such ripe fruit as it will eat. It can also have the seed and insectivorous food. Prepare the milk sop so: take plain crushed biscuit, sugar, and the requisite quantity of milk, put in a pannikin and boil, and, when cool, supply to the bird. So prepared, I have not found it to go dry during the hottest days we get in this country. I cannot give you the sexual distinctions at the moment, but will do so in some near issue. Keep the bird out of draught, and in a room where the temperature is as even as possible. Get a camel-hair brush and bathe the nostrils with diluted glyco-thymoline twice a day—well cleansing the brush for each occasion. Put six drops of glycerine in two tablespoonfuls of water, and let this form its drinking water, giving a fresh supply daily for several days. (2) Glad to note the Tricolour Tanager is doing so well. Gradually discontinue the sulphur, but I should continue to use the chemical food till the bird is in full plumage, when this also can be gradually discontinued. Let the Tanager have as much ripe fruit as it chooses to eat.

Brevities.

What Parrakeet? ("Sirron Duob").—(1) It is a Red Rosella, a native of Australia, quite hardy and a free breeder in an outdoor aviary, suitably furnished with logs. (2) There are very few Gouldian Finches about at the present time, and I question if you would get one under 20s. at the present time, though their usual value is little more than half that amount. The Parrakeet was very cheap if healthy.

Food and Treatment for Black-cheeked Lovebird (H.P.).—Keep carefully out of draught while the inclement weather lasts. Diet: Canary and white millet seed and a few oats, any kind of ripe fruit they will eat; but I expect preference will be shown to apple, cuttlefish, grit, and water. Treat similarly to Budgerigars, but of course till they are thoroughly acclimatised and carefully hardened off they must not be subjected to exposure. Their robustness or otherwise is not yet fully known.

A Mate For Orange Finch ("Orange Finch").—This name is quite new to me; I presume it is really an Orange Bishop or Weaver; it may possibly be a Saffron Finch, and I incline to the opinion that your bird is the latter. In such case try a Norwich Canary. The Saffron Finch is said to have crossed with the Canary. You might also try it with a Yellowhammer. I do not care to name a foreign Bunting to cross with it, as so few hens come over. The recent importation of Yellow-browed Buntings—were all males, I believe—and this is the case with many species, and I advise either the Canary or Yellowhammer.

Sketches (J. Kershaw).—Thanks for your interesting sketches, which we shall hope to publish in our next issue.

A Perch (R. H. Thompson).—Your idea is certainly a very good one, but we have already illustrated one or two perches which resemble it more or

The Black Canary Puzzle (R. L. Bruce).—We are under the impression the result did appear on the date spoken of; anyway, you will find it on page 177 of our issue for February 20th last. Evidently you overlooked it. Thanks for your kind remarks.

Our Thanks to T. Burton, A. Sands, W.E., and others, for interesting cuttings, photographs, etc.

Timber Merchant (John Dick).—The address you want is, we should think, Messrs. Cobbett and Co., Virginia-rd., Bethnal Green, London, E.

A Cure (Nemo).—We quite understand that your motives are excellent ones, but we regret to say that we cannot publish a letter such as yours—it would be so open to abuse by unscrupulous persons.

Photographs (A. Townsend).—We are very much obliged to you for sending the photographs, and should have liked to reproduce one of them, but unfortunately they are all too small, and not sufficiently clear. Note reply to R. Dallman.

A Law Case (Regular Reader and T.S.).—We are much obliged to you for the trouble you have taken in sending the cutting, and appreciate your motives, but really we have neither the time nor space to devote to correcting misrepresentations which, as you point out, are too obvious and malicious to deceive anyone.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WHAT IS THE RECORD?

SIR,—Could any of your readers tell me the earliest time they have known Goldie Mules to be hatched out? If they will reply through CAGE BIRDS I should be obliged.

ROWLEY ELSTON.

LIVERPOOL AMALGAMATED SHOW.

SIR,—I agree with Mr. Hadwin that an official explanation from the Garston Society would be welcomed by all local exhibitors who look forward to this annual event, why they, in their turn, did not have a show. I have been informed that someone (acting for Garston, I presume) wrote the late Bootle Secretary, who was away on his holidays, and did not consequently get the notice. But what I would like to know is, why the remaining societies did not have a show without Bootle? It certainly is very gratifying to the Bootle Club members to think an amalgamated show cannot be held in Liverpool without their (Bootle's) assistance. However, if the Secretaries concerned will kindly communicate with me I shall be delighted to let everyone interested see the Bootle boys and their birds are all on the job next New Year's Day.

HOW TO INDUCE LINNETS TO SING.

SIR,—Can any of your numerous readers advise me as to how best to induce my birds to sing? I have several Canaries and Linnets; the former sing right enough, but the Linnets won't. I bought them fresh caught about two years ago, and for a good time they sang well. But for a long time now they do nothing except tick-a-tick and tuck-a-tuck, and so on. One is a Redpoll, the other a Goss Linnet. I get the best of seed, as I think, packet and other mixtures, and keep birds in the window where, of course, there is plenty of light. Perhaps it is the position. Anyway, they won't sing their natural song, and when I can hear my friends' Linnets in full song, and mine only tick-a-tick and so on, I feel a bit downhearted. The advice of one of your numerous readers through the medium of your valuable journal will be greatly appreciated. I should like to get them right for Muling, if possible. They are young birds.

ANXIOUS.

PROPOSED NEW SOCIETY FOR DUNFERMLINE AND DISTRICT.

SIR,—Definite steps have now been taken in the formation of a Cage Bird Society for Dunfermline. At a well-attended meeting of fanciers, held in McGilvery's Temperance Hotel, on March 13th, a set of rules and regulations were read over and agreed upon. The following officials were appointed:—President, Mr. John Rankine; vice-presidents, Messrs. Henry Dunn and Alex. Howie; secretary and treasurer, Mr. R. Campbell; committee, Messrs. W. Malcolm, G. Rae, W. Peden, J. Hamstone, and A. Pringle. The society have got a good send-off, with a membership of 33. It has been named the "Dunfermline and District Cage Bird Society," with an eight miles radius from the "Cross." Now that the ball has been set a-rolling, it is to be hoped that all fanciers within the radius will come in and give the society their help, and let the old tradition of the City be upheld with a good progressive Cage Bird Society. To those who may desire any information re same please communicate with me at 19, Reid Street, Dunfermline.

ALLEGED EXHIBITING OF JUDGE'S BIRDS AT ARBROATH SHOW.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Strachan's letter under the above heading, would he please give the name of the gentleman who accuses him of exhibiting the judge's birds? But I don't expect he will; it would not suit his purpose. He asks me if I was the party who showed the birds. Na, Na, Mr. Strachan, I am not "having any"! He does not think it fair of me to play his trump card, but I have still the Jack left, and I intend playing that too, if necessary. He now believes the story has arisen from a disappointed exhibitor. Yes, it is a bag of mystery. He also states that a trusted official informed him that I said they were all frauds. I am very sorry for the length to which I would trust the official that made that statement, as his information is far from reliable. As regards my temper; am I to take it that Mr. S. is a judge of human flesh? Na, Na! it's not for him to judge. My temper is quite moderate compared with his at times. Mr. Strachan also states that he "hatched the present Society" and wants all fraudulent practices purged out of it. But why not prove first that such practices exist? He states that he could show my sporting spirit in connection with an incident at the 1906 show. He is quite justified as far as I am concerned. I expect he refers to a special prize; I am not responsible for what another says. I neither received nor asked for a special that I was not entitled to. What proof has Mr. Strachan shown us that his birds were poisoned before leaving the hall? His evidence on that point is as weak as the Horan Water. He states that it was proved up to the hilt by the Chief Constable and a solicitor that his birds were villainously poisoned and that he is certain he knows the party. Then why not convict him? I don't believe there is a solicitor or a "Bobby" in Arbroath who could tell an egg-bound hen at sight, far less a poisoned bird. Are we to take it that Mr. Strachan is an expert in poisons, seeing he did not require to have a small quantity of it analysed? The Arbroath fanciers are not the tender crowd that he makes out.

JAMES MILNE.

P.S.—Regarding the said-to-be dubious paragraph in my letter of 27th February, I regret that Mr. Strachan should think that it accused him of indulging in something stronger than lemonade. I fail to see in the said paragraph the interpretation that Mr. Strachan was the worse for alcohol.—J.M.

CAGE CLASSES AT THE PALACE SHOW.

SIR,—To clear ourselves from the complaint that was made to Mr. Ramsden re charges for packing cages, we may say that we exhibited at the 1908 show and received a number of orders for single cages, and we challenge anyone to prove that we ever asked or charged for packing. We consider it the duty of the cage maker to pack and put on rail orders for single cages at the price named on exhibits at the Palace, or any other show. If cage makers are to give a commission to wholesalers they can well afford to pack a cage for the retail customers. We should have replied to this before, but I have been confined to my bed since Xmas, this being the first chance I have had to do so. It was owing to this severe illness that we could not exhibit at the Palace this time. I think there should be one rule only for the cage classes, and that is, that the retail price should include packing and putting on rail, and anyone refusing to do this should not be allowed to exhibit.

HOW I FEED MY SKYLARKS.

SIR,—As I take in CAGE BIRDS every week and am keenly interested in the notices re the feeding of the Lark family, I thought I would just tell you my method, as it might be of some use to fanciers. As the Lark is my favourite bird, I have got seven altogether. I keep three in the kitchen and four in the back yard in a cage 4ft. long, 18in. wide, and 18in. high, and the birds are as straight as pins, and singing all day inside and outdoors, and the four out in the yard have been there all the winter. As to the food, I get 2lbs. of barley meal, 6ozs. of ants' eggs, 6ozs. of dried flies, 1lb. of Canary seeds, 1lb. of biscuits, and crush them up. I put it all in a wash-up basin, and mix well together, and then get ½lb. of lard, and, having melted it down, pour it in and mix it all well together. I have then food enough to last seven birds a month, and it will stand good, as there is nothing in it that will turn bad. I give the birds grated carrot along with this food, as much as the boxes will hold, and also a few mealworms, and a clover clod if I can get one. I always feed my birds in the morning, as this is the best time; I know some fanciers feed their birds at night, which I think it a little bit "off," as when you feed Larks at about 10 o'clock at night (and you should make the food a little damp), the food will go bad in the night, and not be fit for the bird to have in the morning. All my birds can be seen out every day in the summer, wet or fine.

SENDING BIRDS ON JOURNEYS.

SIR,—Might I, through CAGE BIRDS, ask advertisers why, when sending away birds, many of them will persist in putting them in wretchedly shallow boxes, oftentimes chocolate boxes, or such like, between two and three inches deep. Possibly they have a very long journey in such a cramped position, unable to stand upright, and with no space to move about. Small wonder, then, they so often reach their destination in a deplorable condition. What of the feelings of the buyer who, after paying carriage and expecting something good to look upon, receives such a bird? Another item I would call special attention to in regard to shallow boxes, is that when putting on the address label a very strict look-out should be taken that the points of the tin-tacks that are used do not penetrate the lid, as I have several times had them do so, the poor birds, therefore, being liable to be pricked with the sharp points about the head and body. Another matter I should like to put before readers is that in advertisements the county should be stated in all cases, as there are several places of the same name, although possibly wide apart. By its being omitted it often causes a lot of delay in delivery before the right one is found, and then perhaps the letter arrives too late.

THE KENT COUNTY C.B.A. SHOW RADIUS.

SIR,—As one of the committee of the Kent County C.B.A., and the mover of the resolution to alter Rule 7, kindly allow me the space in your columns to give my motive in doing this, and also to voice the opinion of not a few of the members on points vital to the interests of the Society. I will preface my remarks by saying that two years ago I gave up exhibiting, another movement claiming my spare time. So I am not actuated by personal motives, but as convener of the first meeting of the Society I still retain my interest in its welfare. My attention was drawn to the report of Colchester Members' Show, held on December 3rd, wherein the name of one of our vice-presidents figured in the prize list, and as I had at the formation of the Society, and also at the 1908 general meeting, and (if I mistake not) the intervening meetings also, moved "that vice-presidents be allowed the same privileges as other members, providing they reside in the County of Kent," I immediately communicated with the secretary, drawing his attention to the circumstance. Per return I received a copy of the 1908 Rules, and was surprised to find that the Headquarters' Committee, without informing the county members, had added a clause to Rule 7, giving members subscribing 10s. 6d. complete immunity in the matter of a radius limit. If this addition did nothing but put a premium on slender means I would object, but it is a complete violation of Rule 21, which distinctly stated that the Hon. Secretary shall give 14 days' notice of the proposed alteration to the officers and members. There was no mention of this addition on the agenda paper sent out in 1908; therefore this clause is invalid. A rule, widening or restricting members' privileges is constitutional and one on which every member should vote, and I think that something definite and in order should be passed, expunging this clause, and restricting the "showing" radius to Kent only. It may be said that the members have voiced their opinion on my proposition, but I doubt if one quarter knew what was wanted of them, seeing that the motion was put on the back of the balance sheet, and not on the voting paper. To me it was significant. No account was given of the number who voted for the resolution; instead, we were informed of another breach of rule in the shape of a counter to my resolution, an amendment of which no notice was given, brought up at the meeting, which cannot stand in the minutes of the Society if rules are rules. Under the circumstances I must ask that the Society shall vote on this question in proper fashion. I must admit that the apathy shown by members generally does not give the Secretary or Headquarters' Committee a high estimation of their enthusiasm, but to create that quality so necessary for the success of any organisation it is necessary to give everyone equal opportunity to assist in the management. Towards this end I suggest that the Secretary notify through the Press that motions for agenda for general meeting be sent, say, 21 days before the date of meeting, such motions to be put on agenda paper with instructions to vote for or against the motion. I regret having to run tilt against the Headquarters' Committee, and especially on a matter in which a personal friend is concerned, and I hope they may take these remarks as they are given—without prejudice, and in the interests of the Society.

INFORMATION WANTED.

SIR,—Can any of your readers inform me where I can purchase the food and water vessels with the registered No. 493,474? They are the best that I have used, and are so easy to get clean, but I cannot get any down in this part.

THE BRISTOL F.A. SHOW AND THE CAGE BIRD UNION.

SIR,—Our next show is fixed for October 27th and 28th. This is absolutely the only date for which we can get the hall, and you will appreciate the awkward position we are in with regard to the Cage Bird Union in face of the new rules recently passed, giving absolute preference to purely Cage Bird societies in the matter of dates. If the Union will not confirm this date, we shall have to consider whether or not we shall abandon our Cage Bird section and withdraw the cups.

A NOTED LINNET.

SIR,—On reading Mr. F. A. Watt's letter to CAGE BIRDS last week, I find I am not the only individual who can make a slight mistake, as I fail to see where I do "congratulate myself," but, rather, the Linnet, "The Unbeaten." Also I congratulated CAGE BIRDS on being so fortunate in having such a skilful artist as Mr. Norman. Why I mentioned the Scottish National in the few remarks which seem to have grieved Mr. Watt somewhat, was because I had a letter from a Scottish exhibitor, "not a disappointed exhibitor, either," congratulating me on my success at the Scottish National, and wanting to buy the Linnet, as he thought it the best he had seen, and thought he could win at the Crystal Palace. He thought it was the best specimen of the species there and worthy of the special for best British bird. This led me to believe he had a close run for it, as the bird that did get it did not even win in his class at the Palace. I am sorry my slight error has caused Mr. Watt some grief and trouble.

A NEW SOCIETY FOR ROCHESTER AND DISTRICT.

SIR,—A meeting of Cage Bird fanciers in Rochester and District was held on March 3rd, at Angel Hotel, Strood, and resulted in the formation of a Cage Bird Society, to be called the "Medway C.B.S." Twenty members were enrolled, and officers and committee elected as follows:—Chairman, Mr. H. W. Casemore; hon. secretary and treasurer, Mr. G. A. Acland, School House, Higham, Kent; committee, Messrs. Hunt, Giles, Smith, Wade, Robinson. It was decided to purchase a £5 cup, for most points with six nominated entries, four highest to count, to be competed for at Table Shows, and shows patronised by the society. A show of pairs, matched for breeding, and also British, was held the same evening, and it was also arranged to hold two First Feather Shows in June and August, and probably a Members' Show in December. Several members kindly contributed to the Cup fund, and other specials have been promised. It is felt that the formation of this society should give a filip to the Cage Bird Fancy in this district, and it is hoped the membership will be considerably increased during 1909. All communications should be addressed to me.

THE CAGE BIRD FANCY IN BARTON AND DISTRICT.

SIR,—On receiving CAGE BIRDS this week, and on going through the correspondence, I was pleased to see a letter from the secretary of the Barton C.B.S. to the effect that fanciers who were not conversant with the true facts may possibly be misled. Now, the other Society that has been formed is called the Barton Canary and British Bird Club, and it is not intended to lead anyone astray. What we want is that persons shall thoroughly understand which Society they ought to join. I am also pleased it was mentioned that they have no connection with our Society. They were connected, I am sorry to say, but we could never have a voice in the matter as to the choice of a room. Now, at a general meeting on February 4th, the proper time to decide on a room, ten members were present, so we decided on a room. Seven were in favour of the one suggested, and two remained neutral; so a few days afterwards by most of the members (who work at the same firm) it was decided to take another room, which they did, and then called a committee meeting to overrule the general meeting. Now, room No. 2 had been arranged for, and those who felt the grievance are evidently fanciers of many years' experience. We have members who have bred birds for over forty years. One notable veteran is Mr. Thomas Smith, of South Ferriby, who has staged birds at the Palace shows. Now, could this gentleman and others of a like experience submit to men who only have a songster or two? Six of our members, if united last breeding season, could muster close upon three hundred birds. The secretary of the Society goes on to state that our absence has not affected the welfare of their Society; then why does he keep reproaching those who have left? We have been threatened, but we smile at the idea of disaster. Their funds are swelling, we are told; I hope they are, for they will need it. As for careful management and hard work, I think those words might have been omitted.

H. CHAMBERLAIN, Hon. Sec.

PROPOSED NORTHERN YORKSHIRE CANARY CLUB.

SIR,—I should be pleased if you will allow me a small space in your valuable paper with regard to the above subject. Seeing that a Yorkshire Canary Club has been proposed for the Midlands, fanciers round here think that a Union could be formed, say, for Cumberland and including North Lancashire. Or, if a better scheme, we could extend same. We should like the opinions of other fanciers, seeing that this variety of Canary is being taken up now on all sides in the North, especially in our own town, Millom and district.

JIM PARK.

(Possibly our correspondent is unaware of the fact that a "Cumberland Yorkshire C.C." is already in existence (so far as we know), while the Northern Yorkshire Canary Club is to-day a very live body indeed.—EDITOR.)

THE SLAUGHTER OF A RARE-FEATHERED BIRD IN SALOP.

SIR,—The above-mentioned matter was brought to my notice by an intelligent country lad, who, in showing the bird, deplored its loss as much as I did, and we gave vent to rather strong expressions. It had been shot by an ignoramus who, it is a pity, had not had the gun reversed at the time. The bird was a cock pied Blackbird, in splendid condition. It had a white collar round its neck, white cheeks and a speckled head with a lovely orange-coloured beak. No artist could have excelled its beauty. Other rare-feathered birds in the same district have been promised a like fate. I can assure readers of CAGE BIRDS that I have taken action that I feel sure will prevent the others from being killed by bird murderers. I feel sure it is the wish that more of these rare-feathered birds may be seen on the show bench by a large number of readers of CAGE BIRDS, and I am sure it is the wish of myself.

WILLIAM P. BELL.

THE EXPULSIONS FROM THE SCOTTISH BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

SIR,—As late Secretary of the Scottish B.B. and M.C., I have read with great interest the recent report anent the expelled members, and from an outsider's point of view it is a matter which is very delicate to write about. I have all along detested these actions, trimming, staining, and other illegitimate practices, and whilst the club must protect its interests, it must do so justly. Three years ago, if I remember correctly, the club expelled two English members for infringement of the rules. But what did they also do in addition? They expelled others who had committed no offence, or broken any rule whatever, simply because they did not reside in Scotland. Now, sir, while clubs have every right to expel members for breaking rules, there are fanciers who also have a right to claim justice, and who at the present time in Scotland have no chance whatever to appeal to any Union for consideration of their case. We all know what human nature is—"To err is human"—and personally, I think if a fancier commits an offence once, he is doomed once and for all time to come. A Union formed for the purpose of protecting both clubs and fanciers might be the means of placing any case under suspension for a year (at the least), thus giving a reasonable time for offenders to reform. It would also help, I think, to encourage new recruits in the Fancy. Scotland by its apathetic frame of mind has no Cage Bird Union, and the sooner one is in existence the better. It would be an obstacle, also, for so-called genuine judges who, when they have a good specimen moulted, get some fancier to show it under them at a show they are judging, and who have no hesitation whatever in awarding a prize to themselves. Sooner or later Scotsmen will have to face this question of a Cage Bird Union, otherwise the hobby will naturally degenerate and many will give it up in disgust. I trust during the summer months something will be "attempted," something done, to uphift not only our weaker brothers in the Fancy, but to purify the latter also.

PROPOSED NEW SOCIETY FOR AUCKLAND AND DISTRICT.

SIR,—There is to be a meeting held on Saturday, April 3rd, at the Bridge Hotel, Newton Cap Bank, Bishop Auckland, at 7.30 o'clock, with the object of forming a Cage Bird Society. All fanciers wishing to join, please attend.

WOOD GREEN & DISTRICT F. & F.A

SIR,—Will you allow me a small space in CAGE BIRDS to draw the attention of readers to the above Society? We have started with every prospect of success, and hope to make this one of the strongest clubs in this part. Any of your readers can have full particulars from me. We have already a good number of fanciers in each section, but we want many more, and now is the time to join. The entrance is 1s., and the yearly subscription 2s. 6d.; so come along fanciers, join at once, and have a voice in the arrangements for the table and young stock shows.

T. CALLEGARI,
Hon. Secretary.

THE NESTING OF THE GOLDFINCH.

SIR,—Mr. Lloyd is, of course, quite welcome to his opinion, re the number of eggs a Goldfinch lays; but that does not alter the fact. He must not think that because I quoted the years 1907-8 that I had never seen a nest before. I have been a bird fancier for over 50 years, and have seen nests in Carmarthenshire, Suffolk, and Lincolnshire, and all with the same result—average five. Late nests (say, in October) will not be found to average so many, as the hen bird will by then be getting exhausted. If Mr. Lloyd will peruse Mr. Davies' letter on page 268 of your issue of March 13th, he will see that five was the average the Goldfinch laid in captivity, and surely they would lay as many when at liberty. I merely wrote in the first instance to prevent a novice seeking a nest in an unlikely tree, such as the ash. Every one knows the ash is about the last to put out its foliage, and Goldfinches are very cunning in finding a suitable place. They would not, at any rate, build their first nest there. Again, should the novice come across a nest with five or six eggs in it, he must not think it is not a Goldfinch's nest, but rather the contrary.

R. J. CLARK.

WHAT IS A "NOPE"?

SIR,—The word "Nope" is a name given to the Bullfinch by some people. Now, the Bullfinch being a favourite bird of mine, the word "Nope" is as repulsive to me as that of "Tupenny Joey" as applied to the Greenfinch is to the writer of the letter signed "Sunny Jim" in CAGE BIRDS. Why the name of "Nope" is given to the Bullfinch, one of our most beautiful British birds, I know not; but let us remember that a rose by any other name smells just as sweet.

WILLIAM P. BELL.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION.

SIR,—On the 5th December last I lodged a protest (with fee of 10s. 6d.) against a champion exhibiting in the Novice classes at the Horticultural Hall Show. Although it is over three months ago, I am still waiting for the verdict. The Secretary's reply to me a month ago was to the effect that owing to the dilatory action of the C.B.U. his club had decided to act on their own responsibility and uphold the protest. So whatever good the Union is I fail to see. There is not much business about it. If they woke up and made the fee about 50 per cent. less there would be a few more "Novices" pulled up and made to show in their right section.

C. MARTIN (alias George).

UPS AND DOWNS OF EXHIBITION BIRDS.

SIR,—Referring to the paragraph in your issue of February 20th, entitled "Ups and Downs" under "Echoes from the Palace," relating to Mr. Lamb's exhibit, I should like to mention that I exhibited my Redpoll-Bullfinch Hybrid in good form at the City of Wakefield exhibition, held on February 13th, and although he has had such a successful career on the show bench, he arrived back for the first time from any show (with the exception of the Horticultural Hall, where he arrived too late for judging owing to neglect on the part of the railway company) without even a card to his credit.

CHARLES J. WARD.

CINNAMON BORDER FANCIES AND THEIR COLOUR.

SIR,—I have been deeply interested in the letters in your last few issues signed by "Cinnamon Border" and "Your Reporter." "Your Reporter" has given plain facts in reply, and for the benefit of both writers and Fancy generally, I am in a position to give you details as they appear in catalogues dating from 1893 to 1898. These details verify your reporter's statements, and plainly prove that Cinnamon Border Fancy Canaries are of old standing. In 1893 you will notice that I was 3rd at Hawick with a self-cinnamon cock, and in my opinion he was a better colour than those I have seen exhibited this year. The catalogues in my possession are for Hawick shows, and Hawick at that time was considered the most prominent of Border Fancy shows. The following are the details:—

In 1893, one class, 13 entries:—1, 2, John Maltman (Langholm); 3, John Dixon (Wigton); 4, T. W. Dickson (Selkirk); vhc, Walter Smith (Hawick); hc, W. and S. Lamb (Kelso); c, J. Dodds (Hawick). In 1894, two classes, 12 entries and 5 entries respectively: 1, W. Smith; 2, Thomas Arnot; 3, Ballantyne and Sons; 4, A. MacMillan; vhc, J. Dixon; hc, J. Deardon. In the second class the results were: 1, T. Martin; 2, Douglas; 3, W. Smith; 4, G. Edmond. In 1895, one class, nine entries:—1, 4, T. Arnot; 2, G. Edmond; 3, W. Smith; vhc, W. Bell; hc, W. Kyle; c, G. Alexander. In 1896, one class, 12 entries:—1, Patterson and Hannah; 2, 3, W. Smith; 4, T. Arnot; vhc, J. McLaughlan; hc, J. Waugh; c, R. Elliott. In 1897, one class, 15 entries:—1, Patterson and Hannah; 2, T. Martin; 3, Arnot and Jamieson; 4, vhc, W. Smith; hc, J. McLaughlan; c, R. Armstrong. In 1898, one class and four entries:—1, T. Martin; 2, W. Smith; 3, Arnot and Jamieson; 4, W. Bell; vhc, Bennet and Rutherford; hc, Patterson and Hannah; c, Laidlow. I must apologise for taking up so much of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, which I wish every success.

THE EARLY BIRDS.

SIR,—Seeing the correspondence in CAGE BIRDS concerning early hatched Canaries, I write to inform you that I have two pairs that started sitting in February last, and hatched off 8 young on March 11th and 12th, in an outdoor bird-room. I have not used any heat. On March 3rd it was only 19 degrees out-of-doors. I have been a reader of your valuable paper, I may say, for five years.

G. STARES.

Romford.

SIR,—Seeing that the breeding season is at hand, I had a look round amongst a few fanciers. One has three young ones and four other hens sitting. I went a little further, and saw a hen feeding two brown Linnet-Mules, and then I went down to the Fleece Hotel, Bishop Auckland, where I found four Goldfinch-Mules a week old, and they are doing well.

H. HUNTER.

SIR,—I read with interest the remarks in CAGE BIRDS under this heading by Mr. A. Hare. It will not fail to interest this gentleman and other of your readers to know that I have a Finch-Mule a month old and four Finch Mules fourteen days old and all thriving and doing well. I had a nest of same on January 20th last, but through my not looking after them they died. They were from the same mother that has the four Mules now doing well. I have a nest to be hatched on March 20th.

T. ALLEN.

SIR,—In your last issue I was much interested in reading of the Early Birds. I might say that I had three Yorkshires hatched on the 22nd of January, and three on the 12th, and four on the 13th of February, and all are doing well. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

JOHN PEARSON.

THE BORDER FANCY CANARY IN THE SOUTH.

SIR,—Your correspondent Mr. Smith seems to have been paying great attention to the "Wee Gems" on the coloured plate presented with CAGE BIRDS' "Birthday Number," and my remarks on same. To my mind, he strikes out for the true type of a Border Fancy, and at the same time with a good show of cause, as I know from letters received from fanciers in the south that poor birds are continually in the money with some judges. And nearly all my correspondents wish for the more modern type of bird, which we in Scotland try to breed, to come more to the front. I therefore trust that now Mr. Smith has opened up the question with his remarks on the type wanted, breeders generally will give their opinions on the type of bird they admire and want to produce. They might also tell us whether they think the thick-necked type of bird should be discarded. As I have already said, to my mind a bird that does not show freedom of head and neck is quite away from the standard of our club model, and ought to be discarded. Further, I have no hesitation in saying that this is the point of excellence wherein a high-class Border Fancy takes its place as one of the most graceful birds we have on the show-bench at the present day. The graceful movement of its head draws new recruits to our ranks every year. I hope to see a friendly discussion on the subject for the future good of our wee pets.

J. PATTERSON.

SIR,—The letter in last week's issue, by Mr. J. Smith upon the type of Border Fancy Canary required, comes at a very opportune time. The variety is making some headway down south, and as soon as the weather breaks, breeding will commence. The success of any variety depends almost solely upon the correct matching of the birds, and the Border Fancy Canary is no exception. Their simplicity of contour, and their smallness and fineness of points, make them difficult subjects to handle, both in the breeding-room and upon the show bench, and to do them justice in the latter position a man must be a breeder and lover of the variety. Dealing with the recently published coloured plate in CAGE BIRDS, J. S. says: "I believe, however, they would not do much winning in the South." Possibly not, nor would they at one Northern show I visited this season; but they would have been "in it" at Glasgow, Gateshead, and the Scottish National, and, after all, these are the great centres of the variety, and, what is more to the point, men are appointed to judge them who are breeders and experts, who thoroughly understand and know every point, and who have the delicate touch required to handle them to perfection. I would advise Mr. J. Smith and other Southern novices (for I presume he is one) to procure a copy of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, if they have not already done so, and in it they will find a printed standard of the variety. Let them study this, and pair up accordingly, and if they breed a bird or two like it, and some of our judges fail to "know them," they can select their shows. In time, as the variety increases in popularity, other judges will be found, and breeders will have the satisfaction of knowing they kept to the right path, and will have the fewer "crank points" to breed out.

THE BORDER CITY (CARLISLE) ORNITHOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

SIR,—The first general meeting, since the formation of the above-named new society, took place at its headquarters on March 10th, and was very well attended. The membership now is over forty members. The Chairman outlined fully the reasons for the formation of the society, and the intentions of the committee for its furtherance. The officials for this year are: President, The Rev. Dr. Barker, Dean of Carlisle; secretary, Mr. Jas. Chaplow, 20, James Street, Carlisle; treasurer, Mr. G. Davidson; show manager, Mr. T. Robson; committee, Messrs. Holmes, W. Davidson, D. Bunting, Thomlinson, J. Robson, J. Robinson, F. Bell, A. Davidson, and J. C. Bell. The first annual show will take place on October 27th and 28th, and the judges appointed are Messrs. J. Robson (London) for Canaries, and W. Nicholson (Stockton) for British and Foreign birds. Suggestions and questions being asked for, discussions took place on various matters, and the outcome was: (1) A pair show to be held at headquarters on March 18th, Messrs. Holmes and O'Neill promising medals for most points in Canary and British and Foreign bird sections respectively; (2) an annual supper at a date to be fixed by the Committee; (3) a series of Rambles to take place in the summer under the guidance of that old "Rambler," Mr. Geo. Davidson, for the study of wild birds in their natural haunts; and (4) a nest feather show at a date to be fixed by the Committee. The enthusiasm shown by the members in all matters augurs well for the new Border City Society.

SOME QUESTIONS FOR LARK FANCIERS.

SIR,—I have always taken a great interest in all kinds of birds, but I have never kept the Softbill birds until lately. I received an invitation to go to a Lark singing contest. I had always said that the Lark never ought to be caged. Since going to the contest, however, I have changed my opinions. The Larks I have seen on the markets or in bird shops have usually been of a wild nature, trying to get out. These, however, are not the kind of Larks that the Lark fanciers take to. I am proud to say that if a Lark does not settle down in a week's time, it is usually given its liberty. The Lark singing Fancy is more interesting than Canary breeding at times. I have seen Larks as happy as could be and singing anywhere. I have decided to try my hand at keeping Larks. Could some Lark fancier, therefore, kindly tell me what to feed the birds on, when getting them ready for contest singing? Have they to be covered up? If so, for how long prior to the contest? Why do the birds when singing in good order stop to shake their heads, as if they had something fast in their throat? Is it as well to have sand in the bottom of the cage? Sometimes I have seen the birds stop and shake themselves in the sand. Is it wish to keep a meat box on the cages, as I have seen the birds stop to pick at the meat? It is well known that every Lark fancier has his own little secrets. Perhaps there is a Lark fancier amongst your readers who is not afraid to give them away? At one time I had some good birds (not Larks) for local shows. I entered my birds at two or three shows, but after the first show I always got my entries back. Fanciers said, "What is the use of my showing when I know you will win?" It will be the same at Lark contests. If one man wins a few times he will soon be barred or handicapped.

Woodcock in Scotland.

Years ago the Woodcock was regarded simply as a migratory bird in Scotland, but from time to time eggs have been found in the more southern countries, so that now there can be no doubt about its occupying the same place as a breeding species in the north as it does in England and Ireland.
